The question arose as to what should be Edgerton's next step. He had made the proposition for the purpose of meeting in a friendly way one whose beauty he so ardently admired, relying on the fact that he could forfeit the commission and no harm be done. But now that his offer had been accepted it occurred to him that to back out would be a slight to the young lady. He did not consider such a marriage best for either her or him. Signorina Conti's connections were all Italian, while his were American. He would have to take her away from her native land, for which she would always pine, and, as to making Italy his home, it was not to be considered. But how withdraw from the arrangement without appearing to put a slight upon the young lady?

Edgerton was nearsighted and wore glasses. Rather he wore a monocle, for he had lived in England, and at that time monocles were more common than they are now. He called on his marriage broker and said to him:

"The signorina, signor, has nothing to do with the matter. It is all in the hands of her parents."

This made Edgerton feel easier in his conscience. He had no especial objection to the part he was playing, provided no one was concerned except the old folks.

"Well, then," he continued, "I desire that you inform Signor Conti that I am not a perfect man. I wear a glass eye."

"I do not think," said the broker meditatively, "that this will prevent the marriage so far as the parents are concerned. Signorina Conti may object to you on that account, but, after all, she must obey her parents."

"That will not suit me at all," replied Edgerton. "I wish a written statement from the signorina that she marries me because she loves me and with the knowledge that I wear a glass eye. Unless you will bring me a statement to that effect signed by her I will consider the matter off."

Edgerton convinced the broker that unless he followed his direction he would lose his fee. He therefore delivered the message to the young lady without her parents' knowledge.

The signorina had an aunt who had lost one of her eyes and wore a glass eye in its place. Seeing the article removed at times and replaced in its socket had been so repugnant to the girl that she could not stand the prospect of living with a man who was in a similar condition. She took the responsibility on herself of releasing the applicant for her hand.

Edgerton not only paid the brokerage, but sent a handsome present to the young lady. He didn't reveal the fact, however, that his glass eye was worn outside a natural one.

BRITISH HOUSE OPENS.

Liquor Question Will Be Decided By the Commons.

LONDON, April 15. — Parliament re-assembled yesterday, with a fair attendance. The first hour was devoted principally to questions concerning the war.

Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under-Secretary of War, made the announcement that there had been 1,546 promotions to commissions from the ranks since the beginning of the war. He also gave what was regarded as a possible clue to the intentions of the Government concerning the drink question. He said that beer was the only intoxicant now permitted in the canteens and that it was not the intention of the authorities to prohibit its sale.

Premier Asquith announced that the House would only sit for three days each week. He also stated in reply to a suggestion that the members ought to follow the lead of King George and abstain from alcohol; that the suppression of alcoholic liquors at the palace of Westminster was a matter for the House and not the Government to decide.

The British Government has decided against placing cotton on the contraband list. Mr. Neil Primrose, Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs, on behalf of the Foreign Office, said that after careful consideration it had been found that the military advantages to be gained by declaring cotton contraband were insufficient to render such a step expedient.

SEE IF THE CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

Look at the tongue, mother. If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of imitations sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Mrs. Mack Thomas, of Pittsburg was shot to death yesterday by her 13-year-old son because she forbade him to take some of his plaything out of doors.

Frank Johnston, of Trenton, Ont., who accompanied the first contingent to Salisbury Plain and who was in the hospital for several weeks, has returned home.

Engineer Edward Ronan was instantly killed yesterday in Stratford when a shunting engine side-swiped the locomotive cab into which Ronan was climbing.

The Militia Department has decided to withhold $10 for a period of six months from pay of men enlisted after March 1st to provide for civilian clothing if a man is discharged.

Victriano Huerta, former Provisional President of Mexico, issued a signed statement yesterday in New York denying a published report that he had been driven out of Spain.

Fire which broke out at 4.15 yesterday morning destroyed the mill of John Piggott & Sons, a large lumber firm with plants in Windsor and Chatham. The loss is estimated at $40,000.

A German aeroplane, which flew over the Dutch Island of Walcheren yesterday and dropped a box of papers, at Middleburg was shot to earth by Dutch soldiers and two airmen were interned.

D. J. Hughes Is Dead

St. Thomas Man Was Judge For Over Half a Century

ST. THOMAS, April 15. — David John Hughes, aged 95, who was for over fifty years judge of Elgin County, died at his residence in St. Thomas at an early hour yesterday. He was born in Kingsbridge, Devon, England, 1820, being the son of Rev. David Hughes. In 1832 the judge's father came with his family to lower Canada and two weeks after reaching Montreal died of cholera at Coteau du Lac, and the widow returned to England with a daughter. The judge was adopted by Gideon Ackland, of Perth, Ont., barrister. He entered the employ of Hon. Malcolm Cameron of The Perth Courier, working as "printers' devil" until May, 1836.

Mr. Hughes then went to live with John Wilson, the late justice of the High Court, who educated him for the law. He was called to the Bar in 1842. During the rebellion of 1837 he joined the London troop of cavalry. He was appointed judge of the county and Surrogate Court in Elgin in October, 1853, and he opened the first court in St. Thomas in November, 1853, and he was retired on account of his age in 1903.

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE OFF.

Premiers of Dominions Decided Not To Meet In War Year.

LONDON, April 15.—The Colonial Secretary was asked in the Commons yesterday whether he would be able to give any information over the postponement of the Imperial Conference, and replied, in part:

"Early in December last I was made aware privately that Mr. Fisher, Prime Minister of Australia, was in favor of a meeting of the Imperial Conference during and in spite of the war. I communicated this fact also privately by telegraph to the Prime Ministers of all the other dominions, and they unanimously agreed with us that the holding of the normal conference this year during the hostilities would be difficult, if not impossible. In two cases at least it was said the attendance of Ministers was impracticable. I then informed the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth that in view of the practical unanimity of opinion we hoped he would recognize its force. He replied that he had no wish to press the matter further."

Fatal Explosion In Vancouver.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 15.—As the result of a dynamite explosion in the Hindu section of the city on Tuesday night on Third avenue, Mutah Singh is dead and two other Hindus wounded. Over a dozen houses were shaken, several badly damaged, and hardly a whole pane of glass left on Third avenue for a distance of two blocks from where the explosion occurred. The house itself was almost destroyed. No arrests have been made.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

TAKING NO CHANCES.

BASEL, Switzerland, April 15.—The German military authorities, according to advices reaching this city, are reconstructing the formidable fortress Istein, five miles from here on the Rhine.

The barracks inside the fortress have been completely pulled down and extensive underground barracks to take their places have been dug and quarried out of the earth. Furthermore, the River Rhine is being dammed so that when certain sluice gates are closed, wide stretches of the surrounding country can be flooded.

Observers in Basel are expressing the opinion that these preparations are in anticipation of a French offensive being successful.

Dam Blown Up.

KINGSTON, April 15. — For the third time in succession, parties unknown have with the used of dynamite totally destroyed the dam at Jackson's Mills, at the village of Millburn, near this city. It is regarded as a case of spite by Mr. Jackson, the owner. The dam was blown up late Tuesday night. The people in the district heard the noise, but the offenders made good their escape.

Attack on British Repulsed.

LONDON, April 15. — The Turks, according to an official report issued by the India Office, who had collected 11,000 regulars, with 28 guns and some 12,000 Kurds and Arabs, attacked the British positions at Kurna, Ahwas and Shaiba in Mesopotamia on March 12. They were driven off, however, leaving 300 prisoners and two guns in the hands of the British. The British casualties, according to the report, were 92 men wounded.

Hollweg Is Against It

German Chancellor Opposed to Submarine Warfare Plan

LONDON, April 15.—A correspondent cabling from Rotterdam says:

"From one who is in close touch with diplomatic circles in Berlin I learn there is a serious difference of opinion regarding the submarine warfare against mercantile shipping.

"At one time there was a definite split in the Government. The scheme originated by Admiral von Tirpitz met with strong opposition from Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg, who held the view that the advantages gained would be quite incommensurate with the detrimental effect upon neutral countries. Admiral von Tirpitz pressed the scheme on the ground that the only people whose feelings should be taken into consideration were the Germans themselves, and in view of the German failure on the high seas and the resulting annihilation of Germany's mercantile marine interests, something must be done to show the people that they still possessed some sort of sea power."

Dr. Roche Assails ex-Minister With Accusations of Misdeeds of Several Years Ago—House Prorogues This Afternoon —Soldiers' Votes Bill Passes House and Goes tothe Senate

OTTAWA, April 15.—Parliament will prorogue this afternoon at four o'clock. At last night's sitting of the Senate a communication was read from the secretary of the Governor-General, announcing that the Duke of Connaught would attend at the Senate Chamber at that hour for the purpose of proroguing Parliament.

Before prorogation, however, it is understood that the Prime Minister will make an important announcement respecting the evidence taken before the public accounts committee and the Conservative members of Parliament involved therein.

The Soldiers' Votes Bill has passed the Commons. It went to the Senate last night. Just before the noon adjournment the last Opposition amendment was refused by the Government, and the measure given a third reading with certain additional amendments drafted by the Minister of Justice. One of these provides for scrutineers to be named by commanding officers who will pass along the Canadian line while the vote is being taken.

Considerable opposition is being manifested in the Upper Chamber to the bill.

The chamber of the House resounded for hours last evening with charges brought against Hon. Frank Oliver, ex-Minister of the Interior. They included not only those made public by the Ferguson Commission but two others brought to the attention of the House by Hon. W. J. Roche, Minister of the Interior.

Hon. Dr. Roche made two direct and definite charges against Hon. Frank Oliver. He accused the ex-Minister of collecting from a tenant named Willis a royalty for coal mined upon property, the surface rights of which the ex-Minister held, but the mineral rights of which still vested in the crown. He read the House receipts and letters to Willis from the ex-Minister during the months of 1903, and demanded on behalf of the crown restitution from Mr. Oliver of the moneys so collected.

The second charge made by the Minister involved several parties. According to Dr. Roche, a man named Christopher Fahrni purchased twenty-three sections of the Michel Indian Reserve from the late Government for the sum of $25,000, to be paid in five annual installments of $5,000 each. Fahrni made an initial payment of approximately $5,000, but failed to meet additional payments as they fell due, and was threatened with cancellation of the sale and forfeiture of his payment. The Minister read a letter dated June 2, 1910, from the Department over which Mr. Oliver then presided, notifying Fahrni of cancellation.

Hon. Arthur Meighen, R. H. Bennett and others followed up the charges against the ex-Minister, coupling with him J. C. Turriff (Assiniboia), Robert Cruise (Dauphin) and other Liberals.

Two Wells May Be Closed Up

A well that has been in constant use for upwards of thirty-five years, is threatened with extinction by the Board of Health. It may be used for a stock well for an indefinite time, and according to a resolution that was passed at a meeting of the Board held yesterday afternoon, may be closed at any time. This well which is located in the yard of the Palace Hotel, Hunter Street, together with a well situated in the yard of the Montgomery House, Simcoe Street, are claimed to be contaminated. Fears for the quality of water contained in the wells, following the recent outbreak of typhoid at the Y. W. C. A., resulted in an analysis being made.

For Watering Stock.

Mr. F. Blastorah, proprietor of the Palace Hotel, appeared before the Board, with the request that he be permitted to use the well for watering stock. He agreed to placard the well and take such steps as might be necessary to curtail the use of the water for domestic purposes. He doubted whether the well was contaminated. It was cleaned out thoroughly once and sometimes twice a year, and had been in use for over thirty-five years. He had never heard of a case of sickness due to the use of the water taken from the well. Tap water was used in the house.

Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer, said that the water in the wells of both the Palace Hotel and Montgomery House was not first class. They were located in a public place, and for that reason steps should be taken to protect the public. Any wells similarly situated should also be done away with.

Dr. Amys, chairman of the Board, said that any well located in the central part of the city was unsafe. He gave a brief exposition of the previousness of the soil as found in the central port of the city.

"It would be better if all the wells were closed up," said Dr. McPherson.

It was decided to have Sanitary Inspector Spence placard the two wells referred to and notify the owners to prepare for water connection with the city, as the well may be closed any time.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends stomach misery, indigestion in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepcia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a Glass of Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers You

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

CONSTRUCT SEWER ON WARE STREET

Despite Objection of Number of Residents—Lafayette Avenue Said to be in an Insanitary Condition

The construction of a sewer on Ware Street will be proceeded with despite a cross petition to the contrary. There are twenty-two residents on the street. Eleven of them are in favour of the proposed sewer and eleven are against. The matter was brought up at last night's meeting of the Board of Works.

Ald. Green said that it was hardly fair to deprive a number of residents of the service because a few were satisfied to get along without it.

It was decided to proceed with the construction of the sewer on Ware Street, in accordance with the request of the Board of Health.

Ald. Edgar thought that a sewer should be constructed on Lafayette Avenue. The insanitary condition of the street was complained of from time to time.

The attention of the Board of Health will be drawn to the fact that sanitary conditions on Jackson Street are unsatisfactory. That a sewer has been constructed and as yet the houses have not been connected with it. Also the desirability of constructing a sewer on Lafayette Avenue.

The Bell Telephone Company's request for permission to erect a number of poles was granted.

A Wail From Monaghan.

A communication was received from the municipality of North Monaghan, requesting that the city cease drawing gravel from the township, and inquiring as to who would level King George Street after the construction of the outfall sewer.

City Engineer Parsons said that six or eight loads of sand was used for sanding sidewalks and that as far as the filling in on King George Street was concerned the city was giving the municipality far more than it was taking away. The township authorities will be notified of the city's intentions to grade King George Street to the top of the manholes.

Mr. Curtis waited upon the Board in connection with the manufacture of concrete pipe for the city. He was instructed to take the matter up with the City Engineer, who would supply the necessary specifications.

The Board also decided to proceed with the construction of a sewer on the boundary road between Charlotte and King Streets. The assessed to be levied will be decided upon when the work is completed.

80-Foot Long Sea Monster

NEW ORLEANS, April 14.— With the head of an elephant, tusks measuring five feet, and a body resembling nothing else ever seen to come out of the sea, the body of an eighty-foot monster has been discovered off Isle Denier, the scene of Lafcadio Hearn's novel, "Chita."

The following telegram was sent by G. J. Labarre and A. M. Dupont, planters, to President Wilson Representative Broussard, the Smithsonian Institute and the Louisiana Conservation Commission:

"It is our pleasure to announce that Louisiana has furnished to history and science the most wonderful discovery of centuries — a levithian eighty feet long, sixteen feet wide and weighing approximately ninety tons.

"It has the head of an elephant; eyes and jaws of a crocodile; the tongue is of jelly-like construction, porous, with suckers, and shaped like the trunk of an elephant; the tusks protrude in a straight line five feet and are eighteen inches wide at the jaw, and the thing apparently was a vegetarian."

A Swedish method for utilising peat for fuel pulverises it and blows the powder into a furnace by an air blast, combustion taking place while it is in suspension.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 14.—In one of the most excited markets since the beginning of the war wheat today shot upward nearly 10 cents a bushel, and finished wild 3 3-4c to 4c above last night. The trade was stampeded by fear that virtually exhausted reserves thruout the world would have to be faced before the first of the new crop in the U.S. could be gathered. Other staples hardened with wheat but the gains were comparatively small—corn 3-4 to 1 1-4c, oats 1-2 to 5-8c and provisions 2 1-2 to 7 1-2c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 14.—Futures opened firmer, being ⅛c to ¼c up for wheat, unchanged for oats and ⅛c to ¼c higher for flax. Exporters bought freely. Crop conditions are reported favorable.

In cash circles there was little trade, spring and seaboard being the feature of the moment.

Inspections on Tuesday were 240 cars, as against 390 last year, and in sight today were 240 cars.

Wheat futures closed 3⅝c to 3¾ higher, oats ⅝c to ¾c advance and flax ⅞c to 1⅛c advance.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 14.—The enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today was again good, but owing to the sharp advance in prices in the Winnipeg market and continued scarcity of ocean grain room from this port for May-June shipment no business resulted. There was no improvement in the local market for coarse grains, prices being unchanged. Spring wheat flour was more active, May-June shipment being dealt in. Millfeed is fairly active. Butter steady. Eggs firm. Cheese firm.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 14.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.58¾; No. 1 northern, $1.54¾ to $1.58¾; No. 2 northern, $1.49¾ to $1.53¾; May, $1.53¾.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Colour and Lustre to Hair

You can turn grey, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost overnight if you'll get a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Millions of bottles of this old, famous Sage Tea Recipe are sold annually, says a well-known druggist here, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has been applied.

Those whose hair is turning grey, becoming faded, dry, scraggly and thin have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the grey hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful—all dandruff goes, scalp itching and falling hair stops.

This is the age of youth. Grey-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur to-night and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

Don't Cough Your Throat Sore "Nerviline" Will Cure You Quickly

THE ANNOYANCE OF A BAD COUGH SOOTHED AWAY IN ONE DAY.

Nothing so bad for the throat as coughing, and nothing half so annoying as to have some one near by that is hacking, sneezing, or constantly clearing the throat.

Rub on Nerviline—it will save you all further pain and distress. Even one good rub with this soothing, penetrating remedy will bring the finest relief, will take out that rasping soreness, will stop that irritating tickle that makes you want to cough so much.

Nerviline isn't something new. It has a record of forty years of wonderful success behind it.

In rubbing on Nerviline you use something safe, reliable, and sure to cure. Its action is marvellous. The way it sinks in through the tissues—the way it penetrates to the seat of the congestion is really a wonder.

For chronic colds, coughs, or sore throat you cant beat this trusty old family remedy. Its name spells cure for any sort of pain in the joints or muscles. Try it for rheumatism, rub it on for sciatica or lumbago, test it out for neuralgia or headache—in every case you'll find amazing virtue and curative power in Nerviline.

Most families keep the large 50c. bottle always handy on the shelf; trial size 25c., at all dealers in medicine, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

BRITISH CENSOR SUPREME.

Now Controls All Sources of Allies' War News.

LONDON, April 14.—England now controls all sources of the allies' war news, not only in her own country, but also in Russia and France. The English censor is supreme.

A few weeks ago reports were current that a German submarine had cut the lines of the French cable company running from France to the United States. This was incorrect. England had taken the final step to shut off all news, except that which passed through her censors hands.

For several months the English Government officials were irritated by the fact that considerable news from Petrograd and Paris reached America without passing through London. Some military secrets, which the British War Office had concealed were revealed.

FOURTEEN ARE KILLED.

DETROIT, April 15. — At least fourteen persons were killed and 30 were injured late yesterday in a collision between a Detroit street car and a Detroit, Toledo & Ironton Railroad train. The accident occurred at the western city limits.

The dead include: Miss Gail; Gladys George, school teacher aged 26, Portland avenue, Detroit; Mrs. Zepak Wagoras, aged 30, Pulaski avenue, Detroit; Louis Kornich, aged 14; eight unidentified women and two unidentified men.

Most of the dead are foreigners. Four of them are women.

Several were crushed in the splintered mass of steel and wood, and it was several hours before they could be extricated and their exact number known.

COULD NOT GO TEN STEPS FOR THE PAIN IN HIS KIDNEYS.

When you get a pain in the back you may rest assured that it comes from derangement of the kidneys, for were there not something wrong with the kidneys the back should be strong and well.

Doan's Kidney Pills regulate the kidneys, and there is no further excuse for any kidney trouble to exist. What more needs to be said? While Doan's Kidney Pills are not a "balm for every ill that flesh is heir to," they are a positive, never-failing remedy for every disease that has its inception in the improper action in those delicate little filters of the blood, the kidneys.

Mr. Adelard Cleroux, Eganville, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for four years. They were so bad, at times, I could not go ten steps for the pain they caused me. My doctor could not do me any good. A friend advised me to use Doan's Kidney Pills. I bought five boxes, and now I have been cured for over three years. I will recommend them to whoever may be suffering from kidney trouble."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

BELGIANS DRIVE GERMANS OVER THE YSER CANAL

AN AERIAL RAID ON LONDON NEXT?

Special to The Examiner:

Fierce fighting has taken place in the immediate vicinity of Diedrachten. The German wounded are arriving day and night in large numbers at Roulers and Dixmude. All are extremely badly wounded, and many have bayonet thrusts in the head and back.

According to reliable sources, the Belgians succeeded at an early hour on Thursday morning in pushing the Germans back over the Yser canal. At one point the Belgians even managed to set foot on the opposite bank themselves, near South Driedrachten, and numbers of German men and officers are reported to have been made prisoners. Several machine guns were also captured.

On the left bank of the Yser there is not one German at liberty. The Gerdmans have all flown, leaving every wounded and dead German in the hands of the Belgians.

LONDON, April 16.—By Ed. L. Keen.—For the third time in forty hours German aircraft this afternoon crossed the North Sea, and bombarded British towns.

The dockyards at Sheerness and the British naval station at Chatham, are believed to have been the main objective of this recent air raid. The Germans also attempted to drop bombs on the camp of the Royal Dublin Fusiliers, near Sittingbourne, but were driven off by a hot fire after hurling one explosive in an orchard 200 yards from the camp. In neither of the Kent towns bombarded this afternoon was there any panic, according to the reports to the Admiralty. At Faversham the populace flocked into the streets and watched the taube with the greatest curiosity. Bits of one bomb exploded near a hedge at the outskirts of Faversham and were quickly collected and then placed on exhibition in a shop.

Convinced that London is to be the next object of attack the Municipal Authorities, after a conference with the Admiralty officials, this afternoon issued a call for volunteers to patrol the roads leading into the capital at night. The appeal was particularly directed to the motor clubs which were requested to urge their members to form volunteer auto patrols to watch for Zeppelins and aeroplanes.

Two German Taubes took part in the attack on Sittingbourne this afternoon. They dropped bombs on Grecourt Part, in the outskirts of the town. Anti-air craft guns sent a fusilade in their direction, and the Germans fled, pursued by three British aeroplanes. One British aviator was close on to the heels of the Taubes, and exchanging shots with the Germans, when they disappeared from sight.

An unconfirmed report from Chatham said that one of the Germans had been brought down by rifle shots fired by the Royal Dublin Fusiliers. Despatches declared that a thrilling battle two thousand feet above the railway leading from Sittingbourne to Sheerness was reported by the villages along the route, the British aviators attempting to cut off the Germans' escape to the North Sea.

PARIS, April 16.—The suggestion has been made to the French Ministry of Marine that each ship sunk by the German submarines be replaced by a vessel of corresponding size taken from among the 278 German trenches, north of Ypres; all other points were comparatively consideration but the consent and co-operation of Great Britain would be necessary.

HUNGARY PARLIAMENT

VENICE, April 16.—The Hungarian parliament has been summoned for a spring session beginning about the middle of April. It is stated that any bills to be brought before Parliament must be submitted to the king before they come before the House; this rule is being adopted in order to prevent any bills being introduced and passed unexpectedly. Various other novel rules have been proclaimed to prevent the sitting developing any untoward incidents.

GENERAL ALDERSON A MAN

TORONTO, April 16.—Speaking of the recent Easter visit to the trenches of the Bishop of London, Colonel Hal R. Gordon, with the Third Battalion, First Contingent, says:

"His address was short, and to the point. He told us in brief that we were fighting for civilization against barbarism, for liberty against tyrannical force, for Christianity against paganism. He impressed us as being a human being instead of a church dignitary. General Alderson told us briefly that our work in the trenches had been satisfactory, and that he was sure that we would come up to the scratch in the more trying work to come. I think our cheers could have been heard in Berlin. There is no doubt that a better man than General Alderson could not have been found to command a bunch like our division. He's a man, too—not a ramrod with a uniform on."

TO RAID ENGLAND

LONDON, April 16.—Count Zeppelin has arrived at Cuxhaven for the purpose of directing the expected aerial raid on London, according to the Amsterdam despatches to-day. Several Zeppelins have been transported to the German flying bases at Emden and Cuxhaven, and the enemy's airmen are displaying the greatest activity.

The report that three Zeppelins participated in the attack early today is apparently confirmed. The despatches from the coast of Holland say three Zeppelins flew over the Islands late yesterday, headed for England.

German aviators bombarded Faversham and Sittingbourne, within 40 miles of London, this afternoon, doing no damage.

HE WANTED TO BE OUTSIDE LIKE THE BIRDS

"Sunny Jim" Wilson Made a Strong Plea Not to Be Locked Up This Summer But Magistrate Turned Deaf Ear

GOT SIX MONTHS

The countenance of James Wilson did not look very "sunny" this morning when he faced the prospect of a six months' term in the Ontario Reformatory from Magistrate Dumble.

"Sunny" Jim was charged with vagrancy, but he asserted with a few tears, called upon for the occasion, that he had work to do and if he was put on the blacklist and given another chance he would be sure to make good this time. A policeman found him asleep in a shed on Hunter Street yesterday. He was so drunk he could hardly speak.

"Give me a chance," pleaded James. "It is summer time and I like to be out with the birds. I was locked up all last summer."

"I got an awful beating up yesterday your Worship, for nothing at all," remarked the accused in referring to a discoloured optic.

Wilson, according to the police, has been going around back yards in the business section of the city and taking stuff and selling it to the junk dealers. In this manner he got money enough to buy drink. Complaints have been made that some of the junk he gathered was of value to the owners.

He will not trouble anyone around here for the next six months, which he will spend in the Ontario Reformatory.

No Water on Walk.

Three young men pleaded guilty to charges of sweeping the sidewalks on George Street without first wetting or dampening the surface. They were employes at different stores and forgot that they were in the prohibited district.

The fine was made light, as the Chief explained that he had them up more as a reminder that the by-law was in force. He did not want to be hard on them and believed this advertisement of the by-law would more than serve the end.

Each offender was given ten days in which to pay a fine of $2.00.

Child Was Out Late.

Albert Jackson allowed his little daughter, who is thirteen years of age, to be on the streets after 9 p.m., unaccompanied by an adult. He came in for a little advice from the Magistrate this morning and the case was allowed to stand over. If it does not occur again the case will be dismissed.

Mr. Jackson was very indignant that his child should be singled from a crowd of youngsters whom he claimed were out, too. He wanted to know why the other parents were not in court this morning also. However, he was told that he had all he could do to look after his own children.

The law provides that a parent or guardian who allows a child to be on the streets after 9 p.m., unaccompanied by an adult, shall be liable to a fine of $1 for the first offence, $2 for the second, and $5 for the third.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

Pte. Harry Nicholls of the 39th Battalion Will Be Buried With Full Military Honours

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Special to The Examiner:

The funeral of Pte. Harry Nicholls of the 57th detachment of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., who died at Belleville yesterday morning will take place tomorrow afternoon. There will be a short service at the family residence at 1 o'clock, conducted by the Salvation Army, after which the body will be taken to the armouries, where there will be another brief service at 2 o'clock. From this point the funeral will be in charge of the military authorities. The band of the 57th Regiment will head the cortege to the Little Lake cemetery, and D Company of the 57th Regiment, of which the deceased was a member, will form the escort. A firing party from the 39th Battalion will come up from Belleville to-morrow in charge of Sergt-Major Dunkerley, to take part in the ceremony. In addition it is expected that all members of the overseas units who are home on leave from their various headquarters will march in the procession, as well as all members of the Regiment who can do so.

The body of the young soldier was brought home from Belleville on the 5.30 train last evening in charge of two privates of the 39th. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls returned on the same train.

Escorted to Train.

Speaking of Pte. Nicholls' death the Belleville Intelligencer says:

At an early hour this morning Private Harry Nicholls, a member of the 39th Battalion, C. E. F., mobilized in this city, died from an attack of spinal meningitis. Deceased was nineteen years of age and enlisted at Peterborough, where his parents reside. He had been ill for some days and received every possible attention. This is the third death that has occurred within the ranks since the battalion has been established in the city. The remains of Nicholls were taken "to Tickell & Sons' undertaking establishment, and after being prepared for burial were this afternoon conveyed to Peterborough for interment. A military escort accompanied the remains to the railway station.

At a few minutes after one o'clock the cortege moved from Tickell & Sons' undertaking establishment to the G.T.R. depot. The members of the 39th Battalion paraded in full force under command of Col. Preston and presented a fine appearance. A firing party preceded the hearse and was followed by the Fifteenth Regimental Band playing a solemn dirge. The hearse containing the remains was draped with a large Union Jack. The bearers here were Privates Raymond, Worrall, Lightheart, Leach, Gummer and Sergeant, all members of the Peterborough contingent and comrades of the deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholls, parents of the deceased, were the chief mourners.

Sergts. G. Farrance, A. E. Paterson T. Fairbrass and E. Morley of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, who have been home on leave, returned to Ottawa last night.

THE PLANS FOR THE SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT WERE ADOPTED

Provincial Board of Health Will Hear and Consider any Objection That May be Made as to the Location of the Plant.

SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING

Another phase of the sewerage disposal scheme was reached last evening when at a special meeting of the City Council, the following resolutions were passed:

Moved by Ald. Green, seconded by Ald. J. J. Duffus, that whereas, the construction of a common sewer and the extension of the sewage system of the City of Peterborough as shown upon the duplicate plans and specifications now before the Council of the said city.

And whereas, it is necessary and expedient in the interests of public health, that the construction of the said common sewer and the extension of the sewage system of the City of Peterborough be continued into the municipality of the Township of Otonabee.

And whereas, the Council of the City of Peterborough is desirous that the construction and extension above mentioned may be reported upon and approved by the Provincial Board of Health and that a sewage treatment and disposal plant of and for the city of Peterborough may be constructed, with the approval of the said Board of Health, and that the common sewer and sewage system may be continued into the Township of Otonabee and the sewage treatment and disposal plant may be situate therein on the lands and premises hereinafter described and that such Provincial Board of Health give notice to the clerk of the Township of Otonabee and hear and consider any objections which the Council of the Township of Otonabee or the residents therein may make to the location of the above mentioned works.

Now, therefore, be it resolved that the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, being an urban municipality, hereby applies to the Provincial Board of Health of the Province of Ontario and requests that the said Board inquire into and report upon such sewer and system of sewage, as to whether the same is calculated to meet the sanitary requirements of the inhabitants of the City of Peterborough and as to whether the same is calculated to meet the sanitary requirements of the inhabitants of the City of Peterborough and as to whether such sewer and system of sewage is likely to prove prejudicial to the health of the inhabitants of the said municipality or of any municipality liable to be affected thereby and that the said Provincial Board of Health report upon and approve such sewer and system of sewage and that the said sewer and system of sewage as shown and set forth in the plans and specifications of the Engineer of the City of Peterborough may be contained with the approval of the Provincial Board of Health into the Township of Otonabee, and that the sewage treatment and disposal plant as shown and set forth in the said plans and specifications, may with the approval of the said Board, be situated and located in and upon the lands and premises in the said Township of Otonabee as shown and indicated upon registered plan number twenty-three of the Township of Otonabee, and that the Provincial Board of Health, before approving such work, give notice to the Clerk of the Township of Otonabee and that the said Board hear and consider any objections which the Council of the Township of Otonabee or residents therein may make to the location of the said works, including the said sewage treatment and disposal plant and that the said Board give its approval to the Corporation of the City of Peterborough, of the said works, including the sewage treatment disposal plant and that it may enter upon, take and use the lands shown and indicated upon said registered plan twenty-three for the Township of Otonabee for the construction and erection of the said works, including the said sewage treatment and disposal plant, and that the said Board report in writing that it is of the opinion that it is necessary in the interests of public health that a sewer and sewage system and an adequate sewage treatment and disposal plant should be established, located, constructed, continued and extended as herein set forth and described in, to and upon the lands and premises above described.—Carried.

It was also moved by Ald. Green, seconded by Ald. J. J. Duffus, that the plans and specifications as prepared by the City Engineer concerning the construction of the sewage disposal and treatment plant and the extensions of a sewer and sewage system of the City of Peterborough in and to the Township of Otonabee as set out in the said plans be deposited and filed with the Provincial Board of Health by the City Engineer.

HOPE TO BE GIVEN A JOB OF THEIR OWN

Lieut. Chas. Ackerman Says That the Canadians Will Do It Too When the Time Comes—The Battle of Neuve Chapelle.

CANUCKS WERE PRAISED

Writing to his father, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Liept. Chas. Ackerman, of Peterborough, "somewhere in France," with the 2nd Battalian of the First Contingent, says:

We have been out of the trenches now for nearly a week, and on Monday we start in for a week's hard training preparatory for something or other? Our billets this time are about the usual standard available on this particular part of the line. We came out of the trenches last Sunday night and remained in divisional rescue billets until Thursday night. These billets were about two miles from the trenches. Then we moved back some little distance further to what is called a rest camp. I do not know, in fact no person knows, how long we shall remain here, but I hope we get back again before long to the trenches for a real "go-in" with the Germans who do not seem particularly keen on fighting.

You no doubt have heard that we took part in the Neuve Chapelle scrap the other day. We didn't know at the time what was going on, but I think we were all sure that we were at last going to get a chance to climb out of our trenches to do a hot 200 yards across to the barbed wire opposite, but before we got orders to move things slackened up a bit and it was three days after we were congratulated by our corps commander, Sir. D. Haig, upon the part we took in the Neuve Chappelle fight.

I expect, father, that before long we will be given a job of our own to do, and we will do it. We are all in the very best shape physically, as I found when I had my platoon out the other morning for a run. We ran for a good mile at a pretty steady clip, and not a fellow dropped out or lagged behind the least bit. I have fifty-nine men in my platoon now, and not one man on the sick list, so you see that for war conditions the men must all be physically fit. I, myself, was laid up for a couple of days at Salisbury with a cold, but this was the only time I have been off duty on sick leave since I left Salisbury last August.

Arthur was in to see me to-day, and to give me a number of Examiners that were sent in mistake to No. 1 Company. He is looking fine and filling out in good shape.

Palm Sunday.

To-day is a beautiful clear spring day, only veery cool. We had a battalion church parade and quite a nice service by Major Beatty, who started out as our battalion chaplain, but is now brigade chaplain. His home is in Cobourg, and he is a Presbyterian. I had rather a strange experience with him while coming over on the Cassandia. One Sunday, during a church service, he told us a story of one of his experiences when in England one time. At the time it occurred to me that I had heard the story before of the same experience, and it took me some little time to recollect where I had heard it. Suddenly it occurred to me that some speaker at a song service one night at Stony Lake last summer had mentioned it in his service, but it was dark and, of course, I couldn't see his face. I asked the Major about it and found that it was he whom I had heard at Stony Lake.

Arthur was in to see me again to-night, and had a good tea with us. Since he has been promoted sergeant he is given many more privileges.

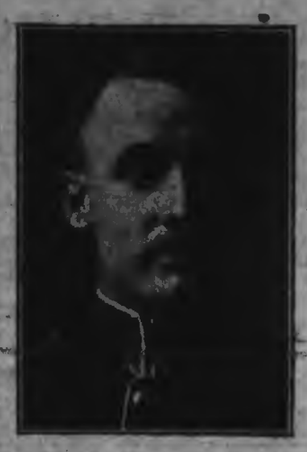
Aeroplanes are very numerous around here, and every day we are favoured with aeroplane fights. They are not really fights as the German plants will not come up after our machines, but shoot hundreds of shells up after them. I heard some shells bursting the other morning and found that it was two bombs dropped on a town close at hand, but the German dropped back in his own lines soon after.

Well, father, it is getting late and we have physical culture at 7:15 to-morrow morning, a nine-mile route march at 9 o'clock, with some doubling, and at 2 o'clock practice an attack. So you see we will be kept quite busy.

Consequently I think I will close now. Give my love to the family, and my very best to every person about the factory. I remain,

Your loving son,

CHARLIE.



Lieut. Chas. Ackerman of Peterboro

DRILLS OF THE HOME GUARDS BE DISCONTINUED

Complete Company From Its Ranks Will be Raised and Enlisted in The 57th Regiment

TO SHOOT IN SUMMER

At a general meeting of the Peterborough Rifle Association and Home Guard held at the ranges last night, it was decided to discontinue the weekly drills now that the 57th Regiment annual drill had started. It was noted with pleasure by the officers and members that a large number of the Home Guard had already joined the 57th and on an invitation from the officer commanding that corp it was decided that in addition to those who have already joined the 57th, that a complete company may be raised and enlisted in the 57th. This company will be enlisted by the following committee, Messrs. Lancaster, Hicks, Sisson, Pilling, Spence and Picard.

It was further decided to discontinue the indoor ranges on Murray Street and the executive of the Rifle Association will make arrangements for shooting during the summer in both the indoor ranges at the armouries and the regimental ranges.

An official statement was presented, which shows the liabilities of the organization amount at about $70000. There is some $110.00 pledged against this amount; in addition to this some $400.00 is due for annual membership dues. The assets consist of $200.00 worth of rifles and a supply of targets which will be sufficient for the summer's practice. It is especially requested that all those that are indebted to the organization will immediately send their accounts to the secretary, Mr. J. F. Linton, care Peterborough Lumber Company, Hunter Street, as it is absolutely necessary that all accounts be closed off at once.

The acting commanding officer, Mr. R. E. Layfield, resigned from office, and in doing so stated that the officers and men of the Home Guard had nothing to be ashamed of when looking back at what had been accomplished since the organization had been started. Some 900 men had enlisted for the space of one year and thereby made themselves liable for any military duty for home defence that they might be called upon to perform. There have been 68 members of the organization enlisted for overseas service, about 100 of the members have joined the 57th or other units of the active militia at Peterborough. In addition to this it

BRITANNIA STILL RULES.

The German piratical "blockade" of British ports to shut off food supplies, to insure starvation, is as sorry a failure as the other objects of the German programme of world domination, which have resolved themselves into a desperate struggle of Germany to save its own skin. Eleven weeks ago the German "frightful" campaign of submarine activity began. Since that time the British Government has transported more than a million soldiers safely, in fact the total losses in transport work since the beginning of the war have amounted to only five men. In the last eleven weeks more than eleven thousand British ships have arrived and sailed from British ports, and the victims of German submarines, total only forty, or one out of every 275 sailing the seas. At the same time the mercantile fleets of Great Britain are stronger now than before the submarine menace. The loss of forty ships has been more than compensated by the launching of new merchant ships. A statistician estimates that at the present rate of destruction of British merchant ships by submarines, assuming that no new ones are built, it will take the Germans 28 years to destroy the merchant marine of Great Britain; but with two ships building and launched to every one destroyed, it would seem that the process of destruction would be absolutely impossible of realization. The German submarine "blockade" seems to be no more effectual, than a "notice to trespassers" would be to keep grasshoppers off the property. We are apt to be concerned when we read from day to day of "another British ship sunk"; but it would seem that there is no ground for alarm, but every ground for rejoicing at the undoubted evidence presented that Britannia still rules the waves.

THE RED CROSS AND AN ELECTION.

There does not, at first blush, seem to be much connection between the work of the Red Cross Society and a premature general election. A little thought, however, will show there is a very important relation, or possibility of establishing a very important relation. On this page is published an appeal from Dr. J. W. Robertson, chairman of the Ontario Red Cross Society. While this appeal is to the farmers, it involves responsibility in this connection on the part of every citizen, and should especially appeal to the government of the country.

For some unexplained reason the government assumes no responsibility for Red Cross work as far as an item appearing in the estimates is concerned. If the government spends 150 million dollars to place our soldiers in the way of being maimed and mangled, it should certainly provide more liberally in healing the wounds made and mitigating the suffering created. If there is no reason why the government should not spend money for Red Cross work there would be a good deal of justification in devoting something like a million dollars and a half, which the government is contemplating "wasting"—in this connection no other word is more pat—upon a premature and absolutely, at this time, unnecessary general election.

When we contemplate the suffering of soldiers, and with all the care possible, the inadequacy of the means for relieving it, we should turn a warm heart towards the Red Cross work. Dr. Robertson says that more hospitals, more hospital beds, and more Red Cross nurses are needed; and to provide these more money is needed. The suffering of our wounded soldiers and those stricken down with disease, are bad enough, and heartrending enough, to contemplate, under conditions of the most careful and adequate shelter and comfort, surgical attendance and nursing. When these are lacking, and the suffering increased or prolonged, the appeal to our generous sympathies must be insistent and exacting. While we ultimately pay every improved system on record, we should strive to cure. All the money available is needed to provide for the care, comfort and cure of our soldiers wounded in battle or down with disease; and anything that diverts the money of the country and of the citizens from assisting in this work is disloyalty and treason to the soldiers we send to fight and bleed for us.

We are threatened with the calamity, from this point of view, of a general election. A general election costs the government, the country, for absolutely essential expenses, anything from half a million to eight hundred thousand dollars. The cost to the candidates in the average constituency can reasonably, and within bounds, be placed at $5,000 each. There are 221 constituencies in Canada, so that in addition to the 500 thousand or 800 thousands spent by the government in conducting a general election, there will be a million spent in the constituencies. The individual spendings of candidates and partizan workers on both sides prevent the disposition of a corresponding amount to the Red Cross work, not to speak of the added scarcity of money created by the ruinous interruption and injury to business by a general election. And not to speak of the distraction of the public mind from the main business of the hour, the successful waging of a war of liberty, and the work of repairing the wounds of war, and succouring our wounded soldiers, torn and mangled by shot and shell, or burning with the fever of disease. Dr. Robertson asks $10,000 from the farmers for the Red Cross fund.. At $50 each that will provide 200 beds.. With even half of the million and a half an election would cost, used usefully, 15,000 hospital beds would be provided. In this event Canada would be doing her duty in something like an adequate way.

The work of the waging of the war in the interests of the integrity of the Empire, and in the interests of humanity; the work of relieving the sufferings of our soldiers, is so unavoidably necessary and inevitable, that it demands our undivided attension and energies; and anything that distracts from the resolute facing and adequate performance of the duty of the government and people of Canada, is wrong and wicked, a hindrance to the interests of the country and Empire.

A general election, with all the large expenditure of money, urgently needed for humane purposes; with the distraction from the duty of the hour, and the destruction of the unity of the people, in the discharge of their duty, is unnecessary at the present time. The government has, according to Sir Robert Borden, a big work to do in hunting down the traitors that have stolen the public money in the course of provision of war supplies; and if he is sincere and earnest he will need all his time for many months to come to carry on this work. It would be prevented entirely by a general election. The present Parliament has still nearly a year and a half to live. No public interest is menaced by postponing an election till the proper time; but a multitude of interests are, under the circumstances, threatened by the holding of a premature general election.

If the government would devote the five or eight hundred thousand an election will cost, or a part of it, to, say, the Red Cross fund, and leave the money of candidates and their friends free to be similarly employed, an infinite amount of good would be done, which will not be done with all the bustle, rancour and disturbance of the public mind, and interference with the patriotic temper of the people, that a general election is sure to engender. A dollar is a dollar at any time; but it has a special value, a special usefulness, at a time when every dollar is needed to help in the war and relieve the awful suffering on the part of our friends and relatives.

One may be sure that the practical politician will scoff at such an idea; to him partizan profit, partizan success, is superior to every loyal duty, and national and imperial ambition; as they are to the owner of the looting, "grafting" spirit which we have had so much in evil evidence the past few months. But to the sober, thinking statesman; to the mass of the people of Canada, the tremendous duty of the hour, is supremely paramount, and they will regard anything that will interfere with the discharge of this duty as an evil, with a reach that includes and threatens the most momentous national and imperial interests.

THE RESPONSIBILITY.

"It would be easy for a group of Liberal agents to defraud the Government by organized misdealing with contracts and supplies," says the Chief Apologist. Is DeWitt Foster, the Conservative member for King's, Nova Scotia, under whose supervision the purchasing of horses occurred which disgraced Canada, by any chance a Liberal agent? Or was Powell, the clerk of Mr. Garland, Tory member for Carleton, a Liberal agent when he charged a price for medical supplies so great that he was forced to disgorge? What is the use of pretending? The thieves were almost all friends of the Government. — The Globe.

The Frivolous Excuse For A Premature General Election

Champions of the Government at Ottawa are saying that the Government cannot attend to its war duties properly because of politics. That may be true. But the politics are of its own creation. The Government might have enjoyed absolute freedom from partisan anxiety and worry by simply declaring that there would be no election until after the war, or at least until the time fixed by law, which is the end of the summer of 1916. Mr. Asquith and Sir Edward Grey, Lloyd George and Churchill, and the other members of the British Government, have done everything possible to cut out party politics and concentrate their own energy, and the energy of their opponents, on war measures. They have declared that there will be no election during the war. They may even change the law so as to postpone the election until after the war. An election is due this year, according to law. But the British ministers are giving no thought to the election, and will postpone it until after the war, even if it is necessary to change the law for that purpose. They want to work with their political opponents, not against them. They do not want to leave their war duties and make partizan stump speeches. They do not want to see their Conservative opponents making stump speeches. They want to see Liberals and Conservatives on the same platform, asking for recruits, and for support for war measures.

The Borden Government has adopted the exactly opposite course. It has stirred up party bitterness. It has provoked party hostility. For months it has been talking about a premature election, and thereby keeping alive party animosities. It is nonsense to say that it has been forced into an election by its drumpery quarrel with the Senate over the Western Senators. It only thought of this excuse a few days ago. But it was talking of a general election last October, although there had been a special war session of Parliament, in which absolute unanimity was shewn, and at the close of which Sir Robert Borden thanked the Opposition for their co-operation "in dealing with this difficult and trying situation."

But before and during the present session of Parliament the friends of the Government were talking of an early election, and thereby doing all in their power to keep party spirit alive. It is true that they did not succeed in doing a great deal of mischief. The hundred million grant for the war was passed without delay, and without criticism, as the fifty million grant had been in the special war session. The new Customs taxation went into effect the moment the Finance Minister finished his budget speech, and the special war taxes have gone into effect at the very hour fixed by the Government. The Opposition did not approve of the principle of the increased Customs taxation, but they were satisfied to register a protest which did no delay for a moment the raising of any money which the Government required.

But the Government was continually looking for pretexts for stirring up a party quarrel and springing a premature election. And at last it found a pretext. The Senate amended a bill for appointing some new Senators. The Senate interfered with the patronage list which Mr. Rogers, as a Western Minister, controls. Mr. Rogers is always thinking about the patronage list, and he imagines that the whole country is interested in the same absorbing topic. The whole country is to be plunged into the heat and bitterness of a general election in order that Mr. Rogers may have his way about some Western jobs that he wants to hand out to his party friends. That is if the latest excuse is accepted. But it is only an excuse.—Toronto Star.

CHAPTER I.
In Search of Gold.

STRANGE things breed in the deserts of southern California—some of them beautiful, some of them symbolic of endless and terrible thirst.

There are three thirsts in this world: thirst for wealth; the one for life; greatest of all, the thirst for love.

The first and the last expression of our civilization is the locked door, and from the time the primal carpenter laid down his tools and went within his rude house the door has stood for all time a defense and an opportunity. In the long vista of life we find many locked doors and gates—doors to happiness, to life and to love.

Fancy to yourselves thirsty men knocking with seared knuckles on these doors. Then realize that sooner or later experience tells them that they cannot enter without a key. "Who holds the 'master key' to all these locked doors?" we cry.

This was the silent question in the hearts of two men, wearily struggling through the sage brush toward the sharp ridges of the San Jacinto mountains in southern California.

"I wonder," said Thomas Gallon, fingering his prospector's guide, "whether we will find that gold—the gold the Indians told us about. Yes, I must find that gold."

"You don't seem to realize that you have a partner," snarled Wilkerson. "You are always talking about I—I—I. Haven't I got a share in this? Haven't I dug up money? And yet you don't seem to think that I've any concern in this matter."

"Excuse me, partner," said the other man, fixing his dim gaze on the mountain. "I'm always thinking of that girl of mine. You know she's in school, and she's got to have a good education, and I've got to work to pay for it. Excuse me, partner; you know I did not mean it that way, but when I remember her mother"— He broke off abruptly, and both men stopped.

"Her mother?" asked Wilkerson.

"Yes, her mother," choked Gallon. "The girl deserves the best there is in this world. I'm all she's got, and, by heavens"—he shook his fist toward the distant blue hills—"she shall have it if I have to tear that mountain apart with my finger nails."

"Well," said Wilkerson impatiently, "let's camp. I'm thirsty."

They stopped in the shade of the fallow plume of the Yucca and made their little fire for coffee, but before the blaze was well started Wilkerson picked up the water bag and took a long drink. His companion suddenly flashed in anger.

"Say, partner," he said sternly, "that water has to last us clear to the mountains."

Wilkerson flung his head back and laughed. "Why worry? Don't you see the snow there on San Jacinto peak? That means creeks down every ravine and gulch."

Instantly Gallon's eyes dulled. He seemed to once more subside into a dream.

"There's where they said the gold was," he muttered. "In one of them gulches up there. Gold! Gold! Say, Wilkerson, we'll get that gold, but we must save the water. I didn't mean any harm, partner, for calling you down for drinking that water, but I've got to get that gold."

"I guess this will last till we reach those foothills," he said. But his companion paid no attention to him, stolidly preparing their slender meal of coffee and beans.

While they had eaten Gallon brusquely motioned to Wilkerson to clean up the camp and then silently started up the gulch.

"I never heard of finding gold by moonlight," his partner muttered to himself. "Let the old man dig around if he wants to." And immediately once more he yielded to his physical desires, this time for sleep.

Gallon steadily trudged around the bluff, following the stream as best he could until he knew that he was absolutely alone. Chance, the master of us all, delights in strange freaks. Now at this moment, when he felt hatred in his heart for his partner, when he knew that he had come on his final quest with a walking to coddle along, Mistress Chance laid her quick finger on him and whispered, "Here!"

He heard that light whisper and dropped his gaze to the ground. A moment later he was furiously hammering at the outcropping of rock that threw its sharp shadow down the hill.

Wilkerson turned sluggishly in his sleep.

What was that figure sinking around the bluff? Something in his partner's attitude as he stopped directly in the full sheen of the moonlight made him pause.

"He's got something," he thought. "Why does he not come down to camp? I think I'll see." So he wrapped himself in his blanket again, but his eyes were open and turned on his partner.

A few moments later Gallon came to camp, heavy footed, as if utterly exhausted dropped his hammer and kicked the fire to a blaze.

"If I had a proper partner there would be coffee for me," he said in a tone loud enough to reach the sleeper.

"Did not find anything, did you, partner?" asked Wilkerson.

Wilkerson turned over as if once more going to sleep, but his eyes were open, and he saw Gallon marking down some notes on a piece of paper.

"Did you say the Indians did not give you the right hunch?" Wilkerson asked suddenly. "How often have I got to tell you we're partners. I believe if you got a strike you wouldn't tell me. Are we partners or not?"

"What was that stuff you had in your hand?" asked Wilkerson drowsily. "You're always bringing in a lot of dirt and looking it over, but I notice you kind of keep that dirt in your hand."

Wilkerson once more yielded to his physical desire for sleep, but was awakened by the barking of a coyote on the hill. He suddenly raised himself and let out a curse against the destroyer of his sleep. Then he swiftly realized that Gallon was still awake, sitting by the fireside, writing with the same stub pencil.

"That's my pencil," he thought dully. "There is not another pencil in this desert. How can I write to Dolores if Old Man Gallon walks off?"

He took out of his pocket a worn leather wallet and drew out the picture of a woman, whose calm, cold features, unadorned by the photographer's art, were appealing to the man of his appetites.

He looked at this a moment, and then all the morbid fire in his blood flamed toward his heart. Love, life and happiness depended upon the possession of gold. Therefore, with this fire in his heart, Wilkerson suddenly got that absolute thirst for gold which traverses deserts, which has killed more people than the armies of Europe.

And in his sudden access of physical desire for gold in order to attain this woman he rose to his feet, and there came upon his face a swift expression, stealthy but determined.

He put the photograph away and, pantherlike, stole into the shadow under the hill and toward the man who had been his partner, but whom he was resolved to kill. He crept along, taking all precautions against disturbing a single pebble, until he stood over Gallon, and in the full moonlight he saw that Gallon was drawing the plans and marking the locations of a mine.

"How far," he thought forcefully to himself, "has the old man gone. What gulch is this? What place is this? He has found the gold, and I'm going to have it!" He still watched the pencil and saw him trace in rude letters:

"This will make you happy."

Smiles and tears, sorrow and laughter have made this world what it is, and the smile on the saturnine visage of Wilkerson stirred Gallon to his depths. Did Wilkerson know? Had Wilkerson seen? Was Ruth to lose the gold that he had found after all these years? Wilkerson had peered over his shoulder. Wilkerson! Wilkerson! Wilkerson! There must be no Wilkerson! He pulled out his revolver and fired at the man smiling at him from the sketch.

Wilkerson emptied his revolver at the old man. But Gallon's trained eye, backed up by his overmastering passion, had directed his weapon too surely. Wilkerson realized that his enemy's bullet had gone home.

But while he was yielding to this queer tenderness his former partner was struggling to his feet—dizzy with pain, absolutely cowed by the shock of finding himself physically helpless, yet driven by instinct to find other human beings. Where were they? There was no sound on the desert except the rustling of the dry leaves of the yuccas and the murmur of the cactus as it died of drought. He was really of two minds. One desire was to find the location of the gold. The other was to save his own life and assuage the bitter fast which he knew meant death.

At last he stumbled to his feet and peered across the mist veiled valley. Far away he saw a light. Gathering all his strength, he started toward it, for it held out to him the prospect of help for his physical injury, and as he fingered his revolver he feverishly dreamed of finding Gallon and so avenging himself.

Under the stars he tramped on. As men see their real world in miniature and their ideal world magnified, as we all do, the moon, flooding its light down upon the pair, did not appear within his range of vision. It was only the little pin points of stars in the purple black sky that he discerned and in the midst of this firmament, as if heinous had been obliterated, he saw a solitary twinkling light, which meant a human habitation.

"I'll get him yet," he muttered thickly. The mere act of articulate speech died in his throat. He realized that he had no water, and the overpowering thirst burned in his very marrow.

"I can't make it," he thought to himself. "Gallon has got the best of me. He found that place and made the plan and fooled me." He painfully lifted his clinched hands toward heaven and cursed vehemently until his curses faded into a perfect delirium of mad dreams. Far away on the hill the coyotes barked dismally.

No longer stealthily like a man obsessed, but with one desire, he struggled down the hill and out upon the mesa. Yet there was still in his eyes all the innumerable stars, and he could not fix his direction in his mind, for to his accentuated sight they all appeared brilliant and peculiar. Thus he got lost.

At times, in moments when the deadly thirst which parched his throat allowed him to drink, he saw the one glimmering light, which marked the place where he knew Gallon had gone. Miles and hours became to him as nothing, yet finally through his sharpened senses he smelled water, and as the sun was rising over San Jacinto mountains he fell face downward into a stream. Some instinct told him that towns were built on hills; that consequently to find the town he should go upstream. So he struggled, stemming the current, dragging his feet, his left hand clinched into the folds of his shirt over the wound. In his heart was still smoldering the flame which in the fulness of his physical strength had been hatred of his partner.

"I'll get him yet," he muttered.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Red Mill Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

THE HOUSE ACCEPTS BILL

Senate Amendments Provide For Scrutineers at the Front

OTTAWA, April 16.—The Senate and the House played battledore and shuttlecock with the soldiers vote bill yesterday, but in the end the measure was passed, and the royal assent was given nearly three hours after the time appointed for prorogation. It was the delay over the bill which kept His Royal Highness waiting. At one o'clock yesterday afternoon a motion was made in the Senate to give the bill the six months' hoist, but when this was voted down, the third reading followed immediately. The Senate, however, made two amendments. One of these provided for the appointment of six scrutineers, three by the Prime Minister and three by the leader of the Opposition with authority to go overseas and appoint deputy scrutineers at the front. The second amendment provided that the measure should not come into effect so far as voting outside of Canada is concerned except upon the certificate of Lord Kitchener that the law would not interfere with military efficiency.

The Governor-General attended at the Senate Chamber, granted assent to bills passed by the two Houses and prorogued Parliament.

YOUNG BRIDE OF KLONDIKER TO ENTER CONVENT

LOS ANGELES, April 14.—A bride of twenty-one, who, after a brief honeymoon, will be secluded in a convent was brought to Los Angeles by her wealthy sixty-year-old bridegroom, after a quiet marriage which ended a courtship combining the elements of snowbound Alaska and sunshine-covered Southern California. For it was out of Alaska that Cariste Racine, the husband, a hardy old Klondiker of three-score years, came to win a bride scarcely a third his age.

But what difference do forty years make to love?

Not so much as the difference between Los Angeles and the Yukon, declare both the adoring groom and the bride, who was Miss Frieda Weertz.

Racine came out of the North with as much spirit as that of young Lochinvar when he came out of the West. He went to Whittier, where he has a winter home, and it was in that neighbouring city that he met and loved Miss Weertz. For eight months she listened in rapt attention to the tales told by Racine.

He began in the beginning, telling how he was born near St. Louis, Mo., more than sixty years ago, and how in early life he left his home to seek a fortune in the then untravelled wastes of Manitoba and Alaska.

Stories of struggling across the plains of Manitoba in early days thrilled the girl who listened, as did the recitals of his desperate deeds and adventures during the first gold strike in the Yukon.

Then came the recounting of how, seventeen years ago, he opened the White Horse Inn at White Horse, in Yukon Territory, and soon accumulated a fortune, which now is represented not only by the inn but also by sawmills, lumber yards and various paying mining claims in the frozen land in the North.

Her "Yes" Finally Given.

Little Miss Frieda hesitated long, however, before she answered "yes" to the honest, straightforward pleading of the veteran miner.

The ceremony took place at the [illegible] Whittier. Everything was done so quietly that none of "the boys", as Racine calls his friends in Alaska, gained even the slightest inkling of it all.

Then there was a hurried closing of the groom's home, a quick "get-away' in an automobile and a spin to Los Angeles.

The happy couple will board the steamer Congress for San Francisco and from that city they will sail soon for Honolulu for a quiet honeymoon.

And when that is ended, Racine will place his bride in a convent, in order, he explains, that "she may learn all there is to know that is good about the world," although the bright-eyed little wife is not lacking in education and wit.

Red Cross Appeal To The Farmers

Our country, with its Allies, is waging a great war for justice, for the protection of small nations in the enjoyment of their rights, for continued and growing freedom, and for the maintenance of its pledged word of honour. Much destruction and desolation are being caused. Lives are being lost by the thousand. Canada's first contingent is now in the thick of it. Some will fall sick; many may be wounded; some will pay the last full measure of devotion to their country and its cause.

The Red Cross Society exists to succor the sick and wounded in war. It needs more money to provide more beds at hospitals in Great Britain and France; it needs more money to pay more Red Cross Nurses; it needs more money, and more things made by women, to supply to Clearing Hospitals, Base Hospitals, and Recovering Hospitals.

I appeal to farmers to send me sums from $1 to $50, during the first week in May. Every $50 provides one additional hospital bed with the giver's name over it. By sending me about $10,000, you would serve your country well, bring credit to yourselves, and make all of us very proud of you. For the sake of the wounded boys, make the gift substantial. It will be an investment towards the recovery of some Canadian soldier who stood in our stead that our cause might be upheld.

Faithfully your friend,
JAS. W. ROBERTSON,
Chairman,
Red Cross Society at Ottawa.

We publish to-day an appeal on behalf of the Red Cross Society, by Dr. James W. Robertson. Dr. Robertson is still best known to the farmers of Canada as Professor Robertson. He began his official public service at the Ontario Agriculture College nearly thirty years ago. Twenty-five years ago he went to Ottawa as Dairy Commissioner for the Dominion. The Dairying Service of the Department of Agriculture soon became known and trusted throughout Canada. From Prince Edward Island to Alberta, farmers profited by the Illustration Dairy Stations and the Travelling Instructors. The output of cheese and butter in Canada added to the reputation of its rural workers.

Other public services of continuing and growing value were inaugurated while Professor Robertson was Commissioner of Agriculture. Among them were the Live Stock Branch, the Cold Storage Service, the Seed Grain Competitions, Trial Shipments of Fruit to the United Kingdom, and Extensions of Markets.

Besides there were the Manual Training Movement, the School Gardens, Household Science, and the Consolidated Rural Schools.

In more recent years, Dr. Robertson was Chairman of the Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education. Farmers in all provinces are familiar with the Survey of Farms by the Commission of Conservation and the Illustration Farms of its Committee on Lands, of which he is Chairman.

In these and many other ways, Dr. Robertson has given the farmers of Canada the best that was in him. He says he is their debtor, for many opportunities, for much kindness and for warm appreciations. But they are his debtors too. And he now reminds them of that for the first time in order to establish his right and privilege to appeal to them for this worthy cause.

WILLIAM LANGFORD WAS ELECTED

By a Majority of 138—Vote Was Small

After an absence of nearly four months, William Langford, Jr., was yesterday re-elected to the City Council by a straight majority of 138, and a plurality of 49. Each sub-division piled up a substantial majority for Langford, and all but one gave him a plurality. The vote was small, less than five hundred being polled. At noon to-day Ald. Langford was declared elected, and for the remainder of the year will fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of ex-Ald. Johnston.

The vote was as follows:

| Sub-Division | Dodd | Holloway | Langford | T'l Number Of Votes |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 15, Lees' house | 21 | 15 | 71 | 107 |
| 16, Cock's Store | 19 | 14 | 51 | 84 |

DRILLS OF HOMEGUARD TO BE DISCONTINUED

it expected that a complete company will be organized by Capt. Lancaster and his committee and enlisted in the 57th Regiment. The greatest individual benefit is the fact that 600 members of the organization have learned how to shoot and handle a rifle, 60,000 rounds of ammunition or an average of 120 rounds per man having been used, and the Association has benefited as marksmen of high degree. The organization has been the means of a large body of men, irrespective of position, creed, politics, or any other so-called dividing line, getting together and knowing each other. The good that has resulted from this will be far reaching in its effects in the city and it is hoped that it will be arranged that at least once a year that every member of the organization will get together for a re-union. While at the present it is not expected that the Home Guard will have to participate in active service, if the time should come where such action is necessary they will be there ready to fulfill their duty. Mr. Layfield also drew the attention of the members to the splendid support that the Association had been given by the citizens in general, especially the Mayor and Council of the City, and also the splendid support that had been given by the Press, and the numberless courtesies that have been extended to them by the military units of the city.

The secretary of the Association will call a meeting of the original Board of the Association to make arrangements for further work in connection with the shooting practice.

THE IMPORTANCE OF PLAYGROUNDS

We have at last awakened to the fact that the school provides but a small fraction of a child's education and that environment is teaching him every moment of the day. Not in the school-room, but on the play ground, can the instinct for workmanship, imitation and co-operation find their true expression."

They say that our youth are sorely lacking in courtesy, all rude in speech and behaviour. Would not a well-appointed scheme of supervision during play time do much to eliminate this? Do not the children learn much of this on the streets?

By what means can the foreign element in our country become more quickly assimilated and made into loyal citizens and patriotic Canadians than through the properly supervised play ground?

Ald. Dobbin Saved Situation

Arrived in Time to Facilitate Passage of Waterworks By-Law

A by-law to authorize the borrowing of $18,000 to pay for extensions of the waterworks system as carried out during the year 1914, was passed at last night's meeting of the City Council. The passing of the by-law was delayed on the second reading owing to the impaired voting capacity of the Council due to the absence of several of the aldermen. The by-law required a three-fourths vote of the Council. When the by-law came up for the second reading, it was discovered that the Council lacked one vote of the number required to carry it. Reinforcements were secured in the form of Ald. Dobbin, who was attending a meeting in another part of the building. The committee of the Whole Council that convened for the second reading of the measure rose and reported progress. This paved the way for the re-introduction of the by-law, which passed with a bare majority.

Among the absentees were Ald. Saunders, who arrived later in the evening, Ald. McIntyre who is out of the city, and Ald. Dobbin, who divided his interests between two different meetings. This, combined with the vacancy in the North Ward, to which Ald. Langford was elected yesterday, gave the voting power of the Council a minority complexion.

Ald. Langford does not assume his duties as alderman until to-day at noon.

Must Pay License Fee.

Ald. Edgar has been informed that a number of the ice cream vendours are conducting their business without a license. The license fee is five dollars. The matter will be investigated.

The Property committee of the City Council will be asked to make arrangements, if possible, to have the carters keep their vehicles on the market square. At present they are stationed on Simcoe Street, from where they are frequently chased by the police.

Ald. Edgar believes that the market square would be a good place for a carter's stand.

The Sunken Submarine.

HONOLULU, April 16. — Chief Gunner's Mate, George D. Stillson, the second diver to make the descent to the ocean's floor and examine the submarine F-4 yesterday reported that the superstructure of the wrecked vessel is caved in and the hull filled with water. Admiral Moore, however, yesterday notified the Navy Department that the submarine, which lies 285 feet beneath the waters of the harbor, may be raised before night. He said a line had been placed under the stern of the boat and another would be placed under the bow.

Council Decide To Build Sewer On the Boundary

Will Serve a Number of Houses Actual and Prospective—City Will be Safeguarded.

SAYS ALD. GREEN

The City Council, at a special meeting held last evening, gave voice to its intention to construct a sewer on the Monaghan Road from Charlotte to King Streets as recommended by the local Board of Health Mayor Buller warned the Council against proceeding with any undertaking that was not strictly within the pale of the law, and suggested that it would be better to defer action until the matter was reported upon by the City Solicitor.

Ald. Green, Chairman of the Board of Works, said that various authorities had been consulted, and the Board of Works, of which he was Chairman, had considered it in the public interests to proceed with the work. The Street Railway Company was about to construct an extension on the boundary, and now would be an opportune time to put in the sewer. He assured the Mayor that the city would be safeguarded. The amount of frontage tax on the township side of the boundary that would be paid by the whole city, would not exceed ten dollars a year.

No Specific Case.

City Solicitor Gordon reviewed the legal aspects of the case. He said so far as he knew no specific case existed showing that a municipality had a right to collect frontage tax on both sides of the boundary road. He had consulted various authorities and proposed to seek further information concerning the matter.

Mayor Buller suggested the possibility of a ratepayer issuing an injunction restraining the city from proceeding with the work. Besides the sale of the debentures would be impaired.

Ald. Green thought the time had come when the city might establish a precedent. The needs of ratepayers residing on the boundary should be respected. "The law is veiled in mystery," said Ald. Green. If there is any row about taking the debentures I will take them myself. Because a man lives on the boundary is no reason why we should fine him. We are positively fining him when we deprive him of civic conveniences. Other municipalities construct sewers on boundary roads and, apparently, experience no difficulty in collecting the frontage tax on the township side of the road.

This ended the discussion and the clause in the Board of Works report, recommending the construction of the sewer, was adopted.

Of short Length.

The proposed sewer will be one block in length. It will take about a week to construct and when completed will serve a number of houses, actual and prospective, on the city side of the boundary road. The number of prospective houses is three, which Mr. Lancaster proposes to build providing the necessary civic conveniences can be obtained. The question of laying a sewer has been before the Board of Works on more than one occasion and each time has been held up for the reason that the Board was unable to determine what means should be taken to provide for the frontage tax on the township side of the road. As matters now stand the city may assume that obligation which, as stated before, will amount to nine or ten dollars a year. This will be decided upon later.

CANADIAN WORKERS FACE DEPORTATION

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., April 13.—Edwin Mashell, acting superintendent of the M. Rumely manufacturing plant, was to-day placed in the custody of United States immigration officers of Detroit, and is now in the local jail awaiting steps toward deportation. Mr. Mashell's home is in Toronto. Ten other men from that city are also likely to be taken into custody before morning and deported.

Charges that the men entered the country under contract to work are the basis for the government's action. Entrance to the United States was made by the men when they disguised themselves as baseball players and crossed the border at Detroit, carrying bats, gloves, masks, etc. It is declared that their tickets were purchased by the Rumely company, that concern saying it was impossible to obtain sufficient skilled labour in the United States.

CHIEF THOMPSON VS. THE REVIEW

Managing Director of Newspaper in Police Court This Morning

Mr. Thomas H. Whalley, managing-director of the Review, was charged in Police Court this morning as follows:

"Without legal justification or excuse you did publish in the newspaper known as 'The Daily Review,' of which you are managing-director, that Danial Thompson, Chief Constable of the said City of Peterborough, was permitting friendly relations between the Peterborough Police Force and the management of the Brock Street Rink and owner of the "underworld," which is likely to injure his reputation by exposing him to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or designed to insult him, contrary to the Criminal Code."

The matter in question appeared in the Review on Monday, April 5, 1915.

An adjournment of the hearing was made to April 23rd at 11 a.m., one week from to-day. Mr. Ruddy appeared as counsel for Mr. Whalley, Mr. G. W. Hatton acting for the Crown.

DUTCH SHIP HAS BEEN SUNK

Latest German Outrage Provokes Anger in Holland.

LONDON, April 16.—Tremendous excitement has been aroused in Holland, according to despatches received here last night, by the destruction of the Dutch Government steamer Katwijk by a German submarine. The Katwijk was torpedoed and sent down while riding at anchor off Noordhinder lightship, off the coast of Holland. She was a vessel of 2,046 tons, registered in Rotterdam, and bound for that port from Baltimore with an American cargo of corn and cotton. She had been chartered by the Government of the Netherlands, and her cargo was Government-owned.

The sinking of the Katwijk, coming as it did on the heels of the seizure of four Dutch trawlers, the St. Nicholas, Eendwee, Ryniand and another as yet unidentified, by a German torpedo boat, which took them to Cuxhaven, has aroused the Dutch Government to take hasty steps to demand immediate and complete reparation.

This feeling has not been modified by later despatches, saying that the captured vessels were released.

The British steamer Ptarmigan was torpedoed by a German submarine in the North Sea, according to a despatch received here yesterday.

Eleven other members of the crew of the Ptarmigan were rescued. The steamer was torpedoed a few miles off the coast of Holland, between Hinter light and the Hook of Holland.

GALLANTRY REWARDED

Major Gault, Lieut. Colquhoun and Lieut. Papineau Get D.S.O.

LONDON, April 16. — The King has approved the appointment of Maj. A. Hamilton Gault of the Princess Patricias as a Companion of the Distinguished Service Order in recognition of gallantry and devotion to duty. The official records reads:

"For conspicuous gallantry at St. Eloi on Feb. 27 in reconnoitering quite close to enemy's position and obtaining information of great value for the attack carried out next day. On Feb. 28 Maj. Gault assisted in the rescue of wounded under the most difficult circumstances whilst exposed to heavy fire.

"The King has also conferred the military cross on Lieut. W. G. Colquhoun of the Princess Patricias for conspicuous gallantry and resource on numerous occasions, especially at St. Eloi on Jan. 26, when he rescued with assistance of one man a mortally wounded officer after three others had failed in the attempt, being under very heavy close range fire the whole time.

"Again on Feb. 27 at St. Eloi he rendered valuable assistance on reconnaissance duty under very difficult and dangerous circumstances, and also upon Lieut. T. M. Papineau, Princess Patricias, for conspicuous gallantry at St. Eloi on Feb. 28, when in the act of leading a bomb-throwing party he shot down two Germans and ran alongside and hurled bombs into an enemy sap."

Lieut. Colquhoun enlisted at Hamilton, Ont. He was reported killed in action, but later advices are that he is a prisoner.

MAKES OFFER TO BELGIANS

Germany Would Leave Country If Belgium Stayed Neutral

AMSTERDAM, April 16. — (Via London.)—The Rome correspondent of The Tijd says the German embassy in Rome has asked the Belgian Government, through the Belgian legation to Italy, whether, in the event of the German armies evacuating Belgian territory, Belgium would remain neutral during the remainder of the war. The correspondent adds that Belgium's answer is unknown.

Obregon In a Trap.

EL PASO, Texas, April 16.—Gen. Obregon's Carranista army at Celaya is in a desperate situation, being hemmed in on three sides by Villa forces, according to private advices received here yesterday. Gen. Felipe Angeles, with 1,800 men and forty cannon was reported to have reached a point 12 miles east of Obregon's position, while Gen. Juan Banderas of the Zapata forces is within striking distance of Quarareto, Gen. Obregon's base. Travelers arriving yesterday from Mexico City said the capital was quiet when they left. They brought news of the murder of an unnamed German subject by followers of Zapata.

INTERESTING DEMONSTRATION OF CHI-NAMEL

An Invitation Extended to Citizens to Visit Peterborough Hardware Store Before Closing Time To-morrow Night

At this season of the year housewives begin to think of housecleaning and of methods for a general renovation at the least expense. Before commencing the annual clean-up a visit to the Peterborough Hardware Company Store is advised, where Mr. Robert Bishop from Toronto is exploiting many new ideas in the line of floor and woodwork graining. Many people visited the store yesterday and to-day, and went away convinced of the worth and durability of Chi-Namel for graining and varnishing purposes. Mr. Bishop is a special demonstrator direct from the factory, who will be here until to-morrow night, and he will be pleased to demonstrate the superior qualities of Chi-Namel to anyone who is responsible for the care and good appearance of the interior woodwork of a home.

Chi-Namel is a Chinese Oil Varnish, as though as sole-leather, waterproof, hammer-proof and heel-proof. The effects of a variety of woodgrowths, in which it is shown, may all be imitated with the Chi-Namel graining materials. During yesterday and to-day, demonstration days, with the purchase of a ten-cent varnish brush, and the coupon appearing in another part of the paper, in an advertisement, a twenty-cent can of Chi-Namel will be given free. This offer will be continued during to-morrow. Peterborough people should certainly avail themselves of the instruction and generous offer at the Peterborough Hardware Store before to-morrow night.

Demonstrations of this sort have been put on by the Peterborough Hardware Company for the past three years, and to show the satisfaction Chi-Namel is giving in this city, their sales have almost doubled every year those of the previous year. The south window of the store is now dressed with Chi-Namel products.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—I beg space in your valuable paper to make the following query:

I understand this work was to have been done before the corner was paved.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

One Who Is Interested.

A Statement From Mr. R. J. Todd

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Many are wanting to know why I have given up the Church work, and what I am going to do. Evidently they think there is trouble in the Church. This is not so. The Church is in good condition, financially, and in perfect harmony. With your permission, for the sake of righteousness, I will briefly explain.

When called to take up the work here, I found, with those claiming to be Christian Scientists, as well as others outside, a very erroneous conception of the teaching and practice of this Science. They believed in the power of mind over matter, but it was the action of the human mind or will, instead of the Mind of Christ, as found all through the teachings of Mrs. Eddy. As the natural results of the human will, in the ranks of those believing thus, ther had been murder, suicides, breaking up of homes, separation of man and wife in more than one case. This I knew to be the opposite results of Christian Science. There were two small factions vieing with each other, for who should be greatest, neither of them organized in accord with the rules of Christian Science.

It was not a bright outlook for me, but with the help of God, I undertook to patch up the old garment by getting all together in one organization. To my disappointment I later found the Master's words fulfilled—"The remnade worse," at least for me. At that time, by my own request, I was not an officer in the Church—just a humble demonstrator of truth as revealed through Mary B. G. Eddy. Having discovered more errors than I at first had seen, I insisted on obedience to a written request through the Secretary of Mrs. Eddy, prohibiting the method of healing by will power, or mental suggestion. Those would not obey this request went out from us, leaving us, as they thought, under a financial burden we could not bear. Owing to this separation and threat to close up the Church, I had to again take the chair as President.

Then the foe, although outside, went to work systematically, and diligently, to starve me and my helpless family out of the city. This had been the fate of three others who had preceded us, and, had worked for, and with those who seemed determined to have their own way of doing things. Although the treatment at times appeared unjust and cruel, perhaps it was what I needed. I have tried to be true to God, and have stuck to my post in the face of falsehood, persecution and deceit, as long as I could do so, and be loyal to the law, and order of our society.

The Church is in good condition, with a true foundation laid, and there are three fields of labour open for me, where, I believe I could do better for myself and family. Therefore I consider it an opportune time to throw this field open to any one who has enough of the Mind of Christ, love enough for God and suffering humanity, to take up the work and build on the foundation laid, Christ being the chief corner stone. If there is not, and it becomes my duty to remain and continue the work, I shall start with a clean new sheet, and continue to develop true Christianity, with signs following, even though it be in a humble way.

I shall take this opportunity of extending my grateful thanks to the press of Peterborough for their very fair and kind treatment toward myself, and help in our work, which I appreciate very much, knowing that God rewards fair play and righteousness, I can add nothing more thereto.

Again thanking you for valuable space, I remain

Sincerely yours,
R. J. Todd.

LONDON, April 16.—The skippers of the British trawlers who sighted the Zeppelin airship which Wednesday night raided the southeast coast of England, describe her as the Z-8, one of the very latest type of German airships. The trawlers sighted the craft 100 miles from land. They believe she came from Heligoland. If she returned to this island, the calculation is made that she must have covered on her trip something like 800 miles.

The trawlers came at full speed for port immediately after they recognized the Zeppelin with the object of giving warning, but, as feared, they were easily outdistanced by the airship.

ELECTIONS IN JUNE

Dissolution of Parliament is Expected at Any Time

OTTAWA, Ont., April 16. — The members of the Commons to-day are departing to their homes. All hope to be back, but many fear they wont, because there isn't a man who expects to see another session of the Twelfth Parliament of Canada. Elections for June, are predicted at present, and the dissolution of Parliament is confidently expected almost any time.

The cabinet sat till early this morning, and there is no doubt that the chief topic of conversation was the question of an election. There are many who believe that dissolution will come Monday next, but there is no confirmation of this.

Major-General Hughes may immediately commence to stump the country in the interests of the party.

The Government members are very well satisfied with the utterance of their leader, Sir Robert Borden, yesterday, and believe that the reprimanding of Messrs. Foster and Garland will go far to reinstate the party in the public mind. While, therefore, little excuse has been given for an election, it is believed here that one will be held at an early date. Certain difficulties will have to be cleared away in the meantime. Sir Rodmond Roblin, of Manitoba, was compelled at the close of the last Manitoba Legislature, to grant a Royal Commission to look into charges of graft approximating $600,000, in connection with the new legislative buildings. Hon. Robert Rogers does not want this commission to start its work until after the general election. It is feared that disclosures may seriously affect the Federal Conservative member's chances there. The British Columbia situation is also causing some worry, and it is expected that there will be a postponement of the provincial election, which is pending in that province to give the Federal Government a chance.

Returned From Hamilton

Mr. M. J. Maher of "Oak Hall" clothing store has just returned from headquarters, at Hamilton, where he has spent the past week in looking up styles for the Fall season, and also with an eye out for snaps for the present minute, and according to the notice reported in another part of this paper, he got some good [illegible] market for clothing for yourself or boy, a glance at the [illegible] may save you a few dollars.

PARIS, April 16.—The French official communication says that British artillery brought down on the afternoon of April 15th a German aeroplane, which fell in front of the British lines, but behind the German trenches, north of Yyres; all other points were comparatively quiet.

BERLIN, April 16.—British warships assisted the land forces in an attack on the German positions between Ostend and Nieuport yesterday.

PREPARING FOR A RAID

LONDON, April 16.—Pronounced activity at the German airship bases at Emden and Cuxhaven to-day, is reported in telegrams from Holland. An urgent call was issued in London this afternoon for the special police to go on duty at 5 p.m.; according to reports from Holland three Zeppelins were seen to-day flying westward over the Dutch Islands in the North Sea. Count Zeppelin is said to be directing the movements at Cuxhaven.

VICTORY FOR RUSSIANS

GENEVA, Switzerland, April 16.—The Tribune publishes a despatch from Ungvar in North Eastern Hungary, saying that a great battle has been fought between Stry and the valley of Ondava. The German army composed of picked men, attacked the Russians marching on Bereg. After 32 hours severe fighting the Russians succeeded in repulsing the Germans and capturing a quantity of arms and ammunition. Another despatch received here from Vienna says that 65 Austrian officers have been disciplined for negligence which resulted in the annihilation of a division of reserves near Bereg, and the Austrian defeat in the Sarao region.

Gold Watch Chain And Fob For Fire Brigade Recruit

Edward Soulsby of the local Fire Department, who has enlisted with the Guelph Battery, was presented with an address and gold watch chain and fob at the fire hall this afternon at 3 o'clock. It was quite an informal affair, but was none the less indicative of the feelings of the firemen toward the latest recruit from their ranks. Mr. Soulsby was formerly acting assistant-chief, but resigned on account of ill health. He returned as a fireman but two weeks ago enlisted in his home town, Guelph.

The address was as follows:

Mr. Edward Soulsby.

Dear Comrade,—We, your fellow firemen of the Peterborough Fire Department, wish to express to you our regrets at your departure from our midst.

We understand that you are answering the call to arms, and we sincerely hope and trust that your life will be spared and that you will return to us at the conclusion of the war without any ill effects.

We ask you to take this watch chain and wear it as a remembrance of us during your absence.

With best wishes to you and yours.

Signed on behalf of the Department,

W. A. Howard,
Chief, Fire Department.
Jos. Duffus,
Chairman F. W. and L. Committee.
J. A. McElhiney,
Chaplain, Fire Department.

ANNUAL MEETING OF LAWN BOWLERS

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club will be held this evening at the store of Mr. J. P. Cunningham, 494 George street. A full attendance of members is expected.

"A SCOTS NIGHT"

Held by the Caledonian Club Was a Huge Success

In response to a great many requests for another social evening of the Caledonian Club held a successful function on Wednesday evening in the Woodman of the World Hall, when about 140 couples started the programme to the excellent strains of music, so well provided for under Messrs. Nicholls and Haggett who played the piano and violin respectively.

The special feature of the dance programme was to witness the older folks participate in one of "Auld Scotia's" "Strip" reels, which was full of life from beginning to end.

During the evening the company was entertained by the following artists:

Miss Dalhie sang two old country favourites with precision of a gift, viz., "The Dear Homeland" and "In the Evening by the Twilight."

Mrs. French sang "The Volunteer Organist" a number that called for good applause from all.

Mr. King gave a good account of himself in rendering "Whaur Scotland Made Her Fame" and "Flow Gently Sweet Afton."

The one and only Scots humourist, Mr. Bob. Hendry delighted the company with two great favourites, "Sing Me to Sleep," and "The British Navy," was the hit as all joined in the strain of everlasting mith.

The dance was proclaimed a huge success, as the committee had made an abundance of conveniences, and deserve great credit.

Around the Theatres

The Empire.

William Farnum, one of the foremost figures in theatrical and photo-play work, is largely responsible for the success of "The Sign of the Cross," now holding the week at Dr. Robinson's theatre. There are many picture actors who are regarded accomplished, but most of them do not measure up to Farnum who appears to be entirely unconscious of the camera and throws into his work the art which raised him to a first position in the theatrical world. Persons who saw the picture say it is better than the play which was through here several times. It is the story of the days of Nero, when the first Christians gave their lives for their faith made strong by their proximity to the days and deeds of Jesus. Marcus, the prefect of Rome, meets Mercia, a Christian maid, saves her from a mob. How he is converted and condemned with the girl to the lions is well displayed.

Lilly Lorrell, an experienced actress, who has played "Mercia" in "The Sign of the Cross," also with Otis Skinner, with F. B. Benson in Shakespearian plays, is singing at the Empire this week. She has a pleasing mezzo-soprano voice with fine tone and control. She sings "The Holy City" and other selections appropriate to the big photo-play.

Red Mill.

Guarding Britain's Secrets is a big four-part feature at the Red Mill. It is an English production and particularly appropriate at this time. It deals with the intrigue employed to secure a knowledge of what Britain is doing in her advanced military and naval work in addition to other valuable secrets. It is a strong dramatic picture. The usual comedies are included in the bill.

The Tis-It.

Manager Clayton has a good film, "The Mystery of the Throne Room," at the Tis-It in two parts, with Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, late of Lasalle Love, in the main roles. The Strand war pictures are "The Siege of Antwerp," and with comedy films an interesting programme is offered.

At the Royal.

Eulalie Yeusen and other vitagraph stars are seen in the Broadway Feature, "The Locked Door," a three part film featuring a big factory fire. There is a good lesson taught in this apart from its principal story unreeled with graphic touches. "The Hazzards of Helen" is the first of a serial under this name, starring Helen Holmes. They will be received weekly, and each is complete in itself. The first pictupre is "The Red Signal," a one-reel railway thrill. There are other pictures in the bill. Francis Curran & Co. provide the vaudeville. Mr. Curran is a monopede and displays exceptional ability in spite of having only one leg. It is an interesting exhibition.

THE UTILITIES COMMISSION MEET

At a meeting of the Utilities Commission, which was held yesterday afternoon, it was decided to request City Solicitor Gordon to procure the contracts which the Peterborough Light and Power Company had with R. J. Munro, the American Hotel, A. T. Johnston, A. M. Laidlaw and the Royal Theatre, respecting electric signs and current for the same. The Waterworks Superintendent reported on the pressure on the water mains on Hunter street and Homewood avenue, from Aylmer street to the Monaghan Road.

The following accounts were ordered to be paid: H. Fraser, $168.18, and the American Waterworks Association $2.50.

INFORMAL BANQUET "A SUCCESS"

Enjoyable Affair Held by Murray St. Baptist Choir

The members of the Murray Street Baptist church choir held an informal banquet last night in the basement of the church in honour of two of their members, Mr. and Mrs. John Jarry, who recently worshipped at Hymen's altar. After the viands provided had disappeared there was an intellectual treat in the form of some dry and divers toasts. The toast to the King was proposed by the toastmaster, Master F. Lloyd-George Moule, the company responding with the National Anthem. Willie Laurie Jolliffe then proposed the toast to the bride in an excruciatingly funny speech. Mr. John Rockafellow Jarry responded in his inimitable manner.

A toast to the old maids of the choir was proposed by Mr. George Paderiffski Schneider, which was responded to by Miss Florence Nightingale Smith, who urged the proposer of the toast to follow Mr. Jarry's example.

A toast to the bachelors was also proposed by Miss Mamie Sylvia Pankhurst Montgomery, who held Mr. Jarry up as a shining example, the toast being responded to smilingly by Mr. Bruce Caruso Quinn, who said he would rather sing his speech than speak it.

During the evening selections were rendered by the inharmonic quartette, and at the close of the banquet Mrs. Pontpier Morgan on behalf of the choir presented the bride with a beautiful gift of silverware.

The coolness of the evening was the only drawback to the pleasure of the affair, but Mr. Asa Huycke saw to it that those assembled kept on the move, which added much to the enjoyment.—Com.

Remanded Until Next Wednesday

The case before Magistrate Langley in the County Police Court, this afternoon, in which Alexander Lillico is charged with entering the house of Mr. Fred Collett, Brown Street, with intent to assault, was enlarged until Wednesday next, at 10 a.m. Crown Attorney Hatton was not prepared to go on with the hearing in the absence of a material witness.

Lillico will be allowed out on $1,000 bail, in two sureties, one of $500 by a responsible freeholder; and one of $500, himself. Mr. Thomas B. Henry of Brown Street was accepted as bondsman.

Mr. C. R. Widdifield of Messrs. Gordon and Widdifield, is counsel for the defendant.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

Pte. S. Rogers of the 21st Battalion Kingston, is home for a few days.

Kingston Standard: The 21st Battalion left the city at 8 o'clock this morning on a route march to Odessa. The automobile transport accompanied the battalion. Food was sent out later and dinner was served in Odessa at noon. It was expected that the men would arrive in the city about 6 o'clock this evening.

The battalion arrived in Odessa at 11.55 a.m., covering the thirteen miles in the excellent time of three hours and forty-five minutes. This time included four halts of ten minutes each. Not a man fell out during the march.

A military officer stated that the Canadians at the front had all the cholera bands that they required. The great needs at present, he said, were socks, tobacco, cigarettes and sweets.—Kingston Standard.

Congratulated by King.

Mr. Green, residing at 514 Patterson Street, City, received a letter on Wednesday, April 14th, from his mother, who resides at Lewes, Sussex, England, saying she has been highly honoured by receiving a letter from His Majesty King George, congratulating her on having had five sons serving with the colours. Mr. Green was one of them. He joined the 21st Battalion, 2nd Canadian contingent, but has been rejected owing to ill health.

Off For Kingston.

The five Peterborough recruits selected for the Canadian Remount depot for service in England, left this afternoon for Kingston, where the depot is being organized. The five who will represent Peterborough in this unit are: Claude Bartlett, 68 Murray Street; Harod Morrow, 469 Water Street; Leo. Holland, 526 Concession Street; B. C. Carpenter, G. T. R. Office, and W. Grady, 583 Water Street.

DOCTOR SAID ONLY HOPE WAS IN AN OPERATION

Was Skeptical When He Began the Use of Dr. Chase's Ointment—Relief Came Quickly

Here is a plain, honest statement in regard to Dr. Chase's Ointment. Between the lines of this letter you can read the gratitude which its writer feels. One does not suffer from annoying, distressing piles for ten years without appreciating a cure when it is obtained.

Almost every mail brings the report of someone who has been cured of piles by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Such statements are never used without the permission of the writer, and until we are satisfied that the cure is genuine and the writer a person of responsibility.

You may believe in operations for piles, and think there is no other cure. Write to Mr. Ingles, enclosing stamp, and he will gladly verify his statement. He will tell you that the pain, the expense, the risk of an operation are quite unnecessary. That relief and cure come with the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Ernest W. Ingles, Penticton, B.C., writes: "I suffered from piles for ten years, and though I tried all kinds of ointments and injections I really had no permanent relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. When I began this treatment I had absolutely no faith in it, for I had been examined by a well-known physician in Vancouver, and he said that an operation was the only thing that would benefit me. It was surprising the relief I obtained from the very first box, and now, after using four boxes, I am practically cured. My case was so exceptionally bad that I received no relief day or night, and for this reason the results are wonderful."

You can obtain Dr. Chase's Ointment from any dealer at 60 cents a box. If you do not want to risk this much send a two-cent stamp to pay postage, and mention this paper, and we shall send you a sample box free. We are so certain that any sufferer from piles will obtain relief by using this ointment that we do not hesitate to make you this offer. Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

RUBE MARQUARD IN A NO-RUN, NO-HIT GAME

Big South-paw Toyed With the Brooklyn Team—White Sox Scored Sixteen Runs Against St. Louis While the Browns Went Scoreless —Boston Braves Lost Again

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, April 15—Rube Marquard, who jumped to the Brooklyn Federals during the winter and back to New York, celebrated his return to organized ball by pitching a no-hit game and shutting out the Brooklyn Nationals by a score of two to nothing. Rucker, the veteran left-hander of the Brooklyns, opened the New Yorker, and it was a great pitchers' battle. Only three men reached base on Marquard, two on base on balls and one on an error by Fletcher. But three balls were hit to the outfield. Marquard also helped win his own game by driving in the second run scored on Rucker.

Next to Marquard's pitching Lobert's all-round work featured. Until he flied out to Wheat in the seventh inning he had reached first base eight consecutive times, including yesterday's game.

Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn. . . . . | 000000000 | 0 | 2 |
| New York . . . . . | 000100100 | 2 | 6 | 1 |

Batteries—Rucker and Ragon, Miller; Marquard and Meyers.

St. Louis Beat Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 15—St. Louis defeated Chicago four to two in a listless game to-day. Cheney's wildness in the third inning caused his retirement. In this inning three bases on balls, three wild pitches, a stolen base and a single each off Cheney and Standridge, the recruit pitcher obtained from San Francisco, gave St. Louis the game. Dosk pitched in mid-season form in the pinches. Score:

| Chicago . . . . . | 010010000 | 2 | 5 | 1 |

Batteries, Dosk and Glenn; Cheney Standridge and Archer.

Boston Lost Again.

BOSTON, April 15 — Philadelphia defeated Boston again to-day 7 to 1. Hits bunched in two innings, together with errors by the Braves' infield, accounted for all the visitors' runs. Alernating flurries of rain, snow and hail swirled about the players during the game. The score:

|---|---|---|---|
| Boston . . . . . | 000100000 | 1 | 7 | 3 |

Batteries — Mayer and Killifer; Hughes, Strand and Gowdy.

Reds Evened It Up.

CINCINNATI, April 15—Cincinnati evened up matters with the Pittsburg team by winning the second game of the series here to-day 2 to 1. Two wild pitches by Benton in the fourth inning were responsible for Pittsburg's only run. Otherwise he pitched in mid-season form. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |

| Pittsburg . . . . | 000100000 | 1 | 5 | 1 |
| Cincinnati . . . . | 000001100 | 2 | 8 | 0 |

Batteries — Harmon and Gibson; Benton and Dooin.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

ST. LOUIS, April 15—By bunching hits and taking advantage of their opponetns' erros and bases on balls, the Chicago Americans this afternoon scored sixteen runs against St. Louis, which failed to send a man across the plate. Faber was invincible. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago . . . . . | 720221002 | 16 | 14 | 0 |
| St. Louis . . . . . | 000000000 | 0 | 7 | 5 |

Boston Trounced Athletics.

Philadelphia, April 15—Boston defeated Philadelphia here to-day by 5 to 3. With the score tied and two men out in the visitors' half of the ninth, Speaker walked. On the run-and-hit play Barry was pulled out of his position, and Lewis sent a single past short. Speaker took third on the play and scored by working a double steal with Lewis. The latter came home on Hoblitzell's single. Schang had his hand split by a wild pitch in the second inning. He will be out of the game for two or three weeks. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |

| Philadelphia . . . . | 000012000 | 3 | 7 | 2 |

Batteries—Collins, Mays and Carrigan; Bush, Wyckoff and Schang, McAvoy.

Detroit Turned the Tables.

Detroit, April 15—Detroit defeated Cleveland by 5 to 4 to-day in a game made noteworthy by the large number of extra base hits. The visitors made four doubles, while the Tigers garnered three triples and a home run. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |

Fisher Wild, But Effective.

Washington, April 15—Fisher passed eight men to-day, but his good work in the pinches held Washington to one run, and New York won a 3 to 1 victory. Harper for Washington was taken out in the first inning after he had passed three men and made a wild pitch. Ayers and Bentley finished the game. Score:

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE SCHOOL LEAGUE

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Public Schools' Baseball League was held yesterday afternoon in the Public Library when the following officers were elected for the year 1915:

Honorary President—Dr. Middleton.

President—Mr. Voaden.

Vice-President—Mr. Kerr.

Secretary-Treasurer—Mr. Roszel.

Schedule Committee—Messrs. Steer, Munro and Walkey.

The League passed a resolution that last year's rules be adopted with the addition that a Jr. IV. pupil playing in the Senior series cannot also play Junior.

NO EXPERIMENTS FOR REISLING

London Manager Has Only Tried Players

LONDON, April 15 — Canadian League fans, especially those of this city, will be interested in the fact that each and every new face on the London Baseball Club roster, to get into action here on May 10, have come to Manager Reisling well recommended by baseball exponents who are, and should be, in a position to tell the good from the poor ball tosser and cloister.

In all Manager Reisling has seventeen men under contract, but he expects to dispose of two men before reporting time, and with the addition of another mean will start operations with about sixteen players on the list. Reisling, unlike most other leaders, is satisfied with corraling good material in the first place and drilling them into a formidable scoring machine, instead of using the weeding out process in starting with a big squad of unknowns.

One of the players yet unsigned is an International League player, who is good beyond a shadow of a doubt, but Manager Reisling will require several more days in which to negotiate the deal for this class double A leaguer.

Taking into consideration, first of all the catching department, the club has one strong first stringer in Jack Danford, who was here during the early portion of last season, and only let go on account of his high salary. Danford after the showing he made with the Galt Wobbly League champions will have no trouble in developing into the best in the league, barring accidents. An injured thumb kept him from being grabbed by the Hamilton club at the end of the Wobbly season last year, or the Forest City club could have had the chance of resigning the Ohio farmer, who looked so good two years ago that Joe Tinker took him south with the Cincinnati Nationals.

New Prophet Smith.

LAMONIA, Iowa, April 16.—Frederick M. Smith, of St. Joseph, Mo., was elected president of the Organized Church of Latter Day Saints, to succeed the late Joseph Smith, according to an announcement yesterday. The request of the former prophet naming his son as his successor was complied with Wednesday night. The conference will adjourn this week. The new president is said to be recovering from an illness at Worcester, Mass.

Asher Guilty; Remanded for Inquiry.

TORONTO, April 16.—Found guilty by a jury in the Criminal Assize Court of attempting to murder Rev. J. McPherson Scott, Harry Asher, the young Montreal mission worker, was remanded by Chancellor Boyd to jail to be examined as to his sanity.

After hearing the verdict his lordship said he did not think it would be safe to allow Asher out on suspended sentence, as he had heard accused had threatened other people.

Section Man Killed.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., April 16.—James Winger, aged 35, Chippawa, was killed at Montrose, on the Michigan Central yards Wednesday night, being run over by some passing train. His body was found by Pollard, a switchman, about one o'clock. Winger had been employed as a section man.

Willard's Wife Talks of Their Golden Future

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 15.—The future is bright for a young mother in Los Angeles, whose four healthy, bright-faced children are also the children of Jess Willard, who won back for the white race the heavyweight prize-fighting championship of the world.

"My husband's wonderful victory has just one big meaning to me," said Mrs. Willard to-day, "and that is our little ones will have good things we've always longed to give them, and they can be educated as well as the children of the wealthiest and can live in surroundings that will help them to grow into strong and useful men and women.

Mrs. Willard spent a happy, sleepless and excited night in the little rose-covered bungalow in Hollywood, a suburb, where she and the children have lived while Jess was training for the fight with Johnson.

"Do you know the first thought that must have flashed through Jess's mind when he knew he had won the championship?" she asked. "I do; it was of little Jess." Here she hugged her son of sixteen months. "Look at him," said the mother, fondly. "He's a champion himself, right now, and I guess he and big Jess ought to be proud of each other."

"Really, it is too early to talk definitely about our future plans, though Jess made enough Monday to carry us through the next fifty years. I don't know what we will do until I see Jess, of course; that will be impossible for a while.

"When I last saw my husband we planned vaguely what we would do after he beat Johnson. I think I'll take the family and join him in New York. That is the theatrical centre and it will be better for Jess to have his headquarters there. Of course he intends to make as much out of the theatrical end as he can."

"Then the children can be educated in New York, and we can all live [illegible] bungalow, here. Jess always wanted to make a nice, quiet home for the children and me, I think, personally, that there could be a better place for a home than New York, and maybe after his theatrical tours we can return to California to live."

Mrs. Willard has been showered with congratulations by her neighbours ever since the night of the fight. But she prized most highly a "love cable" from Jess, announcing his victory over the negro champion and sending love to little Jess, the other children and Mrs. Willard.

Lakefield Items Of Interest

LAKEFIELD, April 15—Following are the minutes of a regular meeting of the Council of the Village of Lakefield, held in the Town Hall on Monday, April 12th:

There were present H. G. Fitzgerald, Reeve, and Councillors Charlton, Griffin, Kennedy and Madill.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and approved.

Communications from the Hydro-Electric Railway Association were read and approved.

Communications from the Hydro-Electric Railway Association were read.

Moved by Councillor Griffin, seconded by Councillor Charlton, that this municipality heartily endorses the Hydro-Electric Railway programme, as outlined in the memorial presented to the Honourable Mr. Hearst, and the Provincial Government, on Friday, March 26th, 1915, by a deputation representing the majority of the municipalities of Ontario.

And that as the construction of the said electric railways will not only give transportation facilities that at the present time are entirely inadequate to the needs of the Province, but will also furnish an easy and inexpensive means of supplying parts of the Province with Hydro-Electric light and power that would otherwise be largely denied these advantages, we respectively urge that your honourable government favourably consider the request contained in said memorial and grant to such roads a subsidy of $3,500 per mile.

And that as the memorial sets forth that any subsidy granted will not be needed for some time and will only be required as roads are constructed, we respectively urge that your honourable government make a pronouncement on this question as speedily as possible in order that the work may be proceeded with at once, believing that this will do much towards restoring public confidence and relieving considerable of the present unemployment.

And that copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. Mr. Hearst, M.P.P., Premier of Ontario, the member of the Legislature Assembly for this riding, and to the Secretary of the Hydro Electric Association of Ontario.—Carried.

Mr. Samuel White was present and requested repairs on Concession Street, also Mr. Robert Carter asked for repairs on Queen street, in front of the Commercial House, and Mr. A. G. Lawless asked for a short culvert on Queen street, all of which requests were referred to the Road and Sidewalk Committee.

Mr. Thomson Braden, on behalf of the Agricultural Society, asked for the usual grant.

Moved by Councillor Kennedy, seconded by Councillor Madill, that the Council grant the Agricultural Society the usual grant of $50.—Carried.

Mr. A. G. Lawless also addressed the Council regarding the Cigarette license, and the request was referred to the committee of the whole Council.

The Finance Committee presented a report recommending the payment of the following accounts:

Electric Light Co., March account, $59.37.

J. H. Davis, repairing hose wagon, $4.25; Bell Telephone Co., rent and tolls, $5.48.

W. J. Madill, snow ploughing, $5.50.

Jno. Johnson, 1200 ft. hemlock plank, $24.

Dr. M. R. Graham, salary, M. H. O., $20.

O. A. Langley, preparing by-law, $4.00.

Jas. Long, 24 hours, at 15c., $3.60.

Robert White, 29 hours, at 15c., $3.30.

G. DiNobih, 27 hours at 15c., $4.05.

Sylvester Murdiff, 20 hours, at 15c, $3.00.

The report was received on motion of Councillors Madill and Kennedy.

The meeting then adjourned.

Social Evening Of St. John's Choir

Enjoyable Affair in Honour of Mrs. Seward

The choristers of St. John's after choir practice last night assembled in the Guild room for an informal social on the occasion of Mrs. Seward's presence on returning from Europe. Canon Davidson, who was able to be present for a short time, after his illness, spoke of deep appreciation of the work of both Mr. and Mrs. Seward in the church for so many years and expressed great pleasure in the prospect of a brilliant career for Miss Gladys Seward. Mr. H. W. Morphet and Mr. G. Brown, the other veteran choristers, were heard from and a very pleasant time was spent with music and refreshments until 10.30 p.m. Dainties were provided by the ladies of the choir under the inspection of Mrs. H. W. Morphet, and Mrs. R. J. Devey, musical numbers were given by Miss K. Moore, Mr. Packman, Mr. Ward, Mrs. Evans and Mr. R. J. Devey. 'Blest Be the Tie That Binds,' and the 'National Anthem' concluded a pleasant evening.

"The Locked Door" At The Royal

To-night you can be impressed with a great lesson by coming to the Royal Theatre and see the production of "The Locked Door." This is a graphic and thrilling representation, founded on the terrible holocost of lives during the last great tenement fire in New York City. It teaches a lesson to those who are careless in complying with the regulations regarding safety to human life.

DEATH OF MR. WM. DARNLEY

Took Place in Toronto—Resided Here For a Number of Years

The death occurred at his late residence, 136 Dupont Street, Toronto, on Wednesday of this week of a former resident of this city, in the person of Mr. Wm. Darnley.

The late Mr. Darnley was well known here, having resided on Burnham Street, East City, for a number of years. With his wife and daughter, Miss Helen, who survive him, he moved to Toronto about a year ago. He was in his fifty-seventh year. He had many friends in Peterborough, who will learn with deep regret of his death, and who sympathize with his wife and daughter in their bereavement.

The funeral took place in Toronto this afternoon, interment being in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

WEDDING BELLS

POWERS—McAULIFFE.

St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Wednesday morning, when Miss Etta McAuliffe became the bride of Mr. Neil Powers of Otonabee. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Fitzpatrick.

The bride, who was gowned in white silk crepe de chene, trimmed with pearls, wore a large white hat with plumes and carried a boquet of of white carnations and maiden hair fern, entered the Church to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Agnes Scollard. She was attended by Miss Annie Crough of Smith, who wore a suit of blue with hat to match and carried pink carnations. Mr. Frank Moloney of Ennismore acted as best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple returned to the home of the bride's parents, where about thirty-five sat down to a dainty dejeuner.

After the usual congratulations the young couple motored to Peterborough, where they took the 4.20 train for Toronto, Walkerton, and other points west.

The bride travelled in a suit of blue, with hat to match. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold pendant, set with pearls; to the bridesmaid a gold bracelet, and to the groomsman a gold tie pin.

The bride received many beautiful and costly presents showing the high esteem in which she is held by her many friends.

After their return Mr. and Mrs. Powers will reside in Otonabee.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM BATTEN.

A highly respected resident of Cavan, in the person of Mrs. William Batten, passed away last evening after a short illness. Death was due to pneumonia. Deceased was in her eighty-fifth year. She resided with her son on lot 19, concession 11, of Cavan township. Her husband predeceased her thirteen years ago.

The survivors are two sons and one daughter, namely, David and William of Cavan and Mrs. M. Campbell of Peterborough.

The late Mrs. Batten was born in Monaghan, Ireland. She came to this country when a young girl, first residing in Monaghan township and latterly in Cavan.

The funeral will take place on Monday. Service will be held at the house at 1:30 o'clock. Funera will leave at two. Interment will take place at Little Lake cemetery.

SPRING HAS RETURNED TO THE BATTLEFIELDS

And the Man, of Course, Ate It

Which Ends One of the Most Remarkable Fishing Stories of the Year

BELLEFONTE, Pa., April 16.—There is a little hotel here where the chintz shaded windows on one side of the house will be in great demand until August 1, to-day ushering in the opening of the trout season, and also a brand new scheme in the way of trout fishing.

Right under the windows on the favored side is the stream. An angler leisurely smoking as he rested from one of the windows to-day conceived an idea. He also caught a dandy speckled trout. He reeled it in, meanwhile calling to a cook below to bring out a skillet from the kitchen. Amazed, out she came with the skillet and held it while the fisherman dropped the trout into it. Then he refilled his pipe and waited until the cook brought the trout, all ready to be eaten, up to his room.

IF CONSTIPATED OR BILIOUS "CASCARETS"

To-night! Clean Your Bowels and Stop Headache, Colds, Sour Stomach

Take a Cascaret to-night to cleanse your Liver, Stomach and Bowels, and you will surely feel great by morning. You men and women who have headache, coated tongue, a bad cold, are bilious, nervous, upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach, or have backache and feel all worn-out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? Cascarets immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember, a Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning. A 10-cent box from your druggist means healthy bowel action; a clear head and cheerfulness for months. Don't forget the children.

French Airships Drop Bombs on German Plants

POWDER MAGAZINE THOUGHT DESTROYED

Tem Bombs Dropped by French Airmen on Powder Factory at Rottwell—Metz Was Also Visited

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, April 17.—Allied aviators have been very active on the western front. A squadron flew over the Rhine and dropped bombs on workships in the suburbs of Baden which were being utilized for the manufacture of shells. Ten bombs were also dropped on the powder factory at Rottwell in Wuerttemburg, six striking the mark, and as a huge red flame shot up surrounded by dense smoke it is believed that the magazine was destroyed. Another airship squadron dropped twenty bombs, the majority of which struck their mark, on the electric station ten miles north of Metz which supplies the town and forts of Metz with power and light. The aviators report that much smoke arose from the central station. On the return journey the allied airships encountered three hostile aviators, to whom they gave chase, forcing them to land.

Although subjected to a heavy cannonade from the Metz forts, the allied squadron suffered no mishaps. The aeroplanes which visited Baden were struck by shell splinters, but returned safely to the lines.

Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent telegraphs the following German version of the Rottwell raid: "The Stuttgaart army commander announces that yesterday forenoon a French biplane attacked the powder factory at Rottwell, Wuerttemburg. The anti-aircraft troops opened fire on the machine. The airman dropped several bombs, killing two civilians and seriously wounding one person. The material damage was slight, the operation of the factory being undisturbed. The airman, whose machine was damaged, disappeared in a south-westerly direction."

TRIED TO WRECK CATHEDRAL.

Several bombs have been dropped by a German Taube aeroplane in the vicinity of the cathedral at Amiens. Ten persons were killed or wounded. The material damage done was slight. There are a number of Canadians in the Amiens Hospital.

The enemy continues to launch counter-attacks at Les Esparges, but without success, while at Bois de Montmare three German batteries were silenced and an ammunition depot blown up.

Reign of Terror in Smyrna Troops Pillaging All Shops

LONDON, April 17.—The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Company, writing under date of Friday, says:

"Turkish headquarters reports that a cruiser yesterday bombarded the Dardanelles fortifications from the entrance.

An official statement issued Friday by the French Ministry of Marine said:

"Yesterday morning a French battleship destroyed the railway bridge on the line which joins the interior regions of Syria with the City of Saint Jean d'Acre."

The troops are reported to be pillaging all shops for army supplies. Notables have been robbed of all their property and driven into the interior.

Numerous assassinations are reported.

Telegraphing from Sofia under date of Thursday, the Times' correspondent says: "A Russian fleet has bombarded Kara Burun, which lies inside the Tchatalja line on the Black Sea, about fifteen miles north of Midia. Travellers from Dedeaghatch report that a fresh batch of German officers has arrived in Constantinople. They say also that the greater part of the garrison of Adrianople, Demotica and Kirk-kilisseh have been withdrawn for the defence of the capital."

Rings Given in Hero's Memory Bring $5,250 at Red Cross Sale

LONDON, April 16.—A tremendous stir was caused at the Red Cross sale at Christie's to-day by the auction of two potato rings, fine specimens of the art of eighteenth century Irish silversmiths. They were presented by the parents of Lieutenant Pepys Cockerill, who was killed in Egypt in his country's service, in memory of their son.

At once Lord Newlands offered $2,625 and after a pause the first was sold for that price. Lord Newlands also bought the second potato ring for the same price.

Then Mr. Anderson the auctioneer, announced that Lord Newlands had bought the rings for the purpose of restoring them to Lieut. Cockerill's parents as a memento to the gallantry of their young son, whose worth Lord Newlands had learned to appreciate when the young officer was at the Foreign Office. Christie's, after occasions of great picture sales, has resounded with cheers, but never with such emotion and patriotic fervour as when this announcement was made.

A silver wager cup presented by Queen Alexandra, was bought by Baron de Bartendine for $740. A Louis XV. tortoise-shell inkstand, presented by Mrs. Zachary Merton, was sold for $1,050.

A plain two-handled cup of the eighteenth century, engraved with the arms of Admiral Frankland, brought $650. An Elizabethan tiger ware jug, presented by Baron Alfred Rothschild, sold for $650. Sir Ernest Cassel bought back a set of three oblong seventeenth century tea caddies he had presented, for $740. The day's total was nearly $20,000.

An electric flat iron has been made of glass so that it can be turned on and and used as a lamp.

BABY'S FACE MASS OF ERUPTION

Spread Over Head and Neck. Caused Disfigurement, Burning and Itching. Cuticura Healed.

1 Ribernia Ave., West Toronto, Ont.—"First we noticed a rash on our child's face which soon began to spread all over his head and then around his neck. It was in red patches on his face, then pimples began to form which broke and matter was running from them. His face and head was a mass of eruption and it caused a very bad disfigurement, also burning and itching.

"We were recommended to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In about six weeks they completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. Wm. Tucker, Feb. 19, 1914.

LONDON PREPARED FOR THE ZEPPELINS

Londoners Expected An Attack Last Night But it Did Not Materialize—German Airship Returns Safely to Base

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, April 17.—One of two Zeppelins that Germany gave Austria fell into the Adriatic while manoeuvring off Pola according to dispatches received here to-day. Every member of her crew perished.

AN ATTACK OF ZEPPELINITIS.

LONDON, April 17.—London and the east coast towns suffered from "Zeppelinitis" to-day. In the excited minds of Essex villagers every cloud concealed a German dirigible or aeroplane. Wild reports reached here almost hourly carrying fresh rumours of Zeppelin raids.

Early to-day, while the capital was in pitch darkness, several telephone messages reported another attack upon Essex and Suffolk. A German airship, it was reported, passed near Colchester, dropping several bombs and then flew over Ipswich and Felixstone. Several hours passed without any confirmation and the Admiralty announced that the report was probably untrue. A Zeppelin raid uon London was fully expected last night. Because it did not come, Londoners are equally certain that the attack will be made to-night, weather conditions permitting. Consequently, all precautions taken last night, when all lights were extinguished and motor cars patrolled all highways into London will be observed to-night and Sunday night.

RETURNS SAFELY.

BERLIN, via wireless to London, April 17.—"The German naval airship that bombarded the defended English east coast towns on the nights of April 15 and 16, despite heavy fire from English guns, has returned safely," said an official statement from the War Office to-day.

RUSSIANS REDISTRIBUTING FORCES FOR NEXT PHASE OF BATTLE

Will be Waged in the Region of the Uszok Pass—No Important News May Now be Heard for a Period of Two Weeks

PETROGRAD, April 17.—Taking advantage of a lull in the Carpathian fighting, the Russians are redistributing their forces for the next great phase of the battle which will be waged in the region of the Uszok Pass.

For a period of two weeks, there may be no important news from the Carpathians, officials said to-day. The centres of both Slav and Austro-German armies have fought to exhaustion north of the Usiok, and severe spring freshets have brought the fighting to a halt.

LONDON, April 17. — Although a thaw has set in on the Carpathian mountains and the roads have been turned into mud and districts are inundated by swollen streams, the fighting continues. The Russians report that they have taken further heights in the mountain ranges and repulsed attacks in the vicinity of Rostoki and also in the direction of the Stry, where the Austro-Germans were attempting an outflanking movement. The Austrians make similar claims, and disclose the fact that the Russians have been attacking also in the South-east Poland and Western Galicia, apparently with a view of preventing the Austrians from sending any more reinforcements into the Carpathians.

The Russian official statement describes an exciting combat whereby the Czar's troops gained temporary possession of two heights. Appatently without prelude to artillery, the Russian infantry crept up in silence to the Austrian barbed wire entanglements between these heights. Breaking down the wire and swarming through the opening they took the defenders by surprise, and all those that did not take to flight were taken prisoner after a brief engagement with bayonets.

A despatch from Geneva declares that Vienna advices received there tell of the disciplining of 95 Austrian officers for negligence, which resulted in the annihilation of a division of reserves near Bereg and an Austrian defeat in the Sereo region.

New Kiss Means Much to Faith

It is Brotherly Love to an Extent But There's Something Else About It, Somehow

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 16.—A new kiss, light as a feather in itself but heavy with possibilities for the Christian mind attuned to receive it on the neck or elsewhere, was explained in court here recently by Henry Hopper, who is a Christian Israelite, if he does say so himself.

Henry hopped into court to answer a charge of kissing Mrs. John Thornberry on the neck, the which her husband, John Thornberry, asserted was the ninth degree of disorderly conduct. Mr. Hopper then explained that he had kissed Mrs. Thornberry merely to show her the right way—not of kissing—but of life. She liked it, he said, which, as any Israelite knows, is going some.

Mr. Thornberry, who was in court accompanied by his old friend, righteous indignation, arose during the hearing and pointing an accusing finger at Henry Hopper's chin, said:

"May I ask you a question?"

"Yes and no," answered the defendant.

"How did my wife get those marks on her neck?"

"Because," said Henry Hopper holdinging his head high by stretching his neck, "I kissed her."

"Aha, Aha," said Mr. Thornberry, knowingly, as he sat down on his hat.

"Why did you kiss her?" asked the court.

"I kissed her," said Henry Hopper, "to give her Christian hope and reform her to the Christian faith."

"Did you permit this man to kiss you?" asked the court turning to Mrs. Thornberry.

"I did," said Mrs. Thornberry, "he was like a brother to me."

"Some brother," said Mr. Thornberry.

The case was dismissed.

High Prices For Cheese

Rates May Go Away Up—Demand For a Good Quality

KINGSTON, April 17.—"I would advise the dairymen of this country to produce as much cheese as they possibly can this season," said G. G. Publow, chief dairy instructor for Eastern Ontario, addressing members of the Frontenac Cheese Board. "They can afford to do it, as the price paid will be sufficient to reward them for their labour. There is a grand opportunity for the dairymen to increase the reputation for Canadian cheese, as thousands of people will be eating it this year who never had it before. Don't be surprised to see it sell for 15 cents on the board."

SPRING BLOOD IS WATERY BLOOD

How to Get New Health and New Strength at This Season

Spring ailments are not imaginary. Even the most robust find the winter months most trying to their health. Confinement indoors, often in overheated and nearly always badly ventilated rooms—in the home, the office, the shop and the school—taxes the vitality of even the strongest. The blood becomes thin and watery and is clogged with impurities. Some people have headaches and a feeling of langour. Others are low-spirited and nervous. Still others are troubled with disfiguring pimples and skin eruptions; while some get up in the morning feeling just as tired as when they went to bed. These are all spring symptoms that the blood is out of order and that a medicine is needed. Many people take purgative medicines in the spring. This is a serious mistake. You cannot cure yourself with a medicine that gallops through your system and leaves you weaker still. This is all that a purgative does. What you need to give you health and strength in the spring is a tonic medicine that will enrich the blood and soothe the jangled nerves. And the one always reliable tonic and blood builder is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills not only banish spring weakness but guard you against the more serious ailments that follow, such as anaemia, nervous debility, indigestion, rheumatism and other diseases due to bad blood. In proof of this Mrs. D. E. Hughes, Hazenmore, Sask., says: "About a year ago I was badly run down, my nerves were all unstrung, and I could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. As I was a long ways from a doctor I decided to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and in the course of a few weeks I felt like a new person. As an all round restorative I can heartily recommend this medicine."

If you are ailing this spring you cannot afford, in your own interest, to overlook so valuable a medicine as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

"Yes, in a way. He got here an hour or two after it came and must have let himself in with his own key. He walked in on me while I was doing some sewing in my own sitting-room. He said that the police had asked him to keep out of the way, because if it was known that he was alive it might hamper them. He told me not even to let the maids know that he was here, and he came straight up to this room and locked himself in. I had made a bed ready, but he has slept on the couch over there." She nodded towards a big settee under the window. "He said the bedroom might do for a lady friend he was expecting who might arrive at any moment. He told me, too, that it might be necessary to leave suddenly."

The old lady had, it was evident, made a good guess at the identity of her questioner or she would not have answered so freely, in spite of the detective's authoritative manner.

Foyle put one or two further questions to her and then dismissed her with a quiet word of thanks. He began to see that he had struck harder than he knew when he had descended on the house in the guise of a burglar. Dalehurst Grange was, of course, a rendezvous, and the Princess Petrovska was on her way to join Grell. The superintendent rubbed his hands together as he thought of the surprise in store for her.

Dawn was breaking over the woods when Robert Grell woke with a shiver. He stood up and stretched himself. "Good morning, Foyle," he said genially. "I'm afraid I dropped off, but I've had rather a wearying time lately. Now, what's the programme? I suppose a bath is out of the question, or"—with a glance at his fettered hands—"even a wash may be dangerous. Faith, you don't believe in running risks!"

Foyle smiled in response to the banter. "Only a fool runs risks when there's nothing to be gained. But I'm prepared to run one if you like to fall in with a plan I've thought out. You're not under arrest yet. You needn't be if you care to undertake to give evidence when the inquest is resumed. For you are at present the only person who can clear up the whole thing. Mind you, it would depend on what came out at the inquest whether we should then arrest you. I can give no guarantee about it. But if you accept, all that will be necessary is to quarter a couple of my men with you for the time being."

Grell walked to the window and stared out upon the wooded country. Presently he wheeled upon the superintendent with a short laugh. "My dear man," he cried, "you will harp on that one point. I appreciate your offer of comparative liberty, but if I accepted I should do so under false pretences, because my evidence will be that I know nothing."

"You can't stop my knowing the truth," answered Foyle equably. "Sooner or later I shall be able to prove it. And if you persist it will make things much more unpleasant for you."

The other said nothing for a while. A struggle was taking place in his mind that was indicated with a nervous twitching of the fingers. His shoulders were bent and his head bowed. Foyle waited patiently. Outside a bird started a "jig-jig-jig—brrr" that set the teeth on edge. The trees, stirred by a newly sprung up breeze, rustled uneasily.

The detective rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "Will you tell me if you had any visitors on the evening of the murder?" he inquired, blandly ignoring the other's refusal. He noticed a quick flash of surprise pass over Grell's countenance and drew his own conclusions. Swiftly a new thought came to him. "Did Goldenburg come to you alone?"

The prisoner remained silent, and Foyle knew that he was considering the advisability of answering. "I don't see why you shouldn't know that, if you want to. He came with a friend of mine. She left shortly afterwards."

"She?" Foyle seized on the word. "It was a woman, then?"

Grell bit his lip. He had said more than he meant to. The superintendent frowned thoughtfully, and his active brain was beginning to see things more clearly. It was a full five minutes before he spoke again as one making an assertion rather than asking a question.

"That would be Lola, of course." His blue eyes met Grell's frown with an ingenuous stare. "This is beginning to get clearer, Mr. Grell. Goldenburg was blackmailing you, eh? Maybe he had letters which you wouldn't have liked Lady Eileen to see—what?"

An ejaculation came from Grell. The detective directed his gaze to a picture opposite him, and continued, as though thinking aloud—

"Now I come to think of it, was Goldenburg a relative of yours? The likeness is amazing. Well, suppose for the sake of argument, he was. And Lola—where does Lola stand? Was it to her, by any chance, that the letters were directed? Was she merely a friend, or did she stand in closer relationship to either of you?"

Grell yawned ostentatiously, but although Foyle had been apparently looking away from him he had followed the effect on the other's face of every one of the seemingly casual questions he had put.

"I am afraid I am boring you. It's a bad habit, thinking aloud."

"It does seem futile," agreed Grell. "You surely have little need to exercise yourself about these things."

"Ah, you think so? I am beginning to think that something more is necessary. It may be—of course, this is only for the sake of illustration—that the dagger was handled by some one after the murder had occurred. However, let the subject drop. Perhaps your housekeeper will get us some breakfast while one of the girls runs into Dalehurst."

While waiting for a reply, he rang the bell and gave some directions, with a note to the housekeeper. The breakfast that she ultimately served up was a credit to her skill as a cook. Both men ate with an appetite that the unusual nature of the situation did not destroy, though Grell found the handcuffs troublesome.

The sound of a motor car horn was borne faintly in upon them. In a few minutes the housekeeper ushered Green and Malley into the room. The chief inspector returned Foyle's greetings and flung his heavy overcoat on to a chair. His eyes wandered over the prisoner with a little pardonable curiosity. Grell bore the inspection with a smile.

"I congratulate you, sir," said Green. "We'll have the thing fairly straightened out in a day or two now."

"I hope so," said Foyle. "Mr. Malley, will you stay with this gentleman for five minutes? I want to speak to you in another room, Green."

He led the way to the little sitting-room, through the window of which he had affected an entrance. A look of comprehension spread over Green's face as he noticed the missing diamond pane. "Malley told me he passed you in the village yesterday. You got your man quicker than I should have thought possible in the circumstances. How did he take it?"

The superintendent gave a brief recapitulation of the steps he had taken since he left London. Green rubbed his grizzled head and followed the recital with keen appreciation. It did not occur to him to feel hurt that Foyle had acted independently.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I've got a search-warrant in my pocket, and we were coming over this house to-day. I didn't anticipate much profit, because he could have easily slipped away into the woods. I got the county constabulary to put a cordon of patrols round about, and hoped to drive him into their hands. But it was a slim chance. However, we've got him now."

"Yes, we've got him now," agreed Foyle. "There only remains the Petrovska woman, and we'll have her to-day. Listen."

He told of what he had learned from the housekeeper, and they discussed the probabilities of the woman reaching Dalehurst Grange. If she manage to escape Blake and the other detectives who were hot-foot on her trail there was little doubt but that she would walk blindly into a trap. That she had not already reached the Grange and departed Foyle was satisfied, although she had had ample time to travel from Liverpool. As Green phrased it, "she might almost have walked it." But the exigencies of the pursuit might have brought about delay if she attempted to confuse her track. If Foyle had been able to get in touch with Blake he would have called him off in order to let her proceed unfettered. That could not be done.

"She'll not dream anything's wrong here if we're careful," said Green. "Will you wait for her, or shall I?"

"This is up to you, Green. I'll leave you. You might have had Malley, but I can't drive the car myself, and I want to get back to town. Do you think you'll be able to manage alone?"

"I think so," said the chief inspector confidently.

"I'll get the local superintendent to send up a couple of plain-clothes men as we pass. You'll bring her straight back to town."

"Ay!"

In a quarter of an hour all preparations were finished. Malley was in the driving-seat of the car. Foyle and Grell sat in the tonneau, and it was no coincidence that the right hand of the prisoner and the left hand of the detective were hidden beneath the rug which covered their knees. For Foyle had handcuffed his man to himself. It was merely a matter of travelling precaution. The superintendent did not believe that Grell would attempt to escape, but there was no excuse for giving him any temptation. Anyway, it did no harm.

"You'll charge him with the murder directly you reach town, I suppose?" whispered Green, standing by the step of the car.

"Murder?" repeated Foyle. "Grell did not commit the murder. I shall detain him a day before making any charge against him at all. Drive on, Malley. See you later, Green."

The car whizzed away. Chief?Inspector Green stood bareheaded in front of the house, scratching his head, and with a look of bewilderment on his face.

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Two Steamers Detained.

LONDON, April 16.—The Norwegian steamer Albis, from New York to Copenhagen, with a cargo of foodstuffs, which was detained at the Scottish seaport of Kirkwall on April 5, arrived at Middlesbro, on the Tees, April 12, where a majority of her cargo was thrown into the prize court.

The Danish steamship Annam, from San Francisco for Aarhus, detained at Kirkwall, April 7, was taken to Hull, April 12, where the vessel is being held pending an investigation regarding her consignees.

Wife Is Arrested.

PORT ARTHUR, April 16. — Mrs. William Leithinen has been arrested on the charge of conspiracy in connection with murder of her husband at Kaministiqua last fall, for which Amelia Palma Wednesday was sentenced. It is alleged that he had been intimate with the woman for years and it was mutual desire to get rid of Leithinen that caused him to kill the man. He said the woman first suggested it and that she bought the revolver.

SLAVES of the HABIT

By A. R. Parkhurst, Jr.

THE unceasing fight conducted by the New York police to check the illicit traffic in drugs, as described exclusively to readers of this newspaper last week by Lieutenant Henry Scherb, chief of the Narcotic Squad, is yet in its infancy. This much I learned from a tour of the chief drug marts and haunts of the "fiends," as well as a visit to the Tombs Prison, where Lieutenant Scherb and Warden Hanley made it possible for me to talk with scores of those addicted to and suffering from the ravages of drugs.

The impressions gathered after such close contact with those whose sole thought is of "coke," heroin, morphine or opium are so conflicting and so tumultuous as to almost prompt the thought that it is to be regretted these drugs do not bring a speedy and merciful end rather than the lingering deaths these slaves of the habit suffer when they become so abandoned as to refuse the cure that can be effected if they would but endure its tortures. For, after all they are dead—dead to all sense of right or wrong, dead to [illegible] common to a normal human, and dead to every ambition in life except that which might bring an unlimited supply of their favorite drug.

Everything that makes life really worth while already has been sacrificed. They have sold their souls and sunk to the very lowest depths of degradation. Their horizon is that of the underworld, and once they become enslaved they shun the gaze of their fellows, remain hidden in their garrets and cellars and shrink from the glare of sunlight, content to slink forth under cover of darkness to replenish their supply of nerve quieting poison, and then creep back unseen to their filthy hiding places.

Lieutenant Scherb and the seventeen alert and astute young policemen working under his direction maintain that they are making it more difficult each day for the fiends to procure their drugs. This is no exaggeration. Not only do I talk to the fiends themselves, but I discussed the police crusade with vendors of the drug—men who make huge profits in thus trafficking in souls. Wholesalers, retailers and "carriers"—the latter a class who haunt the streets and sell the drugs in "decks," or little packages, to those with the habit—agree that police "interference" has made the sale of narcotics an extremely hazardous undertaking—so hazardous, in fact, that the retailers and carriers demand almost three times as much for their "decks" as they did six months ago.

Doubtless almost as much is being sold to-day, but the trade is being so surreptitiously carried on that none but those well known to the carriers are allowed to purchase. A stranger to these runners, no matter how intense his suffering for want of the drug, might just as well try to buy the Metropolitan Museum of Art with a plugged nickel as to buy one "deck" of the "flake."

Unless he is a "regular" he can't belong, and that is all there is to it. The police have accomplished this, and more. So intelligent has their study of the situation here been that they know almost every retailer and carrier in the city. Furthermore, they know the great majority of those "with the habit," and that accounts for the presence in our prisons of so many drug fiends who were committed, convicted and sentenced on a charge of having the drug in their possession.

Laws recently enacted by nations and States have made these commitments possible. The only criticism of them that can be made is that they are not more sweeping and more drastic. As these laws stand now only certain of the habit forming drugs are under the ban. Others, just as baneful and far cheaper in cost, are exempt and the police are powerless to arrest those who have them in their possession.

"Give us power to arrest every dispenser of all habit forming drugs as well as those having them in their possession and we would put such a crimp in the curse here that it could never come back," members of the Narcotic Squad say. And these earnest, hard working men are right. Our lax laws protect rather than expose vendors.

The first question put to me by one of the fiends he introduced me to was, "Have you got the habit, too?" "The habit" is the badge and the bond of fellowship among these slaves. If you have acquired "the habit" arms are spread wide to receive you, and doors that are locked and barred to normals are flung wide and you are welcomed to the inner shrine of oblivion.

Under this man's chaperonage I was admitted without questioning to back rooms of drug stores whose daily receipts from drug sales exceed by ten times those of all other articles combined. I could have bought "snow," or "happy dust," or "coke," as cocaine is known in the underworld, or heroin, morphine or opium in any quantity desired. Any one of half a dozen habitues tendered a "deck" and invited me to "sniff" with them. Needles there were a-plenty, and had I been disposed to try its effect hypodermics and their contents were within my reach. All that I lacked was the inclination. The means were at hand.

Had I chosen to "hit the pipe" layouts were near by and I could have smoked to my heart's content, and with adepts at the fine art to "cook the pills" for me.

Men and women who have had "the habit" for years all confessed that the police have accomplished wonders in the few months they have been conducting their systematic crusade against the drug evil. But, they add, and without a dissenting voice, "We with the habit are the sufferers." They are a unit in asserting that it is getting more difficult each day to purchase the drug. "We can still get it," they say, "and chances are we always will be able to get it; but we have to pay so much more for it! Decks we were accustomed to buy for twenty-five cents a year or so ago we now pay a dollar for, and the price is [illegible]."

"Suppose it gets so high you can't purchase it?" I asked.

"Oh, we'll get it. Once you have 'the habit' you'll steal for it, and without one twinge of conscience. If necessary we'd kill to get it, for when it gets a grip on you nothing is permitted to stand in the way of satisfying the craving that consumes you."

While in the back room of one of these drug stores the tragic climax to the raid the police made on the drug store conducted by Frank W. Leonard, at No. 90 East End avenue, was under discussion. Leonard, it will be recalled, was convicted and sentenced last summer for selling morphine and cocaine. After he was liberated from prison the police kept a close watch on his place. Doubtless Leonard knew what a second conviction would mean. Therefore when the police swooped down on his establishment a few weeks ago he was prepared for them. As Detectives Masson and Graham entered the store Leonard peered from behind the curtain which obscured a view of the back room and exclaimed:—"Hello! You here again? Well, I am ready."

The detectives made their way to the back room, which was luxuriously appointed as his living quarters. By chance they espied a secret cupboard in which Leonard stored his supply of habit forming drugs, and these they confiscated. The supply, at retail, was worth in the neighborhood of $1,000.

Told that he was under arrest, Leonard prepared to accompany the policemen to the nearest police station. As they reached the sidewalk Leonard was seen to raise his hand to his mouth, and an instant later he pitched forward in Masson's arms. Before the policeman could lower the inanimate form to the sidewalk Leonard was dead. The police say he swallowed a quick acting poison and in this way cheated the law.

"Leonard did right," said one of the fiends. "He had the habit, too, and if he had been sent away for a long stretch where he couldn't get his dope he would have died a hundred horrible deaths. If they ever get me right, and I have to face a long stretch up the river, I'll do the same thing."

And that is the viewpoint of the man with the habit who doesn't want to be cured. There are many, though, just as firmly gripped by a drug who are sincerely anxious to be released from its clutches. All they need is the initiative and moral courage.

The rest medical skill can accomplish. Some of these men and women told me that they hope to see the day when the police crusade now in force shall make it impossible to purchase a habit forming drug of any sort at any price. "Then we'll have to quit," they said. "But as long as it is within our reach we'll keep on buying and sniffing and smoking it."

I was told that in the Tombs I would find the drug fiend at his very worst. Accordingly I went there and Lieutenant Scherb and his chief aid, known to the underworld as "Harris," accompanied me.

When we made known our mission to Warden Hanley that official exclaimed: "I'll let you talk to one of the most confirmed drug fiends that ever entered this prison."

The fiend, whom for the sake of convenience we will call Smith, since all will agree after hearing his story that it would be almost criminal to reveal his identity, was sent for.

In a few moments a young man entered the warden's private office, and I was introduced to the "fiend." To my amazement I recognized him at once as an actor well known to Broadway and not so long ago leading man for one of the feminine stars of stageland. Tall, alert and of superb figure, the bloom of youth and health stamped on his rosy cheeks and eyes that fairly sparkled as he talked, the young actor grasped my hand and said:—"How did you find me? I thought my secret was safe."

I at once thought I was the victim of a huge joke. I'll confess that I was deeply shocked to find this young actor in the canvas overalls that some of the Tombs "trusties" wear, but to connect him with the "horrible example" I had expected to see was too preposterous to countenance for a second.

But I wasn't permitted to remain long in doubt. After a whispered word with the warden, Smith turned to me and said:—

"Yes, the warden is right. I am the horrible example of a dope fiend. After practically throwing away my life you find me here a prisoner in the Tombs.

"True, I am not a felon, but worse still—a man who knew better and one who had everything that goes to make life worth while. As you know, I was a high salaried actor. Within three years I went down hill after contracting the habit until I was the consort of thieves and all those who go to make up the underworld, for you will find if you study the problem that those with "the habit" all sink to the same level, and it matters not from what walk in life they emanate. A few months ago I was about the worst looking specimen to be found in New York. I was wild-eyed, cadaverous and emaciated looking. Every nerve in my body was aquiver and at the drop of a pin I'd almost jump out of my skin. I don't think I saw the sun in three years. I prowled around at night in places where those with "the habit" congregate and I've done everything from sniffing coke to eating heroin and morphine and smoking opium. I was as fond of the hypo [the needle] as the rest of them and had my supply of drugs been cut off I would have committed murder to get more.

"How did I contract the habit? Oh, the same old story—bad company. When travelling with the theatrical company of which I was leading man we went to the Pacific coast. In the company was a man who was fond of 'hitting the pipe.' He talked so much about it that out of curiosity I determined to try it myself. It was in San Francisco that I tried it first. It made me deathly ill, but I went at it again and grew to like it. Then followed a terribly hard season of long and short jumps, with many one night stands mixed in. On days when there were no matinees it was hard to kill time, and no more pleasant way developed than that of 'smoking' and lapsing into that comatose state where one's dreams take pleasant and exquisite flights. It was but a short step from the pipe to other drugs. As long as the money held out it was opium or morphine, but when funds ran low and I was unable, due mainly to a lack of ambition, to procure an engagement, I found cocaine easy to get, and its exhilarating effect was pleasant, to say the least. Heroin had the exact opposite effect, but it at least deadened the senses and helped one to forget, and that was what I most earnestly desired. In lucid moments, when I could see myself as I really was and then look back on my wasted life, it only required a little courage to climb to the parapet of one of our high bridges and do a Brodie into the river and thence to the Great Beyond. But that courage I lacked, for the most cowardly of all humans is the man or woman with 'the habit.'

"It is useless for me to dwell on the past. Suffice it to say that my associates were all addicted to the habit, and it mattered not whether a man was a thief or a murderer, he was one of us, and our blunted sensibilities would not permit us to differentiate when it came to picking friends.

"Finally I was arrested for having a supply of drugs in my possession. That was my salvation, although I didn't know it at the time. I was committed and, like all dope fiends, I suffered the torments of the damned during my term of imprisonment. I was sent to Blackwell's Island and until I got on to the ropes and learned how to get my daily supply of drugs I was like a wild beast. I had known Warden Hanley in my better days and I had heard other prisoners on the island say that Mr. Hanley never refused a helping hand to those who wanted to help themselves. I made up my mind to seek a cure and accordingly I went to see the Warden.

"He gave me a letter to a physician in a New York hospital and I was committed to that institution. My case was such a desperate one that they decided to give me what is known as the 'belladonna cure.' And let me say right here that any person who can survive that treatment is little short of superhuman.

"The treatment consists of an hourly injection of belladonna for a period of seventy-two hours. I stood it for fifty-six hours and I want to say that hell itself would be preferable to the agonies I endured. [illegible] that can possibly beset brain and body. Every second was a life [illegible] finally I prayed the cool fiend to end my suffering and [illegible] punishment my past might merit. At the end of the fifty-sixth hour I was in such a state that I raved and swore that unless I was liberated at once I would commit murder. As I was a voluntary prisoner and one who seemed of such little use to myself or others I was turned out and told to work out my own salvation or return to the old life as I preferred.

"Naturally I was in such a terribly wrought up state that my first thought upon finding myself free was to seek some drug to brace me up. Within a day or so I was back in the old haunts and at the same old tricks just as persistently as I had ever been. But with it all there lurked in the back of my addled brain a desire to be cured. I had heard wonderful stories of how the resident physician of the Tombs was effecting really marvellous cures. Then and there I decided to commit some offence that would land me in the Tombs for a brief stay. I was caught with drugs again and to the Tombs I went for a period of several months.

"When I came here there was no more horrible looking specimen in this big prison. You see me to-day! I have gained seventy-odd pounds. My appetite is good and I never give drugs of any sort a thought without a shudder. I have been cured, and as God is my judge I am cured for all time. My system is so free of the poison that were I to return to it I believe I would become as deathly ill as I was the day I smoked my first pill. Dr. Lichtenstein has cured me and I intend to stay cured. And I want to add that there are upward of a score of men and women here to-day who are undergoing the same treatment. Better still, they will be cured."

The young actor spoke with hardly a pause. All through his recital of his fight for mastery of himself the Warden, Lieutenant Scherb and Harris, the latter's assistant, sat mute and tense, not losing a word or once interrupting the narrative. The Warden was the first to break the silence.

"Every word and more that he has uttered is [illegible] truth. He has made a [illegible] fight and I believe he is cured. I don't think he will ever go back to it."

Lieutenant Scherb and Harris were equally positive, for each has known him as one of the most confirmed fiends in the city, and they have watched his case with the keenest interest.

"Now we will take you to the 'chamber of horrors,' where you can see all types of the 'cokies' and other fiends at their worst," Scherb said. "We will look over some of the poor creatures who have been locked up for several days and are suffering the worst torments man can endure—the first few days of separation from their poison."

Accordingly we went to the fifth tier of the prison annex, variously called "coke row" or the "chamber of horrors." Neither is a misnomer, for what we encountered there was sufficient to make any man tremble. There were twenty-eight "fiends" occupying cells on that tier and each and all of them have been addicted to drugs of some sort for many years. I was permitted to peer in through the cell doors at first, and without a single exception all were stretched full length upon their narrow cots, glassy and watery eyes staring sightlessly at the ceiling and every muscle in their bodies twitching and shaking as though the prostrate forms were afflicted with a violent attack of palsy or ague.

Their pasty faces, sallow and gaunt, were more like those of a corpse than of any human I had ever seen.

Their clothes hung about them like gunnysacks, their fleshless and emaciated bodies having the appearance of loose bundles of bones over which a dry and parched skin was drawn taut. But for the convulsive twitching from head to foot there was no evidence of life. The eyes were set and expressionless, such as might stare from a cadaver.

"Pat" Maher, the keeper of that tier, knew the history of every man there, for many of them were old offenders, although for the most part they were young men ranging in ages from twenty-one to twenty-five. "I'll bring Morris Fanelli out for you," said Maher; "he's a bird."

There was little in Morris' appearance to suggest "Pat's" likening him to a bird, unless it was that his sharp, thin face somewhat resembled the head of any bird from which the feathers and skin had been peeled. Morris was so weak that Maher had to support him from his cell to a chair. Morris sank hopelessly into the chair and turned a blank gaze in the direction of his visitors. Every second or two he would raise a bloodless and clawlike hand to his mouth in an effort to conceal the yawn he could not check. He was sleepy—his shiny eyes proved this. He told me later he hadn't slept in eleven days.

"He's got the yen yen," said Maher. "All the 'dopes' do that. They gape their heads off."

With difficulty I drew Morris' story from him. He is about five feet seven inches tall and weighs just ninety pounds. He is twenty-one years old and has been a confirmed fiend for seven years. He is married and his wife and two children come occasionally to see him. Heroin is responsible for his present plight and, according to his own confession, he was accustomed to consuming a half dram (thirty grains, 100 per cent solution) each day.

Once or twice he has attempted home remedies, such as the yenshee cure, consisting of a decoction of [illegible] opium and sherry wine. This didn't take him very far, but he is really anxious now, he says, to break the shackles that bind him. On the verge of collapse, Morris indicated that he would like to terminate the interview and return to his cell cot, saying, "I'm all in."

And he was.

Joseph Egan, once a member of the Street Cleaning Department, was the next to be carried from his cell. If anything, he was in worse mental and physical plight than Fanelli. He was on the verge of collapse and looked far more like a dead man than an animate being. He is twenty-six years old and has had the "habit" about six years. He, too, is a 100 per cent heroin user, consuming about thirty grains of the drug each day. When he became so addicted to the drug that he had to quit his job with the city he became a "carrier" for a drug dispenser, and that accounts for his presence in the Tombs. He anticipates undergoing the Tombs cure, but as he hopelessly said, "I guess nothing will cure me unless it is a blanket of the green sod, for I'd rather be dead than continue to suffer what I go through here." He was too weak to talk much, so he was returned to his cell just as a newcomer came lumbering up the five flights of tortuous iron stairs that lead to "Coke Row."

The newcomer was a cheerful looking individual, to say the least. But perspiration was standing out on his face in beads and as he sank into the chair that Egan had just vacated he was blowing like a porpoise and with a grunt said, "Hy jingo, boys, I'm all in."

The newcomer proved to be Otto Siegert, an engine driver employed by one of the big railroads with a terminal in New York. He had been arrested three days previously for having drugs in his possession and he was there to do his "bit."

"Glad I'm here," Otto said between gasps. "Heard a lot about this fellow Lichtenstein and I'm going to give him a chance to work on me. It will be kill or cure with me, for I am sick of the stuff."

"How long have you been off the stuff?" Lieutenant Scherb asked.

"Three days," said Otto.

"That's not so," the policeman quickly retorted.

Otto grinned sheepishly and said:—"To tell the truth, one of the boys in the police station cell had a little of the stuff on him and he gave me a morphine tablet last night. That's why I'm sweating so now."

Otto said that the "habit" is not uncommon among engine drivers and firemen on the big railroads. "The way we have to work," he said in explanation, "we've got to take something to keep us going. I have never fooled with 'coke' or heroin, but I do love my morphine."

Otto said he had taken the belladonna cure and that he nearly died during the treatment. He said he went back to morphine as soon as he was discharged. He then asked to be locked in his cell so he could lie down, for, he said, he wanted to be asleep before all the drug was out of his system, adding, "For Heaven knows when I will sleep again once this stuff leaves me."

The same might be written of any of the remaining twenty-five prisoners in "Coke Row." It was useless to talk to them, for each would have told practically the same story. So we left "Coke Row" and made our way to the office of the house physician who is effecting so many wonderful cures.

Dr. Lichtenstein told me he had treated upward of a thousand cases in the year he has been at the Tombs, and some of them, he said, were desperate in the extreme.

Animals With Pockets.

Did you ever think what a curious thing it is that some animals have pockets—great, roomy, fur lined vest pockets, big enough to carry a family of little ones about in? Many of the animals native to Australia and Tasmania have these convenient pockets, and so has the possum, a common animal in our southern states. The kangaroo is the largest of this species. Full grown kangaroos go sixteen feet at a jump, and so when going on a long journey or running from hunters think what a comfort it must be to Mother Kangaroo to know that her babies are snug and safe in her pocket!—Exchange.

Lutheran Bodies To Unite.

TOLEDO, April 16.—Initial steps looking toward a federation of all Lutheran bodies in this country and Canada were announced here yesterday. Representatives of seven of the general bodies of the Lutheran Church, meeting here, adopted a tentative constitution, that will be presented to general bodies at their next conventions. The action of these bodies will be reported to the tentative organization at a meeting to be held in 1917, the place and date to be selected later.

DRESS WARM AND KEEP FEET DRY

Rheumatism is no respecter of age, sex, colour or rank. It not the most dangerous of human afflictions it is one of the most painful. Those subject to rheumatism should eat less meat, dress as warmly as possible, avoid any undue exposure and, above all, drink lots of pure water.

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine; the pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Andrew A. Voelker died suddenly yesterday at Berlin. He was in his 57th year and was born in St. Jacob's, Ont.

William G. C. Gladstone, grandson of the great Liberal statesman, has been killed in action in France. Particulars of his death are lacking.

Charging her husband, Joseph Ledoux, of East Broughton, Que., with having led a double life, Leda Leblanc has filed an action to have her marriage annulled.

The death has been announced at Birkenhead of Edward McHugh, the English land reformer and trade unionist. He was a personal friend of the late Henry George.

B. F. Hart, a wealthy merchant of Dekoven, Ky., was assassinated yesterday by a man who fired a shotgun through the window. Thomas Brantley, a miner, was later arrested.

German artillery stationed near Bethune, France, is reported to have shelled a Belgian ambulance on Wednesday, killing three wounded Belgians and six wounded Belgian prisoners.

Princess Bismarck, widow of the son of the "iron chancellor," has placed a wreath on Bismarck's tomb at Friedrichsruh bearing the inscription, "To the memory of our hero, Otto Weddingen."

Many bullets fell on the American side of the river during the fighting at Matamoras on Wednesday, but no one was injured. Gen. Funston yesterday reported to the U. S. War Department from Brownsville.

BUSINESS COMMITTEE MEETS.

Lloyd George First Presides Over Munitions Board.

LONDON, April 16. — Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George has presided at the first meeting of the business committee which is to organize to the full the resources of the nation in the production of war material. The War Office, the Admiralty and the Board of Trade each is represented on the committee.

The British war Office simultaneously has appointed a departmental committee to assist in the same object, under the chairmanship of Field Marshal Earl Kitchener himself.

Mr. Lloyd-George will have the co-operation of ex-Premier J. A. Balfour, Edwin S. Montagu, Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; Harold T. Baker, member of Parliament for the Accrington division of Lancaster; Arthur Henderson, member for the Barnard Castle division of Durham; Major-Gen. Sir Stanley V. von Donop, master of the ordnance; Sir Herbert Llewellyn Smith, permanent secretary to the Board of Trade, and a representative of the Admiralty.

THE LITTLE THINGS.

The little things in life I love—
A song, a word, a smile,
An hour of happy blue above,
'Neath which I walk the while,
For at the best, tho' be our state

This life is a mosaic great,
But made from little things.

Question Whether Prongs of a Fork Should be Held Up or Down Caused This Divorce

LOS ANGELES, April 14.—The tale of a fork and the question whether prongs should be held up or down are contained in the story of the marital unhappiness which has led pretty Mrs. Edith J. Howell, once a moving picture queen; to file suit against her husband, Ernest F. Howell, a Hollywood real estate man, living at No. 8523 Hollywood boulevard. Also the young woman says it was too much mother-in-law and father-in-law which resulted in her husband becoming what she termed a "mamma's boy."

The episode of the fork is unique in the divorce annals. The story begins when the pretty young litigant was a clerk behind a candy counter. She terms her parents "good, substantial people, who pay their bills, are democratic, and never try to make themselves out to be better than others."

Behind the counter she met the young real estate agent. An ardent courtship followed, and when the youth vowed life held nothing for him without her, she accompanied him to the altar November 11, 1912, and was married. Straight away, she said, they went to the home of her husband's people.

Several months of wedded bliss followed, and then came the clouds. A fork was the first cause of her unhappiness.

"It may seem trivial," declared the young woman, "but my husband's people got to criticising my table manners.

Objected to Table Habits.

"They didn't like the way I held my fork. I had been taught when eating to hold it in my right hand with the curve upward. They said I ought to hold it in my left with the prongs down, and when I wouldn't we quarrelled. I got that at every meal. Then they didn't like the way I held my knife.

"Always my husband would side with them. They'd tell others how much better, socially and every other way, he was than I, and he'd always agree. He never did a thing without asking his mamma. He didn't have the gumption to think for himself, and when I'd ask him to get some backbone, he would tell me I didn't even know how to hold my fork. Then he said I ought to wear silks and lovelocks, but I told him he wasn't making enough to buy me even common things. He seldom bought anything.

"For a long time he didn't work and I needed shoes. So I went to work for a moving picture company and was making good. But when I worked I found my husband didn't even try to find work. I vowed I wasn't going to support any man, so I quit my job and came home.

"Then they made me sleep in the attic, where it was terribly cold, and whenever they had company for dinner I'd have to wait on the table. I also waited on the house boarders.

"Sometimes I'd rebel, and then there was a quarrel. I finally flatly told my husband and his parents that I wasn't going to be anybody's scullery maid, and they would have to get a hired girl.

"One morning I asked for eggs for breakfast. That started a row. They began all over from the fork to my family, so I up and left. That was on January 23 last, and I think I did pretty well to stick it out that long. I hope I won't see my husband again until we fight it out before Judge Monroe."

Mrs. Ernest Howell lives with her mother and attends night school each evening to perfect her stenography.

NO INQUIRY SO FAR.

Only Newspaper Reports of Reprisals on British Officers.

LONDON, April 16.—Walter Hines Page, the American Ambassador, [illegible] at the Foreign Office yesterday and discussed the reprisals the Germans are reported to be making because of the special treatment being accorded by Great Britain to the officers and men captured on board German submarines.

No official advices have been received in London as yet concerning the actual steps Germany is taking to punish the 39 British officers who are reported to have been committed to special detention because of the steps taken by Britain against the German prisoners.

Ambassador Page yesterday received a message from Washington saying that James W. Gerard, the American Ambassador at Berlin, had only newspaper reports of the reprisals said to have been put into effect by Germany, but that replies were expected immediately to enquiries asking for specific information as to what Germany is doing.

UNSTRUNG, UNSTEADY SHAKY NERVES

MAY BE TONED UP BY USING

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS.

Mrs. John Harper, Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have used Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills for the heart and nervous system. I was confined to a grocery store for twelve years, and had to give up business, as I became terribly run down and nervous, and had heart trouble, and I am sure I am gaining very fast now. I feel that nothing did me any good until I tried your Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am positive they will cure me. The nerves of one hand would tremble and then seem to go numb so that I could not write or sew. Now my hand is quite steady, as you can see by my handwriting. This is a big change which delights me so much for I thought all was done that could be done. I was about to give up in despair when I tried this last remedy, and even after I had only taken half a box the change started to come."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will restore the enfeebled, enervated, exhausted, overworked system to full constitutional power.

Price, 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

MUZZLED THE PRESS.

Sir Roger L'Estrange Was the Worst Censor in History.

The severest press censor of which English history bears record was Sir Roger L'Estrange. This worthy was appointed to the post in 1663, and he threw himself whole heartedly into his duties. According to C. B. Royiance Kent, "he suggested that the number of master printers in London be reduced from sixty to twenty, that printing offices be subject to inspection and have no back doors and that in addition to the ordinary treasonable and seditious publications culprits convicted of small infractions of the law be condemned to wear some visible badge or mark of ignominy, as a halter instead of a hatband, one stocking blue and another red, a blue bonnet with a red letter T or S upon it."

But L'Estrange went further. He was opposed to newspapers altogether, because the reading of them "makes the multitude too familiar with the actions and counsels of their superiors, too pragmatical and censorious and gives them not only an itch, but a kind of right and license to be meddling with the government." All newspaper criticisms on the government were rigorously suppressed during his censorship. Indeed, he succeeded so effectively in muzzling the press that "his majesty said several times he wondered how it could be done."—London Chronicle.

Its Strong Appeal.

"There's one thing 'bout jail," says the ex-convict, "that makes a mighty strong appeal to most of us."

"What's that?"

TIRED NERVES

What is so thoroughly exhausting as a day's shopping! And what of the girls behind the counter? Standing for long hours day after day, with nerves continually at high tension, waiting on impatient men and exacting women—what could be more wearing on the delicate, nervous system?

Is it to be wondered at that overstrained nerves give out, that there are many headaches, much sleeplessness, and tired, draggy feelings in the mornings. "Only tired," you may say, and yet this pretty nearly sums up the symptoms of an exhausted nervous system. This is the warning that vitality is waning, and that you must get the process of restoration established. Rest and recreation may not be within your reach, but Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is, and it will do wonders in helping you back to new health and vigor. People everywhere are finding this out. In home and office, store and factory this great Food Cure is being tested out, and proving over and over again its efficacy as a means of restoring and reconstructing the wasted and depleted nerve cells. Ask your friends about it. Better still, put it to the test in your own case, and you will then understand why so many people are talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

FRENCH ARMY IN THE PINK OF CONDITION NOW

PARIS, April 12.—The most important—probably the most decisive campaign of the great war — has begun with the French army in "the pink of condition," stronger and more effective by far than at the beginning last summer.

I have just returned from the trenches. Spring has come to the war zone. Anemones and dandelions carpet the green spaces between the earthworks and cluster about the holes made by German shells. The preliminary clashes of the great death struggle in northern France are being fought amid a fairyland of wild flowers.

By official invitation I made a trip to the French front, going northward, as far as the British zone of operations. Before leaving the French headquarters I was told I might see anything I wished.

"The French army has nothing to conceal from neutral eyes," said an officer at headquarters.

With this permission to roam almost at will along the battlefront, I was able to remain for a long time in the front trenches of the French army both day and night. Often at night I was within 30 feet of the Germans. It was the first time a foreign correspondent had been given such freedom of action and the first time a neutral had been enabled personally to observe the behaviour of the French army under such conditions that there could not possibly have been any "tidying" or "fixing up." I saw the French army as it actually is and as it actually enters the third and probably the last phase of the fighting.

Of one thing I am certain — the world's opinion of Frenchmen is due for a revolutionary change. For there is a tremendous difference between the temperamental, red-bronzed soldiers—each man seemingly a bundle of nerves — which the world saw march away last August, and the horizon-blue uniformed, grimly determined, muddy bull dogs whom I watched carefully potting Germans from the trenches in France and Flanders.

I saw nothing which struck home more forcefully. I never saw a more business-like lot. They have re-systematized their lives. At war they go to the front trenches like they used to go to work. While there they work industriously, shooting with the same painstaking care a master mechanic observes at his lathe. When resting back of the line they laugh, sing or play musical instruments according to their temperament.

"The only trouble we have with our men comes on warm, sunshiny days," an officer told me. "They want to know why they can't attack, since all winter they have been promised action when the spring sunshine comes."

Both officers and men speak of peace as a long way off, unless unexpected developments bring a sudden end to hostilities. But I saw no man who had the slightest doubt of an ultimate victory.

"Nobody believed last summer that the French soldier would be able to fight this sort of a war," a French officer admitted. "He is running contrary to all form and has broken all precedents. Nobody believed the Frenchman possessed sufficient patience to remain in the trenches all winter. In short, France has won a moral victory over herself, which assures victory over the enemy.

"The soldiers in the trenches actually are scolding the relatives at home for daring to become impatient. It is my duty to read soldiers' correspondence. You have my word of honour that out of 1,135 letters just submitted to me, every one was most cheerful."

From what I saw on this and previous visits, I am able to state that the French army was never in finer condition, physically and morally. I saw less evidence of hyphoid and other diseases than one sees in bodies of men of the same size in times of peace. According to reports to headquarters which I say, the army seems to have taken patience, stubborness, thoroughness, dependability and the other best attributes generally credited to the Germans, as their own. When one considers, in addition, that every man is content and well-fed, it is hard to see how they can be beaten.

How to Keep Husbands

"Why do husbands desert wives?" is answered by the Chicago Bureau of Public Welfare, which has just finished an investigation here. According to the figures in the survey, wives stand a relatively small chance of being deserted:

If they are big physically.
If they are good cooks.
If they are sweet-tempered, helpful, interested, affectionate and loyal;
If they have children; or
If their husbands are common labourers.

On the contrary, desertion is an ever present peril to wives who—

Are weak physically and unhealthy;
Are extravagant, shrewish and untidy;
Are not anxious for children and are critical or gossips; or
Have husbands who earn relatively large salaries.

"In 320 families, of which 200 were Italian, 50 Irish, 40 Polish and 30 Americans, but two Italian desertions were found; Americans, seven, Irish none.

"Next to steady employment plenty of children seems undoubtedly to be the best possible guarantee of marital permanence and solidarity," says the bureau's report.

Gold produced in United States in the first of this year is estimated by the Geological Survey at $3,540,799,400 in value, and the silver at $1,709,517,000.

Super-Eugenic Love Started in Operating Room

CHICAGO, April 15.—Miss Bird Mabel Arnold, formerly head of the woman's physical department of Northwestern University, has sought health and beauty for herself and others through training in the gymnasium. Dr. Oakley Smith, founder of the Chicago College of Naprapathy, has worked out a new way of conquering human ills and deformities with a form of "bloodless surgery." Now Miss Arnold has agreed to become the helper of the physician and record his scientific discoveries.

After [illegible] annunciensis, nor yet to assume the role that Boswell performed for Dr. Johnson. She is to be Mrs. Smith.

A pretty card, bearing portraits of the pair and announcement of their engagement, was placed at each plate.

"Neither of us ever has given the theory of eugenics much thought," said Miss Arnold. "Both of us hold strongly for physical perfection and have worked, in our seperate ways, to help others as well as ourselves to attain it. I am enthusiastic for the doctor's work, and he really is doing some original scientific work. I was interested in a study of the nervous system to broaden my study of physical education, and I became a student in his classes.

"I shall not continue my physical educational work. I am through with public work for good, and I shall devote my time to helping Dr. Smith."

When asked about the courtship she hesitated.

"Well, Dr. Smith and I became interested in one another," she said; "or, rather, he became interested in me, and I found it out later, and then we decided it would be best for me to quit attending his classes. That was four months ago. You must excuse me now. I must get ready for the banquet."

"Dr. Smith's home was in Iowa City, where he began his medical studies in the University of Iowa. After two years he decided to begin a line of study on his own account. The head of the anatomical department learned of his irregular methods and barred him from the dissecting room, where bodies are examined and dissected.

"Many a night after that at uncanny hours I stole into the dissecting room," said Dr. Smith recently, "and parts of human bodies were missed that never were burned with the others. I opened my school in 1900. I had one assisant; and we rented rooms under the elevated, where our lectures were punctuated by the passage of trains every two minutes."

To make the use of midair clotheslines safe a New York inventor has patented a brace to hold one end of them well within the window of a room.

A SPLENDID WAY TO REDUCE ONE'S WEIGHT

There is, perhaps, no one thing that shows the passing of our youth so much as the horrible tendency of some of us to put on too much weight after we have reached the age of 25 or 30. However young our face may appear, our figures give us away.

The cause of this over-stoutness is that our stomachs convert the food we eat into fat, because there is not enough oxygen in the blood to produce a proper combustion to destroy the fatty tissue. To reduce your weight go to a good druggist and get oil of orlisac in capsule form, and take one after each meal. It is sold only in original sealed packages. Oil of orlisac taken at meal-times gives you all the benefit of the food you eat, and at the same time dissolves the fatty tissue from any part of the body where there is excessive fat. In this way many have reduced their weight at the rate of about a lb. a day, and no flabbiness is left.

Any druggist can supply you or a large size box will be sent on receipt of $1.00. Address D. J. Little Drug Co., Box 1240, Buffalo, N.Y.

AN EXCELLENT REMEDY FOR LITTLE ONES

Mrs. Sidney Dalby, Audley, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past twelve months and have found them an excellent medicine for my little girl." Thousands of other mothers say the same thing—once a mother has used the Tablets she would use nothing else. They are pleasant to take; the result is sure, and above all they are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely free from injurious drugs. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HOUSEHOLD SPICE

The happiest woman on earth is not the woman who has married the best man on earth, but the woman who has learned how to live with a man, and says nothing about her marriage bargain.

Even by looking in a mirror a woman cannot see herself as others see her.

Some people's ambition is like hunger, it obeys no law but its appetite.

Life Insurance In a Crisis

Every time a great Crisis occurs LIFE INSURANCE has an opportunity to show what a giant of trength it is. Tremendous burdens are placed upon its shoulders, but it never shirks, never hesitates or groans.

When the Titanic took its awful plunge, carrying 1500 human souls into the deep, thousands of widows and orphans were left throughout the world. LIFE INSURANCE accepted the burden without the quiver of a muscle, and spread its protection around the Globe.

When seven years ago the financial world was labouring under an attack of indigestion due to undigested securities, and people could not get even their own money out of the Savings Banks, LIFE INSURANCE furnished spot cash to its policy holders upon application.

To-day when a gigantic struggle wages across the Seas and it is difficult to get loans from banks or money lenders, they find the solution again in LIFE INSURANCE.

It is to-day saving thousands of men all over the world, not only embarrassment but actual failure.

LIFE INSURANCE protects your wife and family.

" " increases your savings.

Money invested in LIFE INSURANCE is sure to come back to you or your family.

Your credit is made better by the amount of LIFE INSURANCE you carry.

The need for LIFE INSURANCE to every man with a family is as fixed as the daily need for bread, and that need is well met by a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

WIVES.

Oh, when men write of woman
Whom they'll condescend to wed,
They want the crown of beauty
Shining on each wifely head.
To read, you'd think that naught but eyes
Aglow and hair ashine
Could open the doors of marriage
To the aspirants in line.
But many a homely creature
Gains the wedding ring with ease,
For wrens the peacocks oft excel
In ways that charm and please.
So though man laudeth looks in print,
With pen both bold and free,
He's won by that far greater lure
Called personality.

Don't Let Your Skin Absorb Dirt

Many women think their complexions are clean when their skin still contains dust and grime in all its pores. To demonstrate your need of some other cleanser besides soap and water, make a test of Nyal's Face Cream. Get a 25c or 50c jar and their Free Booklet entitled "Your Complexion" telling how to apply it with proper methods of massage. Wash your face thoroughly and then apply the Cream. After properly working it in wipe your face with a clean soft white cloth and see how soiled the cloth is with the accumulations of grime that have sunk into the pores. How refreshed, soft, clean and delicately fragrant your complexion now is. How free from irritation.

All Nyal preparations are justly famous and none more so than Nyal's Face Cream which we unhesitatingly recommend. Call or telephone us for your copy of this book which contains most valuable information.

In Crossing The Channel

Passengers Are Put Through Long Series of Examinations and Watched Continually

To cross the channel from England to France in these days of spies, alien enemies and suspects is to become virtually a prisoner in the hands of the Anglo-French authorities. Not only are you searched like a prisoner in a police station but you are under strict surveillance from the moment you obtain a ticket at Victoria station in London until you have satisfied the customs officials at Calais. In fact you are a suspected spy.

After a preliminary examination at Victoria by official No. 1, who puts some mysterious chalk marks on your suitcase, you begin to think that the road is fairly easy after all. But disillusionment speedily comes. You are ushered into a small partitioned waiting room by official No. 2 and await your turn to be dealt with by official No. 3. This suave, keen eyed representative of Scotland Yard subjects you to severe inquisition, and you begin to wonder what particular part of the much discussed defence of the realm act you have offended against.

But now the real comic opera begins. Your torturer starts a pleasant conversation, during which he attempts to take you unawares by carefully veiled cross-examination.

"It is a calm day, I hear," he goes on. "You will have a pleasant journey across. It is a change from the recent storms."

That, of course, is a feeler.

Suddenly you are amazed to feel a hand, so soft, so gentle, stealing into your pockets.

"Oh, so you travel for Messrs. Blank"—he has seen some business cards—"you surely do not do much in that way now, do you?"

Then follows a chat about your business. In the meantime your pockets are being very thoroughly searched. Before he has finished your questioner casually remarks, "And when were you over last?"

Eventually, after some five or ten minutes, which seems to be an hour, you are released and handed over to official No. 4. There is another long cross-examination, but fortunately no searching. Your passport is carefully scrutinized and so much of your business is discussed that you imagine you are having an introduction to yourself.

Nevertheless the white cliffs of France loom up in the distance, and you are not yet under arrest. As the ship is secured alongside Calais quay and the gangway has been lowered you pick up your belongings and, in accordance with peace time custom, make a dash to get ashore. But you are in too much haste. You have to join the long queue of passengers which several officials are keeping back from the gangway.

The passengers, it seems, take hours to disembark. All of them leave. You are the only traitor. It is not until after the last passenger has gone that the officials turn their attention to you. There is a conference, five of them examining your passport, which had not been returned. The police and bearded Frenchman joins them, and you know your fate is sealed.

Suddenly they disperse and the Frenchman comes over, smiling, and apologizes for having kept you waiting. You are free then. You mutter a few words to the effect that it is no matter, and then, courage suddenly returning, you make a feeble protest, whereupon the Frenchman grows more polite and says that they must obey their orders, and that some little accidents are sure to occur. Naturally you suspect the cause of the "accident" was his handwriting.

War Cannot Slaughter MORE VICTIMS THAN PNEUMONIA.

Pneumonia is described as a preventible disease if taken in time.

Pneumonia is the scourge of the able bodied men and women "a little run down perhaps" but strong in the belief that they can fight off a cold. Colds are not easily fought off in this northern climate.

On the first sign of a cough or cold our advice to you is "GET RID OF IT"

The slight cold, the irritating cough the tightness of the chest, if not attended to, will sooner or later develope into some serious lung or bronchial trouble.

GET A BOTTLE OF

and you will find after the first two or three doses have been taken the cough or cold will quickly disappear.

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; the price, 25c and 50c.

Be sure you see that the name of The T. Milburn Co., Limited, appears on both the label and wrapper.

Mrs. Edward Hugo, Moose Jaw, Sask., writes: "My little girl, three years old, contracted a bad cold which settled on her lungs, and turned into pneumonia, and she was given up by our doctor. I decided to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and by the time she had taken three bottles she was well again. I shall always keep a bottle of "Dr. Wood's" in the house."

Stand 60 Years of Experience and Progress

In 1880, thirty-five years ago, the Redpath Refinery brought out Canada's first Granulated Sugar, known ever since as the best.

Again in 1913, the Redpath Refinery introduced the third great improvement in Canada's sugar supply—the Redpath 2 and 5-lb. Cartons.

DURING all these years of leadership, the Redpath aim has been QUALITY—the quality on which the national preference for Redpath Sugar now rests so solidly.

Such quality is the result, not of modern machinery alone, but of experience, modern methods, and a fixed determination to produce nothing unworthy of the name Redpath—to maintain in every pound of our product the reputation of "Canada's Standard Sugar". 120

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX ON THE EVIL DONE BY GOSSIP

Have You Ever Tried Passing an Entire Week Without Uttering an Unpleasant Comment? You Will Find It Not an Easy Matter.

Time looked me in the eyes while passing by
The Milestones of the year. That piercing gaze
Was both an accusation and reproach
No speech was needed. In a sorrowing look
More meaning lies than in complaining words.
And silence hurts as keenly as reproof.

Oh, opulent, kind giver of rich hours,
How have I used thy benefits! As babes
Unstring a necklace laughing at the sound
Of priceless jewels dropping one by one,
So I have laughed while precious moments rolled
Into the hidden corners of the past.
And I have let large opportunities
For high endeavour move unheeded by,
While little joys and cares absorbed by strength.

And yet, dear Time, set to my credit this:
Not one white hour have I made black with hate,

Be patient with me. Though the sun slants west,
The [illegible]
I feel
Necessity for action and resolve
Bear in upon my consciousness. I know
The earth's eternal need of earnest souls,
And the great hunger of the world for love.
I know the goal to high achievement lies
Through the dull pathway of selfconquest first;
And on the stairs of little duties done
We climb to joys that stand thy test, O Thine,
Be patient with me, and another day,
Perchance, in passing by, thine eyes may smile.

If any one should call you a gossip or infer that you were addicted to gossip you would be indignant. It is a peculiar phase of human nature that not one individual has ever been found who would confess to a tendency in this direction. People are to be encountered who realize their sins and failings in many directions, but the man or woman has never yet been seen who said "Yes, I have the failing of gossiping and of relating unpleasant things about my neighbours."

Perhaps it is because the habit is so universal that no one finds himself different from his fellows in that respect. Have you ever tried passing an entire week without giving utterance to an unpleasant criticism of any one? Of course you will exclaim as you read these lines that you have passed under such weeks, but unless you were dwelling on a desert island, or in solitary confinement in a prison with your food passed through gratings, it is questionable whether you ever allowed seven days to slip by you unmarred by some phase of disagreeable comment on others.

If you set out in an undertaking of this kind you will observe that it is not an easy thing to do, no matter how amiable you may be, how broad in your judgments and how kind in your instincts. After you have passed the second milestone in this sever day journey and lived forty-eight hours without a criticism you will be so set up in your own opinion that on the third day you will criticise somebody! This will be your downfall, and after you encounter each of the remaining days of the seven, and mention it.

Human nature is, indeed, prone to faults and blemishes which are easily discerned and impossible to approve. It is much easier to find fault than to praise. The unpleasant qualities while the pleasant ones we need to search for.

Just before retiring each night take a mental survey of your conversation since you arose in the morning; mark in your diary with a red G each day which has passed with no disagreeable or unkind comment from your lips; mark with a black B each day wherein you have transgressed by such utterances.

Be frank and honest with yourself; no one should see the book save the Invisible Helpers who are near you, and yourself, and you will gain nothing by self-deception; that is the worst possible thing to do in any effort at self-development—this yielding to self-deception. When you realize that you have failed, confess it to yourself and start anew next day. Criticise yourself, but believe in your power to reform and recreate yourself.

Do your realize that if each individual devoted all his power of criticism and fault finding to himself, and made continual efforts to be that which he desires others to be, how soon the world would be evangelized? That is the task given to each of us to do. It is good work for you to attempt this new year.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Liquid Soap.

Take equal parts of glycerine, water alcohol and green castile soap. Shave the soap into the water and stir over the fire until the mixture is smooth. Add the glycerine, and lastly, after the kettle is removed from the fire, the alcohol. Add a tablespoonful of eau de cologne if perfume is desired.

When Laundering Collars.

In laundering the sheer white collar so much worn nowdays, use borax instead of starch (a tablespoonful to a quart of water), as it leaves them much more transparent after they have been "done up."

For Stained Hands.

Take one pint of cornmeal, pour hot water on it, let stand until pasty, then wash your hands (leaving the meal in the water, of course.) Then after burying the hands in the mixture rub with a lotion consisting of two parts glycerine and one part witch hazel.

The water may be drained off and the meal used a second time.

If the treatment fails try this:

Keep in a box equal quantities of powdered oxalic acid and cream of tartar. Dip the fingers in warm water and rub on a small amount of the powder and wash with castile soap.

A Pen Portrait of the Belgian Queen

A life-like portrait of Queen Elisabeth of Belgium is given in a translation from a French writer, Roland de Marcs. "She is not a warlike Princess riding beside a victorious husband, entering conquered villages to the sound of trumpets and clarions. . . . Without escort, without suite, she glides from hospital to hospital, from ambulance to ambulance, the most noble woman, the most simple of them all. . . . She has come from village to village, from camp to camp, from trench to trench. She consoles the living and the dying, she smiles, she dresses the wounds, she is all the sweetness and all the pity in this Flemish country where the darkness surrounds the sad landscape. Shrouds of gray over so many shrouds of linen!" It seems that ten years ago, on her entry as bride into Brussels, the daughter of the Bavarian "Doctor-Prince," Charles, the people understood her at once, and they are a people, this French authority says, "by nature critical, who know exactly what they want, and are not imposed upon by titles, pomp and decoration; there was a strong feeling that this Princess was different from other princesses; that she was nearer to them and more understanding of what moves the souls of the people. They knew that she was not rich and that the Prince had chosen without a thought of reasons of state; they knew finally that she had a mind of her own, the mind of a woman and an artist, which would upset court prejudice, and that her crowned head was accompanied by a firm will that would overcome obstacles."

From that day on she has been affectionately called the "Little Queen." And it is true that she had made the renaissance of letters and art in Belgium characteristic of the reign by bringing to her court poets and artists and entertaining them with intelligence, bounty and loyalty. Even the alert and aggressive Socialism of Belgium, without abandoning its principles, acknowledged itself disarmed before the grace and simplicity of the Queen. When the war came the question was whether she would take refuge with her children in France or England. Neither. She would remain in the midst of her people, and she lived in Brussels till the Germans entered there, and then at Antwerp, first under the bombs of the Zeppelins and then under the monstrous Krupp shells of the short and sharp siege. And from thence to the trenches with

SUMMER SLIP-COVERS

This is an Excellent Time to Plan for Slip-Covers. Plain ton linen is liked best by some housekeepers. In some cases cretonne slip-covers will be charming. English drawing-rooms are very often slip-covered in flowered chintz during the summer months and the effect with light muslin curtains and plenty of fresh flowers about, is delightful. A winter bedroom done in pink may be changed to blue or green in summer by fresh slip-covers, curtains and bedcover of cretonne and the effect on the nerves will be agreeable and restful.

Cut a pattern for every slip-cover first. For this pattern an old sheet or strong wrapping paper may be used—and the tape measure should not be spared, for guesswork is not to be commended in making well-tailored slip-covers for a formal room. Pin the paper over chair or lounge just as the slip-cover is to go until you get the pattern perfect, then cut out your material. Snap fasteners are better than buttons and buttonholes for they prevent gaping and sagging of the fabric.

Linen in tan, or green and tan, is delightfully cool for summer slip-covers and all edges should be bound with cotton braid which comes for the summer slip-covers made, for dressmaking will probably be at its height just at the time they will be needed—about the middle of May. Making slip-covers at home is a most economical procedure, for well-made slip-covers are usually rather high-priced when ordered from a good upholsterer. No special skill is required for the making of such covers, but a great deal of patience and care will be essential. No sketchy fitting or sewing may be tolerated and the finished effect must be distinctly tailored. Choosing slip-covers is like choosing rugs or pictures—one makes selection for a lifetime, so good material of substantial weave and attractive colour should be sought, and it will be wise to purchase several yards more than the estimated need, so that new chairs added to one's collection later may be covered to match the others.

TEMPTING AND TIMELY SALADS

Canned Cherry Salad.—One pint of good, large canned cherries, some crisp white lettuce leaves, two tablespoonfuls of blanched and chopped almonds, and mayonnaise.

Stone the cherries without breaking them too much; then mix them with the almonds and mayonnaise. Arrange the lettuce around the sides of the salad bowl and put the fruit in the middle.

Another delicious dressing for this salad is made of four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, a little sugar and salt and pepper.

Endive and Grapefruit Salad.—Several crisp endive heads, one ripe grapefruit, French dressing with paprika instead of the usual pepper. Wash and dry the endive, breaking the leaves apart first; then cut them down in thin strips. Peel the grapefruit and take out the meat in plugs, denuding it of pith and the skin about the carpels. Put the fruit and endive together, tossing the salad in the dressing and putting on as much paprika as is agreeable to taste. After it is well mixed, pile it on a mound of romaine or plain lettuce leaves, also tossed in a French dressing.

Watercress and Apple Salad.—One bunch of fresh watercress, one cupful of sliced tart apple, one tablespoonful of cider vinegar, six tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two teaspoonfuls of sugar and salt and pepper to taste.

Wash and dry the cress—keeping it as crisp as possible against the ice before using—and arrange it lightly in a salad bowl. Pile the apples on top of the green, and after the dressing has been separately mixed pour it over the whole. Serve immediately.

Apple and Celery Salad. — Three large greening apples, the hearts of a bunch of celery, one teaspoonful of onion juice, one teaspoonful of vinegar, salt, cayenne and olive oil. Peel and slice the apples thinly and cut up the celery in thin wisps. Put the whole in a bowl, sprinkle on salt, add pepper, then onion juice, then the oil; toss for several minutes and then mix in the vinegar, putting on a little more if needed. Mayonnaise will make this salad richer.

Vegetable Salad in Apple Cups. — Select several good-looking red eating apples, wash them and cut off the tops. For the salad mixture use either grated carrot and beets mixed, cold slaw seasoned with onion, chopped celery, or onion and apple mixed. Dress the mixture thoroughly with French dressing or mayonnaise, and then pack it neatly into the apple cups, sticking in a little curl of white celery top, after each one is arranged, to stand up. Serve on a flat platter.

Spring Salad.—In a salad bowl put first a layer of fresh, crisp watercress, then a layer of thinly sliced cucumbers which have been soaked in cold water fifteen minutes, then a teaspoonful of minced chives, then another layer of cucumbers, and around the [illegible] When ready to serve, pour a French dressing over it and toss it over until well mingled. This is appropriate to serve with a course of broiled fish.

Tomato Jelly Salad.—Soak half a box of gelatine in half a cup of cold water for fifteen minutes. Stew a can of tomatoes with a half inch of bay leaf, one-half teaspoon of mixed whole spices, a spoonful of celery salt, and one-half a small onion. Strain through a puree sieve, add boiling water if necessary to make three cups, heat again to boiling point, add the softened gelatine, and stir till dissolved. Then pour into small cups, chill, and serve turned out on lettuce leaves with mayonnaise on top.

It is cruelty to the innocent not to punish the guilty.

Do all the good you can in the world and make as little noise about it as possible.

Idleness, like kisses, to be sweet, must be stolen.

The right food for your Baby

Should you think of trying cow's milk, you would be faced with many troubles. You would need to secure milk of right quality, from healthy cows, handled with scrupulous cleanliness and delivered whilst quite fresh. You would have to modify and prepare the milk carefully under medical guidance so that it shall be easy to digest and be nourishing. Can you do all that has to be done? Must you?

On certain beautiful meadow pastures in old England splendid herds of cows are reared, and close by, in ideal surroundings, are the 'Allenburys' model laboratories. Directly the cows have been milked the milk is prepared and modified with scientific exactness, according to the most recent medical experience, to produce the ideal Infant Food.

The 'Allenburys' Milk Food No. 1 is just what you need for the young baby. Rich, germ-free, fresh cow's milk so prepared and modified that it is practically identical with healthy mother's milk. The most delicate baby can digest it and be nourished so that he will thrive. All that you could wish and do has been done for you—just add boiling water.

When cow's milk, with all its worries as to purity and preparation, is suggested for trial, remember

CHAPTER II.

FAR away on the same dimly lit desert another man was seeking the same light. Thomas Gallon had realized that he was a murderer. What would happen to Ruth if he were convicted of killing his partner? This was the thought which drove him on—onward toward the little speck across the mesa. Careless of the cactus, of the sagebrush, absolutely unmindful of the little gullies made by last year's rains, he tramped steadily onward, and as he did so there was formulated in his mind a plan not only to save the gold for his daughter, but to save her father's honor.

It is true of lights and ideals that the farther you follow them the fainter they grow, and it was with astonishment that Thomas Gallon suddenly found himself in the street of Valle Vista.

There is a lot of silent influence in the mere sight of closed doors. Gallon looked down the street, and every door was closed except one. No hospitality. One single sign showed that law and order, always vigilant, held their sway. He staggered on toward the green light which marked the sheriff's office. In there he found an alert deputy.

"Who are you?"

"I am Gallon," he said firmly. "The outlaws have got my partner and nearly got me!"

The deputy looked at him shrewdly a moment and seemed satisfied. An instant later he was on his feet, buckling on his belt and revolver, and in a second instant he had brushed his way past the old miner and was bawling out into what apparently was a vacant street. Gallon dimly heard his call. His one thought was to play his part to the end. Would these men find by accident his gold? A moment later a curtain on the saloon across the street was lowered and the door opened.

"Matias is out again!" cried the deputy. "Get the sheriff. They have got this fellow's partner." Then he turned to Gallon authoritatively and said, "How much did you have?"

"Nothing," said Gallon. "We did not strike anything, but they thought we had."

But with a quick gesture the deputy grasped Gallon's wrist and opened his hand, disclosing a nugget. "Where did you get this?" he asked.

The old man stared down stupidly at that warm bit of gold. He had carried it clear across the mesa, emblem of his thirst, symbol of his undying desire. For the moment he did not know what to answer. Then he recovered himself and said quietly, "I was going to"— He paused a moment and looked straight into the eyes of the man opposite him. "I was going to save all I had."

"If that's all you had Matias did not get much, and he is considered a pretty smart fellow," [illegible] response. "Here comes the sheriff."

In the west their ordinary speech is deeds, not words. Appeared other men and then the bulky figure of the sheriff. This man wasted no time in preliminaries, but quickly roared, "Which way?"

It was not but a few minutes until the posse, Gallon riding stolidly on an extra horse, was scampering through the streets toward the mountains, now absolutely dark, as the moon had set. Sheriff Hawkins was not aware that as they crossed a wash a panting, groaning man was crawling on his belly toward the solitary light which marked Valle Vista. Nor did Gallon, dumbly riding toward the darkness which hid the scene of his crime, realize that Wilkerson was within ten yards of him as they splashed through the stream.

Then suddenly appeared in the sky a spot of white, which spread until the murk of the night had turned to dusk.

"Well, thank God it's daylight," said the sheriff to Gallon. "I guess we can get your partner all right now." And even as he spoke the dusk suddenly became enriched by the light of the sun rising in the east. The moment it struck the brass on his pony's bridle Gallon involuntarily reined in. Through his blistered lips he muttered: "Gold! Ruth!"

Inquiring eyes were turned on him. The sheriff shoved his horse over and asked, "What gold?"

At the same instant came the deputy on the other side of him.

"Say, chief, he says there was no gold."

A sinewy arm reached out and took Gallon's gun away from him. "I think I better keep this," said the sheriff, his dark countenance growing stern.

So this cavalcade made its way through the fresh California dawn until there was a sudden break in the mesa. The deputy threw out his hand. "There are a hundred gulches in these mountains. Which one is it, pardner?"

At the word "pardner" Gallon pulled himself together. The glitter of the brass on the horse's headstall and that word. Should he tell them the location of that gulch? The stroke of one horse's hoof might disclose the mother lode, and yet he had told them the outlaws had killed Wilkerson.

His horse stumbled and threw him. When he got up he gropingly pointed his hands toward the hills and muttered, "That way, boys—that's where they got him."

Half an hour later the posse was grouped about the dead fire, and the sheriff was staring at a blood stained blanket.

"There has been trouble," he said abruptly. Then he turned on Gallon.

"Why is this coffee hot?" he said.

"I don't see your man. I don't understand this. You are under arrest—for the murder of"— He looked at Gallon, and the old man involuntarily said, "Wilkerson."

All day the sheriff, with Gallon, his arms pinioned behind him, searched the gullies and gulches for the man whose blood stained blanket they had found. The old man, taciturn as ever, merely said, as if repeating by rote, "The outlaws got him."

When the full moon had risen and the night life of the desert had begun, grotesque life, built of fleeting forms and bizarre shadows, the sheriff called a halt up the canyon.

On one side of the gulley on which they were camped the sheriff's men had built a fire. It was against a rock, which rose whitely under the moon. Gallon saw his chance. He worked his way to the fire and in spite of the pain held his hands out over the blaze until he felt the strands of the rope weaken and finally part.

A moment later he was making his way to where the horses were tied. He leaped upon the nearest one and within a second was on his way down the hill into the mist which filled the valley.

But the noise of his horse's hoofs on the rough shale of the hillside awakened the guard.

"I think I will have a cup of coffee," he said to himself sleepily and sluggishly stretched himself. A moment later he flung the empty coffeepot into the darkness. "Sheriff," he cried, "he's gone!"

The sheriff lifted his lanky form as if by a single movement. "Who's gone?" he yelled.

"That man, Gallon," replied the guard.

"We must get him, boys!" the sheriff said. They rode to the edge of the hill and looked down into an iridescent sea of mist, a mere pool of curdling moonshine.

"He's got away from us, boys," said the sheriff. "We'll never find him there."

Gallon rode quickly on, no longer seeking for a light, but for darkness, and yet as he felt the pony quiver under him he himself felt a strange tremor—Wilkerson was still alive—somewhere behind that veil was his enemy and the man who knew the location of the richest mine in all golden California.

Mission Street pier marks the point on the San Francisco water front where sooner or later every one in this world passes, and among the multitudes strange, subdued and unsubdued by the tremendous forces which make our civilization, Gallon found himself absolutely unobserved in this throng—he was as he hoped to be. Berthed at the pier was a steamship, quartermasters at the gangway, and a sign hung on the rail saying, "We sail at 9:45 p. m."

When he reached his cabin Gallon stealthily took out from his pocket a folded paper and looked at it. He laid it on the white covering of the bunk and once more dipped into his jacket. This time it was the picture of a girl.

"I will save it for you," he murmured to himself. The bare room held [illegible] but one movable article of furniture—a chest of strange workmanship and redolent of alien lands. Gallon stooped over and pulled at the lid. It came open to his touch, and he saw then a strange conglomeration of articles. An idol lay there, inanimate, but important. He picked it up, and as he did so one of its coral eyes fell out.

To him it was a sinister omen, and he stared for a moment, shrinking at his breast. Then he gave way to the hysteria of the haunted and the hunted.

"I don't know whose god you are," he muttered, "but if you must have it—take it." And into the open socket he thrust the paper that held the secret of his mine.

That sleep which is like a shot in the heart overtook Gallon before the Santa Clara was well to sea. He was awakened from it by the sound of an altercation.

"You've got to put back to port," said a voice in an ugly tone.

There was a fusilade of shots, and then the deck beneath him tilted slowly. The chest slid down the deck toward shore. Gallon locked the chest, dragged it across the sill and then looked back to see an enormous wall of water. This wall crumpled, flashed, yet left him breathless. What was the matter? Then he saw huge columns of smoke pouring out from the after part of the ship. It was not the inexorable and avenging sea, but fire. He saw the boats go over the side. He saw two men struggling in the rope—yet it was a dream. His consciousness held but two facts—one the chest that contained the secret of his mine, the other the key that had locked within that strange and alien depository the picture of a little girl.

Six hours later a heavy sea drove a piece of wreckage up the crumbling beach beneath a cliff on the Oregon shore. On it was a man—brine drenched, almost unconscious, but still able to crawl beyond the reach of the figuring breakers, clutching a key. It was Thomas Gallon.

He sat down and stared at the burning ship he had left. Dimly he remembered those strange numbers that marked the position of that vessel flaming to destruction far out on the horizon.

But how to remember them? How to keep this precious information in his head. His groping fingers found the key. A moment later he was scratching the numbers on its soft surface.

"This"—he said thereto his self [illegible]

"You are under arrest—for the murder of"—

"If Wilkerson is alive he knows. Every day is the same. When can I find the secret of 'The Master Key?'"

"Funny," he thought to himself, "that that engineer that I wrote to Drake about has not turned up." He fumbled the letter uncertainly, but the name caught his eye—John Dorr.

At that very moment the motor stage chugged slowly into camp, and a tall, heavily built man swung down into the street, suit case in hand. He looked about him with a trained eye. He saw the opening of a mine upon the hill—the trestle crawling toward the dump, the pump house—all the paraphernalia of an active mine, but he also perceived that the stamp mill was silent.

"I'll bet they've lost the lode!" he thought to himself. He turned to a miner who was passing and asked, "Where is Mr. Gallon?"

"Up there in that bungalow," was the reply.

John Dorr straightened himself up and went quietly up the acclivity, until he finally arrived before a typical California house. To his great astonishment a slender, fair haired girl confronted him, instead of the brusque, rude miner he had been led to expect he would meet on his arrival at "The Master Key."

"I'm John Dorr," he said awkwardly. "I came to see Mr. Gallon. I am the new mining engineer."

Ruth looked at him critically. He was nothing like the man she was used to. His clothes were good. He fairly breathed soap and water, and his very apparent strength glowed beneath a clear, smooth skin and well proportioned limbs. Then she met his eyes in frank admiration.

"I'll call father," she said, but she still hesitated. That gentle pause brought the blood to John Dorr's face. He realized that this was a moment he would always remember.

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Red Mill Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

CONVERTS TORPEDOES INTO FLOATING MINES

PARIS, April 14.—A communication given out yesterday by the French Minister of Marine declares that the Germans again have violated The Hague convention in their sea warfare.

Article I of the eighth Hague convention provides that torpedoes carry an automatic attachment which will cause them to sink if they do not explode, and thus cease to be a menace to navigation. German torpedoes recently discovered in the English Channel, the announcement declares, although unexploded, were still floating. An examination of them showed that the submersion appliance had been tightly caulked, permitting them to float on the surface of the water. This made them into floating mines.

Wrinkles are often the result, says Hortense, of bad habits, such as repeated drawing of the eyebrows, which forms small lines between the brows. Lifting the eyebrows uselessly results in long transverse lines on the forehead, and adds at least five years to the real age. Ill health, eye strain and ugly thoughts will also cause the face to become lined.

The cure lies in the breaking of the habits. It is also helpful to massage the face daily after applying a liberal amount of cocoa butter. Rub the lines in the opposite direction from which they run.

Exercise will help to fill out the neck and give it beautiful lines. Bend the head slowly forward until the chin touches the neck, and then slowly raise the head to its normal position. Then bend the head as far backward as possible. Sitting erect in a chair, bend the head from one side to the other, and then roll the head to the right, left end forward.

Let British Soldiers Know How Comrades Are Tortured

LONDON, April 14—Sir Arthur Conan Doyle writes to the Times: "It is difficult to know how to act in the case of these European Red Indians who torture their prisoners. It is clear we cannot retaliate by spitting on, kicking, beating, starving and freezing Germans who are in our power.

"Appeals to good feeling are unavailing, for the average German has no more understanding of chivalry than a cow has of mathematics. He is honestly unable to understand our attitude when we speak kindly of von Mueller, Weddigen or any of our opponents who have shown some approach to decency. His papers ascribe it to sentimentality and partly to hypocrisy.

"I have no doubt when German aeroplanes drove away our boats while we were endeavouring to pick up survivors of the Blucher they really were unable to conceive what it was we were trying to do. It is worth noting that since they have endeavoured to excuse their barbarity by saying it is retaliation for our naval blockade they have acted in exactly the same fashion to our prisoners. Before this maritime policy had been declared the narrative of British Red Cross doctors who were taken in Belgium shows they endured similar inhumane persecution.

"If there is no retaliation which we, as a nation, can employ, there is at least one line of action which might be taken; that it, to print Major Vandeleur's account with the American official reports and such documents as the narrative in the Dutch paper, Tyd, of tortures of three wounded British prisoners in a frontier station in October.

"This paper should be officially sent not only to all neutral countries, but should be circulated among our soldiers in France. No man fights worse for having his soul aflame with righteous anger, so we should use the weapon which the Germans have put into our hands.

"It will teach our men also, if any of them still need the lesson, that it is far better to die upon the field than trust to the humanity of the German victor. If our enemy is unchivalrous, he is at least intensely practical, and if he realizes we are gaining any military advantage from his misdeeds he may perhaps reconsider not their morality, but their wisdom."

Cole Younger Dying Tells of Bandit Raids

Cole Younger, last of the group of bandits who made Missouri famous or rather infamous shortly after the Civil war, is dying at his home in Lee's Summit, Mo.

Deep feeling over the death last month of Frank James, a fellow bandit in the reconstruction days, is believed to be hastening the day when Cole Younger no longer can tell of the Civil war raids and the bank robberies which he say, and more than one of which he led.

Bent in years and facing death Cole Younger says he does not believe he could have lived his life differently. He believes he did what any other person would have done.

After serving 25 years in the Minnesota state prison, he came to Missouri 12 years ago and these have been happy years for him. He joined the Christian church two years ago on an anniversary of the massacre of Lawrence, Kan. He is respected for his uprightness and almost tenderness of character in his advanced years.

Younger's chief exploits were the robbery of a Northfield, Minn., bank September 6, 1876, and the Civil war raid of Lawrence.

"There is nothing in my life so thrilling as my part in the raid on Lawrence during the Civil War. There is nothing that ever happened that was so misrepresented in literature and in history," he said.

"To understand it one must look back into the early history of the war, when federal sympathizers had Southerners in Missouri at their mercy.

"My father was opposed to the war and had friends on both sides, but was shot down in cold blood and robbed by a gang of Federal freebooters as he was driving home from Kansas City. That day changed my whole life. The knowledge that my father had been killed in cold blood filled my hearth with lust for vengeance.

"I was 19 the day we started from Blackwater, Mo., about 800 strong—the Quantrell band, I mean. It was August 26, 1863. I was lieutenant in one company of the command.

"When we reached a hill in sight of Lawrence we learned from an old hog feeder that there were 800 regular Federal troops in Lawrence and 300 militiamen.

"Soon we came upon them. There were no guards and we tore open the flaps of their tents and killed them as fast as our guns could work. We lost only four dead and three wounded. Then we rode away and fought for 24 hours with pursuers who had been organized. They followed us until we were among friends in Missouri."

That is the gist of Cole Younger's story of one of the bloodiest episodes of the border warfare whetween Missouri Southerners and Kansas Northerners during the Civil war. It was the start of his career as an outlaw.

The remaining years of the war were busy ones for Cole Younger and his three brothers. Mobs several times were formed to lynch the Younger boys, but each time good marksmanship of the brothers drove away the would-be lynchers.

In the early '70s the escapades of the James boys in robbing banks and trains attracted nation-wide attention, and the Younger brothers got credit for being in many of these, when really they were hundreds of miles away.

One day, while sitting in a hotel, he overheard a conversation that Gen. Ben. Butler of the Union army had taken back from the South $300,000 in cash, and had it in a bank in Northfield, Minn.

The Quantrell raider became possessed with the idea of getting back that money. He thought of his friends, the James boys, already under the ban of the law as bank robbers. He sought out Frank and Jesse James and plans for the robbery were laid.

There were eight in the party which Cole Younger led to Northfield, his two brothers, the two James boys and three others.

"A bottle of whiskey kept that robbery from being a success," said the former bandit. "I didn't touch it myself but Bob did and the men under him did.

"When they walked into the Northfield bank they were drunk. They disobeyed by instructions not to shoot to kill and they took the life of the cashier of the bank the first thing.

"Five of us tried to keep off the crowd while the other three did the robbing, but we were hard pressed.

"I called to the boys in the bank to come out, but they were slow and the whole town was shooting at us before we got started away.

"All of us were hit as we rode away, but, by jumping from wounded horses and riding double, we managed to get out of town. For two weeks we eluded them, but at last they surrounded some of us in a swamp between St. James and Madelia and I say the jig was up for us. The James Boys had separated from us and made their escape."

TELEPHONE ETIQUETTE

"I thought the telephone was a most informal instrument," objected one girl to another who had spoken of telephone etiquette.

"Etiquette," said the other, "is simply courtesy, and naturally one can be as courteous over the telephone as anywhere else, but how many of us are?"

It certainly is exasperating to be given a wrong number; but to speak in a sharp, angry tone to the person who answers the 'phone under such circumstances is as unjust as it is impolite. Instead of rudely requesting him to "ring off," you should say, "I beg your pardon!" as if you really meant it.

Many women have an exasperating way of asking, "Who is this?" when some one answers their call whose voice they do not recognize. Always ask for the person you want to speak to, and mention who wants her.

In talking to business people be as brief as possible, for their time is valuable. Girls who have the telephone habit should be made to realise that it is most embarrassing for employees to be called to the 'phone during business hours unless the message is very important, and that an employer is not pleased to say the least, when he sees his clerk wasting his time talking social matters over the telephone.

It is difficult to realize that pleasure can be had from gossiping into a hole in the wall, but it is a temptation to many. Say what you have to say and get through with it. Don't keep the wire occupied with aimless chatter when, perhaps, it is urgently needed for an important message.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 15.—Acute scarcity of wheat reserves predicted for the near future had a bullish effect today on the wheat market here, but rural holders were said to be selling a little more freely, and some of the gain in price disappeared. There was an unsettled close at 5-8c to 1 1-4c above last night. Corn finished a shade to 3-8c higher, oats off 3-8c to ½c to 1-2c up and provisions down 5c to 10c.

Corn was helped upward by wheat strength and by continued reports of crop damage in Argentina. Country offerings, tho, as was the case with wheat, increased somewhat on the advance. Two steamers were announced to leave Chicago tonight with 700,000 bushels of corn for Buffalo, the first vessels of the season.

In the oats trade free buying of July and selling of May by houses that generally act for the seaboard caused a decided narrowing of the spread between the two deliveries. There was also a good deal of speculative buying of July.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 15.—There was less enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today, but the tone of cables was stronger and the prices bid showed an advance of 6d to 1s per quarter and sales of a few odd loads were made for May-June strength in the Winnipeg option market for oats of late, a stronger feeling developed in the local market today and prices advanced 1-2c to 1c per bushel, but there was no improvement in the local or outside demand and business was generally quiet. Argentine corn is also stronger and 1c per bushel higher at 81 1-2c. Ontario malting barley is easier. Flour is stronger and prices for spring wheat grades are likely to be advanced soon. There is a fairly good enquiry from foreign buyers for flour and further sales were made today at an advance of 6d per sack, but the local trade is still quiet. Demand for millfeed is rather quiet for domestic account, but some sales of fair sized lots were made for export. A stronger feeling has prevailed in the butter market and prices are 1c per pound higher under an improved demand for small lots. Cheese quiet, but firm. Eggs fally active. Potatoes stronger at an advance of 2 1-2c per bag.

This prescription for the removal of freckles was written by a prominent physician and is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by druggists under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Zam-Buk Unanimously Endorsed

A prominent Woman's Journal recently asked its lady readers to give an opinion, based on personal experience, of several widely-known Canadian products. The publishers recently wrote the proprietors of Zam-Buk to the following effect.—"In connection with our competition, we have received in the neighbourhood of 12,000 letters. We do not know of one instance where the proportion of satisfied users of any product was so great as proved to be the case in regard to Zam-Buk."

Herein lies the proof of the superiority of Zam-Buk—the proof of experience! No amount of advertising, no mere assertion on our part could create such unbounded confidence in Zam-Buk as these Canadian housewives have expressed. Only the plain, straightforward test of Zam-Buk in the home could do this.

Zam-Buk is entirely different to all other ointments. Most ointments contain coarse animal fats. In some cases these fats clog up the pores of the skin and retard its action Zam-Buk is purely herbal.

Many ointments have no antiseptic properties, cannot ease the pain, and in fact cause pain when used. Zam-Buk, on the other hand, is antiseptic. As soon as applied to a wound or sore it kills the germs, thus banishing all risk of blood poison, and ends pain.

Zam-Buk is superior to all other ointments, because it is purely herbal, and is healing, soothing, and antiseptic.

If you suffer from any skin disease, injury, or chronic sore, remember the 12,000 letters from housewives who have proved Zam-Buk. Do not waste time and money experimenting with inferior remedies,—try Zam-Buk first!

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, will send you a free trial box on receipt of this article, name of paper, and 1c. stamp to pay return postage.

Gets About $100,000

Mrs. Michael Fraser to Get Above Amount—Barrie Will Case

BARRIE, April 16.— The famous Michael Fraser will case reached its final stage when, all objections having been withdrawn by the McCormicks, probate was granted in favour of the wife. This litigation, which has been going on for over two years and must have cost in the neighbourhood of $15,000, was ended through a settlement reached between the parties. Though the terms have not been made public, it is said that the McCormicks are conceded between $15,000 and $20,000.

As soon as the Michael Fraser will was probated Mrs. Fraser fell heir to the big estate of Michael Fraser's brother John, who left everything to his brother Michael. This estate was originally placed at $48,000, but with three years' accrued interest and appreciation of values, is now worth well on to $60,000. Michael Fraser and John Irwin were the executors, but the latter, as surviving executor, could not have the estate wound up until such time as the courts decided who should get Michael Fraser's property.

This point having been disposed of by the settlement, John Irwin, executor of the John Fraser estate, appeared before Judge Vance to have his accounts passed. Mrs. Fraser also appeared in person Mr. Finlayson acted for Irwin, and Mr. Grant for Mrs. Fraser. Argument was heard and judgment reserved on a number of disputed items.

Michael Fraser's estate was probated at $69,474.78, made up as follows: Household effects, $500; mortgages, $15,632; cash in bank, $23,342.58; real estate, $30,000.

If $15,000 was eaten up by litigation and a similar amount conceded to the McCormicks, it would still leave Mrs. Fraser in the neighbourhood of $100,000.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Permission was sought to-day by Jack Curley, manager of Jess Willard, to have the world's champion heavyweight put on the gloves and spar with his partners on the stage at Hammerstein's, where Willard is appearing.

The State Athletic Commission heard the plaint of Curley, and then reiterated its refusal to permit the fighter to box on any stage. Curley was told that if Willard desires to box he must conform to the rules of the commission, and that means in the arena of a club having a proper license from the State.

NO NEWS FROM FRENCH WAR OFFICE

GERMAN REPORTS SAY THE FRENCH ARE ON THE ATTACK

Foe Claims to Have Repulsed the Efforts of the Allies Except at a Point Northwest of Arras---French Communication Adds Nothing to Details Given Out Yesterday

MASSACRE OF CHRISTIANS FEARED

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, April 17. — Hot fighting is going on at four distinct points in the battle line in France, according to the despatches received here to-day. The war office officially announced a German repulse northwest of Arras but declared that at every other point the enemy has been checked or forced back. The French have resumed the offensive against the German wedge between the Meuse and the Moselle. They have concentrated their forces in an attack on the German positions near Flirey, west of Pont-a-Mousson, but have been repulsed. Northwest of Arras, in the Lorette hills, the Germans were forced to evacuate a small position at Appui.

PARIS, April 17.—The official statement to-day contained no information whateven not given out by the war office last night.

BRITISH ADVANCING

LONDON, April 17.—A large Turkish force, whose defeat at Shaiba, Mesopotamia, was reported last night, has been driven beyond Nakhailah, and the British troops are now advancing to take the town, according to an official statement from the Indian office to-night. The British took 200 prisoners, several machine guns, seven hundred thousand rounds of rifle cartridge and 450 boxes of gun ammunition.

TABRIZ, Persia, Friday, April 16.—Engagements between the Armenians and the Kurds frequenting the vicinity of Van in Turkish Armenia, according to reliable information, are reaching Tabriz, and a general masacre of the Christians in the province of Bashkala, is feared. The Armenians of Van are hurriedly trying to organize volunteers in the Azerbaijan province of Persia, to help them against the Turks and Kurds.

HALLE-ON-THE-SALLE, Germany, April 17.—Ten British officers, prisoners of the Germans, have been taken from the local camp of prisoners of war, and placed in solitary confinement in Magdburg. This is measure of reprisal for the treatment by Great Britain of the crews of the German submarines held prisoners in England.

ANOTHER AIR RAID

LONDON, April 17.—A German taube flew over Selby, 12 miles from York, to-day, on the fourth aerial "invasion" of Britain in the last 60 hours.

A BERLIN STORY

BERLIN, via wireless, April 17.—The Grand Duke Nicholas, commander in chief of the Russian army, was shot in the abdomen and seriously wounded by Baron Sievers, the commander of the defeated Russian tenth corps, during a heated quarrel, according to an article published to-day by the Duisburg newspaper Anzeiger. Baron Sievers, it was reported,then committed suicide. The newspaper said it had received this information from "absolutely unimpeachable source." The Grand Duke, the article said, summoned Sievers to the headquarters and demanded that he explain his defeat. During the quarrel the Grand Duke boxed General Sievers' ears, whereupon the latter drew a revolver, and shot the Duke.

TOKIO, Japan, April 17.—Count Okuma, the Japanese Premier, speaking to-day to a number of journalists on the European war expressed the opinion that the hostilities would have to come to an end owing to the exhaustion of the belligerents.

BIG WAR ORDERS

NEW YORK, April 17.—Wall street was alive to-day with more reports of "war orders" for the allies. If current stories are creditable, Russia alone has placed orders for a hundred million dollars worth of shrapnel during the week. Some of the orders have positive confirmation.

American Locomotive officials admitted to-day that the company expects to close soon a large shrapnel order. The Canadian Car and Foundry Company is also said to be farming out to various concerns throughout Canada eighty millions dollars worth of shrapnel for Russia.

REV. DOUGALD BROWN.
New pastor of the Park St. Baptist Church who will preach in that church to-morrow.

THE NEW PASTOR OF PARK STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. Dougald Brown Who Has Been Called to the Pastorate Was a Member of Same Graduating Class as Rev. J. R. Webb

PREACHES HERE TO-MORROW

Rev. Dougald Brown, who has been called to Park Street Baptist Church, will preach at both services to-morrow. He is spending the week-end here for the purposes of laying plans for the future, and will begin his regular pastorate at Park Street early in May.

Mr. Brown was born on a farm in the township of North Dorchester, near the village of Belmont, County of Middlesex. At about the age of 20 he was converted, and joined the Baptist Church at Gladstone. Feeling called to the ministry he left the farm and entered Woodstock College. After a four years' course he entered McMaster University, from which he received the diploma as a graduate in theology in 1890, Rev. J. R. Webb, of Murray Street Baptist Church being also a member of the same graduating class. Mr. Brown's first pastorate was at Kenilworth, Ontario, where he remained about two years, when he accepted a call to the Nina St. Mission of Winnipeg, where his work was greatly blessed, the mission being raised to the status of a church.

Returning to Toronto he spent a year in special study at his Alma Mater, when he accepted a call to Midland. Here the work prospered wonderfully. The old house of worship was outgrown and a much larger edifice, formerly occupied by the Methodists, was purchased, refitted and enlarged. His next charge was at Osgoode, Ontario, where he remained three years, when, at the urgent request of his former charge, he returned to Midland. After a second pastorate of four years he accepted a call to Spingford and Otterville field, his last charge before he accepted the invitation to Park Street Church. His parishioners are parting with him with the deepest regret; one of these as an inducement for him to decline the Peterborough call, offered to make him the present of an automobile. He is coming to Peterborough at considerable financial sacrifice. Mr Brown is a preacher of unusual gifts and is much in demand for public addresses. His evangelistic gifts are well known, and during the past winter especially he has had successful missions, not only in his own church but also at Strathroy and Norwich, with large results. Mrs. Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin, of Midland, her father being a well-known engineer of the Grand Trunk.

800 RECRUITS IN FEW DAYS PRAISE FOR A LOCAL BOY

Dublin Has Recently Contributed That Number to Kitchener's Army—South of Ireland Running Stronger Than Ever

VOLUNTEER DEMONSTRATION

Copyright 1915 Central News by T. P. O'Connor

LONDON, April 17.—Joseph Devlin, who has come to London for the present Parliamentary sittings, plays an extraordinary part in Irish politics. As secretary of the United Irish League he governs the political life of every town and village. By a rare combination of passionate eloquence that moves irresistibly and an intense capacity for organization down to the last details, he is at once an orator and the heart of the whole Irish movement. Not holding public office for salary, he assumes the responsibility and does the work of a Cabinet Minister, and thus governs the inner political life of Ireland in a more real sense than the chief secretary, with all the forces of the Imperial Government behind him.

This powerful politician is physically a short man, with clean shaven cheeks, a soft voice, and a gentle manner except when his hot temper is aroused by oppression. Although forty years old, he still looks like a Peter Pan boy. Tim Healy, who hates him, once called him a Duodecimo Demosthenes, but he might be more appropriately called Duodecimo O'Connell. Though small while O'Connell is tall, he resembles the latter in respect to his round Irish face, big brainy head, mobile lips and strong resolute jaw. The figure nearest to him in American politics was Stephen Douglass.

Devlin returns to London in high spirits because of the success of the volunteer demonstration. When interviewed he said the demonstration was beyond his most sanguine expectations and the fact that all volunteers paid their own expenses made the spontaneous magnitude of the demonstration all the more remarkable. When I asked him what had happened to the Sinnfeiners, he remarked rather impatiently: "Oh they do not exist outside of Dublin, and even there, you will find but a few who might be called Larkinites rather than Sinnfeiners. They are but a small and noisy little faction.

"The best part of the demonstration, and which was least observed, took place in Phoenix Park, where 20,000 of the finest looking men ever, went through the various movements of the drill with perfect organization. I was of course specially proud of the Belfast regiment, every man of which carried a rifle and wore a uniform both of which were paid for by the men themselves. Other places also did extraordinary well, Tipperary sending 40,000. The popularity and importance of the movement was strongly shown by the fact that there never has been so great a crowd of spectators in Dublin since the dedication of the O'Connell monument. Four miles of street, every inch of the side paths and every window were crammed with people. Their reception of the volunteers was most enthusiastic and from first to last there was not a single voice of disapproval."

Have Now 10,000 Rifles.

In answer to a question as to how far the arming of the volunteers had gone, Devlin said:

"We already have about 10,000 rifles in Ireland but I may as well tell you that while we bought the rifles first with the funds of the organization we have since got back all the money by reselling them to the volunteers."

In response to a query as to the size of the fund, he said:

"We have not made a national appeal for funds, the people spontaneously raised what we have all over the country. The village of Kilkeel, County Down, only half of which is Nationalist, raised £1,200. It is a fact that we can raise the money to arm every volunteer in Ireland."

'I asked, can you get rifles?'

"Certainly, he said. "We shall now proceed regularly in upbuilding our organization and equipping it."

Turning to the attitude of Ireland toward the war, Devlin declared that he was growing stronger in the opinion that he had held from the first that every Irishman fighting for the allies in Flanders was fighting as much for Ireland as if on the soil of Ireland. "And, emphatically, that is the opinion of Ireland as unanimous

A LOCAL BOY

Picton Soldier Says Sergt. Arthur Ackerman of Peterboro' is a Good Example of Pluck For the Rest of the Section

"A VERY NERVY CHAP"

Special to The Examiner:

The following letter from Pte. Aaron [illegible] of Picton, appears in a Picton exchange, and is of especial local interest:

France, Mar. 17, 1915.

Dear Sarah,—I am writing this on St. Patrick's Day but I do not expect to mail it for a week or two. I am enclosing a parody on "My Little Gray Home in the West." It is based on real facts and written by someone in the trenches. We had a nice little souvenir at our last billet in the shape of an eight-pound shell which landed in the field close by but luckily failed to explode. You know that a very large percentage of their ammunition is very poor, having been manufactured in such a hurry.

The last visit to the trenches turned out to be the most interesting in point of experiences which I have had to date. The first night in I was on listening post in front of our parapets some distance away. One can hear the Germans talking and singing from this point. So you can imagine what a novel experience it was for me. Had to lie at on my stomach and keep a sharp look out in case the enemy attacked our position. It snowed for two hours on my shift and when relieved had two inches of snow all over me and was chilled to the bone. However, I felt as well as ever after being in the dug-out for half an hour or so.

I presume you heard of poor Anselm Denike's death. I can gladly say that he died like a hero. The only regret he voiced was for his family and Ivy.

Must tell you about the rather narrow escapes of our section sergeant, Art Ackerman, from Peterborough. When walking along behind the parapet he felt a stunning sensation on the side of the head. For the moment he thought he was shot through the head, but upon examination he found that the bullet just nipped his ear and left two holes in his cap. Only the next day he stuck his head over the parapet again and a German sniper put a bullet about half an inch from his ear. It was so close that he was under the impression that he was hit. Though he is alive only by the rarest good fortune, he is not a bit worried. He laughed off both escapes in a jocular manner. He is certainly a very nervy chap and a good example of pluck for the rest of us.

Will close with best regards to all in Picton and love to the kids.

Yours lovingly,

AARON.

My Little Wet Home in a Trench.

I've a little wet home in a trench,
Where the rain storms continually drench,
There's a dead cow close by,
With her feet towards the sky,
And she gives off a beautiful stench;
Underneath, in the place of a floor,
There's a mass of wet mud and some straw,
And the Jack Johnsons tear
Through the rain-sodden air,
O'er my little wet home in a trench.

There are snipers who keep on the go,
So you must keep your napper down low,
And their star shells at night
Make a deuce of a light,
Which causes the language to flow;
Then bully and biscuits we chew,
For it's days since we tasted a stew,
But with shells dropping there,
There's no place to compare,
With my little wet home in a trench.

PTE. NICHOLLS IS LAID TO REST WITH MILITARY HONOURS

Impressive Service at the Armouries Followed by a Military Cortege That Brought the War More Closely Home to Peterborough People

FLAGS AT HALF MAST

The funeral of the late Pte. Harry Nicholls of the 57th detachment of the 39th Battalion took place this afternoon, the [illegible] being laid to rest with full military honours. It was a most impressive event, a solemn pageant that brought the war more closely home to the thousands of people who lined George Street as the cortege passed.

There was a brief service at the family residence, after which the body was taken to the armouries, escorted by a firing party from the 39th Battalion.

At the Armouries.

The service at the Armouries was conducted by Adjutant J. A. McElhiney, of the Salvation Army. The order of service was as follows:

Hymn—"O God Our Help in Ages Past," 57th Band accompaniment.
Prayer.
Scripture Reading.
Address—Mayor Butler.
Hymn—"Heavenly Missions," Temple Male Choir.
Address—Adj. J. A. McElhiney.
Hymn—"Nearer My God to Thee."
Benediction.

His Worship Mayor Buller on behalf of the citizens, sympathized with the relatives and friends in their hour of bereavement. He referred to the patriotic spirit that had prompted deceased to enlist for overseas service. In conclusion he asked the parents to accept the sympathy of the citizens at large.

In a stirring and appropriate address, Adjutant McElhiney commended the spirit of the deceased to His Maker. The late Private Nicholls had gone forth to fight for his country and was stricken by a greater enemy that that which he went to meet, Disease had claimed him as it had claimed many others. The parents would find consolation in the fact that they could be present at the service, whereas if deceased were stricken at the front he would probably find a resting place in a nameless grave. The service closed with the singing of the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

The Cortege.

The funeral cortege was a most impressive one. First came the firing party, composed of members of the 57th detachment of the 39th battalion in charge of Sergt.-Major Dunkerley, marching with rifles reversed. The 57th Regimental Band with muffled drums playing the Dead March in "Saul" came next, followed by the flower-adorned hearse, containing the coffin of the dead soldier, draped in a Union Jack. The mourners came next, and marching behind their carriage came soldier comrades of the deceased, representatives from the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles and the 26th Battery. 'D. company of the 57th Regiment, to which he deceased belonged, was next, followed by a large representation of the 57th Regiment. Then followed Capt. Carruthers representing Lt.-Col. Preston and the officer of the battalion, and Mayor representing the city. A delegation from the Fire Department and from Court Stanley, Ancient Order of Foresters, completed the cortege.

One detail of a complete military funeral was lacking, no gun carriage being available, owing to the equipment of the 24th Field Battery being in active service.

At the grave after the usual solemn service, the firing party fired three rounds over the grave of their dead comrade.

CARD OF THANKS.

Mrs. Cameron wishes to thank all those citizens who in any way assisted her son Roderick to win in the pony contest competition. The deep interest taken in the contest by the citizens generally and the help given was most gratifying and encouraging. Her thanks too, are due those merchants who undertook the contest and gave the prize. The pony and outfit are fully up to representations and they constitute a prize such as has never before been offered to boys in Peterborough. The value of the prize is enhanced by the consciousness that all who took part in the contest learned the value of hard work and perseverance. They also possibly gained their first insight into business which should be of lasting benefit to them.

The late Pte. Harry Nicholls of the 57th detachment of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., the first soldier recruited in Peterborough to pass away. His funeral took place this afternoon.

PETERBORO' BOYS STILL SHINING AS ENTERTAINERS

Five of Them Take Part in 39th Battalion Smoker—Squad of Mounted Rifles Are Home From Ottawa

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

As will be seen from the following from the Belleville Intelligencer, the Peterborough boys training as entertainers here is bringing them prominthe movie artists perform. Col. Pres Lightheart, Allen, Lord, Gummer and Fallis taking part in the 39th Battalion's weekly smoker:

The 39th Battalion's weekly smoke, outgrew its old meeting place in th Mess Room and so last night the Cit Hall was used for this purpose. At 7 o'clock the moving picture operato started his machine and for an hour and a quarter the soldiers watches the movie artists perform. Col. Pres ton then arrived, and the musica programme of the evening started. Those from the Battalion taking part were Corporal Harman, Lance-Corporals McNorton and Lightheart Ptes. Allen, Lord, Scrivner, McNorton, Farrow, Gummer, with Pte. Fallis as pianist, all of whose number were received with enthusiasm; but the one who won the greatest favour of applause was Miss Anna Ponton, whose rendering of "The Soldiers of the King," and "Marjory Green" brought forth such a volume of clapping, shouts and whistles as to make the ears ring. During the course of the evening it was announced that similar concerts would be held in the City Hall on following Thursday evenings, and that Mrs. Allen had kindly consented to provide the great er part of the programme for the coming Thursday; also that on Sunday evenings a meeting for soldiers would be held in the City Hall. Col. Preston voiced the sentiment of the gathering when he said that the Battalion was indebted to Mr. Scott, the lessee of the hall, for the considerate manner in which he had given the use of the place of meeting

KINGSTON, April 16. — The 21st Battalion arrived in the city last evening about five o'clock from Odessa and were in good condition, the men having stood the twenty-six mile march like veterans. The battalion remained in Odessa for an hour and thirty-five minutes and during this time dinner was served.

On both the out and in marches advance and rear guards were thrown out. The reports of the advance guards on bridges, culverts and other matter of importance to marching

Radial Railway's Auto Service

A semi-jitney service was put into operation by the Street Railway Company this morning on Charlotte Street. The car service between Bethune and Park Street is temporarily non-extant, while a new line is being laid ahead of the street paving. The jitney bus bridges the blocks from Park to Bethune and continues the trip to the corner of Charlotte and George Streets. The route covered is from the Park Street corners to King to Bethune and down Charlotte. Albert Windsor was the driver this morning, and Conductor Harry Smith was on the rumble step at the rear. In a convenient place is a bicycle push bell representing the cord service of the street cars. Written along one side in large letters of chalk were the words, "Police Patrol." An attempt had been made to erase them, but the work was not a complete success.

The bus serves adequately in its present use. The rapid service and seeming convenience suggested that a jitney service might be successful in sections not touched by the street cars.

QUARTERLY MEETING PATRIOTIC FUND

The regular quarterly meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Canadian Patriotic Fund and of the Peterborough Relief Association will be held on Tuesday night, April 20th, at 8 o'clock in the City Council chamber.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL.

The Examiner received to-day a communication from the Conservation Commission enjoining the observance of Arbour Day. Arbour Day, as its name implies, demands the planting and care of trees. It is rather late in the year to bring up this subject; for it is time that most trees should be planted, and the time is short in which they can be safely and satisfactorily planted.

The Conservation Commission is not the only body that is behind in the matter of tree planting. The City Council, has so far as known, made no preparation for planting street trees; and private citizens show little sign of supplementing the negligence of the city in this regard.

In this matter the citizens of the present generation have not the taste, enterprise and public spirit of the past generation. During the course of the past thirty or so years the magnificent stand of street and other trees that make the streets of the city a delight in the summer and contribute to luxury of living, were planted. The public spirit and love of the beautiful in trees of the past generation, were greatly to their credit for they were of a succeeding generation to that which had to wrestle with forest conditions; had to "clear" the land and so came to regard trees as enemies to be got rid of. Their children must have imbibed something of this spirit; but their public spirit rose superior to it and, hence, we owe the majority of our stately street trees of Peterborough, to their taste and regard for beauty and comfort.

The people did this then; for the primitive village or town councils of those days had the same lack of public spirit, the same lack of sense of the beautiful, and sense of responsibility to the public and the community, that marks the city councils of the present advanced age; an age when it is presumed that culture and refinement would have kept pace with the growth of population and the commercial importance and dignity of the city.

As a matter of duty and legal right no private citizen is required or has a legal right to plant a tree upon a public street. The streets of the city are under the authority and involve the administrative responsibility of the city as represented by the City Council. A citizen has no more right nor does it come any more within his duty to plant street trees than to spend private money and personal labour upon constructing or repairing street highways.

In the past citizens have planted trees because they had the beauty of the city and the comfort of their fellow citizens at heart; and seeing that councils neglected this duty, they did it themselves, with little encouragement from the civic authorities, but on the contrary, with indifference, amounting at times, to positive obstruction; or destruction of the tree growth fostered by private citizens.

Not only has the city never planted a single street tree, but various city representatives from time to time, have destroyed magnificent trees of almost secular age, and of venerable dignity and beauty, the results of the restraining hand of some early citizen who had saved them from the woodmen's axe, or rather the blade of the civic vandal.

It is the duty of the city to plant street trees in order to have the work systematized, to have uniformity; and the proper varieties selected for the soil of a locality, and proper lines and distances observed.

Though our present street trees when in full leaf and regarded in mass, are magnificent, yet closer examination reveals startling defects of alignment or distance. Upon the same street in many cases, there will be found three or four different lines and kinds of trees. We see numerous vacancies; we see a fine row of trees on one side of a street, and the other vacant and bare. We see trees planted too closely together; we see trees of a variety that never should be planted upon a street; that even at comparative maturity are gnarled, stunted and ungraceful.

There are places in the streets of Peterborough for thousands of trees—to fill vacancies in existing rows, to plant newer streets, and to adorn, beautify, and make comfortable long stretches of streets now without trees. The trees needed in these places should be planted by the city, which has just as much responsibility in the matter of trees in planting them in the streets as in one of the public parks. A street is in reality, or can be made, an extension of a park—if it is beautified with trees, and facilities for beautiful boulevards, provided.

It is nearly a hundred years since the site of Peterborough was surveyed—1818—we have had nearly a hundred councils, and in all that time we have not had one council that recognized its duty in regard to beautification of the streets with trees, or otherwise. Not one of the nearly a hundred councils has planted a street tree. The present council, or last year's council is, or was, no exception. They spend large sums of the public's money to pave and beautify the central parts of the city, according to the requirements of modern ideas; but they neglect, the outer streets, the residence streets, that could be made beautiful with trees and boulevards, at a comparatively trifling expense. In this matter the attitude of councils suggests the witty Hibernian's description of the style of architecture of his new residence—"Queen Anne in front and Mary Anne in the rear." The centre is perly, too, with extensive and expensive pavements and brilliant lighting; but the residence sections, in the matter of street surface and adornment with trees, and otherwise, are neglected and step-mothered in the most thorough way.

Here we have tree planting time upon us and thousands of places in our city streets crying out for trees, and we don't suppose, but quite know, that the city has not made provision for planting a single street tree as they are in duty bound to do.

It is evident from the neglect or indifference of past and present councils that we shall never have the right conditions for planting, and pruning, and care of street trees till we have street tree planting and boulevard beautification, placed in charge of a Parks' Commission, or its equivalent, composed of men who know and care. It is certain that if city councils know, they don't care about street trees, for from time to time they have destroyed wantonly, maliciously, and without justification some of the most venerable and magnificent street trees in the city. Only last summer a citizen interested had to almost literally fight to have spared a splendid and thrifty street tree on the extension of Hunter street from Belmont to Walton street; and there was one noble young tree—one pillar of an arboreal gaetway to the new street—that he couldn't save. These things are heartrending to citizen of taste and interest in the city's beauty.

We need to have our street and public trees placed under the charge of a body that will not compel the citizens to fight for the preservation of the tree beauty of the city, but will bring to bear, sympathy, taste and culture, in place of the sordid utilitarianism that sacrifices tree beauty involving a century of growth to mistaken ideas of "improvement."

If we are to succeed in making Peterborough the beautiful residential paradise it can be made by the application of a little public spirit, and the expenditure of comparatively very little money and expenditure of concerted effort, these citizens who lead in the promotion of the city beautiful idea, through such a medium as the Horticultural Society, and otherwise, must get together and devise some plan whereby public authority in some form, shall second the efforts and aid the ambitions of citizens of taste who think that there is needed something besides a central stretch of paved and brilliantly lighted stretes to make Peterborough the city beautiful.

A THIN EXCUSE.

The excuse for holding a general election at a wrong time, offered by the Government, could be called ridiculously frivolous, if it did not involve the injury of most important interests. The interests of democracy, demagogically championed by, of all men, Hon. Robert Rogers, is the reductio of Government dignity and responsibility, ad absurdum. The head of the Senate is demanded by Mr. Rogers because it insisted on postponing the addition of western members to the Senate till after the present Parliament. And for that we are to have, the expense, turmoil, and injury to national and imperial interests involved in a premature general election. The interests of the Conservative party are set against the interests of Canada and the Empire. The election brought on, as frankly admitted, to discipline the Senate, is directly in the interest of the Conservative party—to create a Conservative majority in the Senate, solely in the interests of the party. It is declared by the Government press that at present, with a Liberal majority, Sir Wilfrid is "master of the Senate, bending it to his will, etc." Will it be any different if Sir Robert Borden becomes "master of the Senate?" With a Conservative Parliament and a Conservative Senate, would there not be as much playing into the hands of the party, as it is claimed there would be with the political complexions reversed? A general election won't reform the Senate, and won't do in this regard a particle of good to compensate the evil it will do if held at this time. The object of an election is not to reform the Senate in the interests of democracy, but to make it a party machine of another complexion than it is claimed it now is. This object can be attained by waiting till after the next Parliament, elected at the legal end of the present Parliament, instead of at a time when an election is unnecessary, and under the circumstances will imperil the interests we are fighting for in helping wage the present war. The Senate is a mere trumpery excuse for holding an election, not more defensible than the excuse the wolf of the fable gave for eating the lamb.

CONSISTENCY?

Yesterday in the police court, three employees of merchants were arraigned and very properly fined for breach of a city by-law, which forbids dry-sweeping of the walks in front of shops. The walks should be moistened before sweeping to prevent raising dust that, possibly impregnated by disease germs, might be carried into the lungs of the public. Was the same day the city machine sweeper dry-swept the streets, and in the process raised more detrimental dust, than all the shop porters would raise in months of dry-sweeping. Comment is unnecessary; but it is permissible to suggest to the Mayor that he should emulate the courage of the Brutus who condemned his two sons to death, by originating a prosecution against himself or some alderman, to provide punishment of the city for transgression of its own by-law. The cause of such things lies in the utter lack of system that marks civic administrative methods.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

Taxicar Meters Used Many Years Ago—Orientals Had Crude But Effective Apparatus

Now comes China and takes credit for inventing the taxicab 1800 years before they chased the horse cabs away from the union station, says the Kansas City Times.

The Chinese cabs were of two kinds. Large ones, built with two stories were the omnibuses of Peking in 250 A. D. They were four-pony power. Small one-pony affairs were the Union station pests.

The taximeter, while more cumbersome and simple than those used today, was a practical affair. It stopped when the cab stopped, a virtue the modern meter is suspected not to have. The meter consisted of two small figures, a drum and a bell.

One figure and the drum were on the first floor, front. Whenever the taxi had travelled one li (variously estimated to be from 480 to 600 yards) the figure jerked its arm and banged the drum. The attention of the present taxi companies is called to this feature. It would enable a passenger to keep some sort of a check on how much of his fortune the chauffeur would demand when he alighted.

When ten li had been covered the drummer rested and the other figure worked. A tap on the well would signify that distance. Then every time the taxi rider heard a drum beat, for instance, he could detach a $5 or $10 bill, as the case may be, from his roll and place it, say, in a rack which would be within easy reach of the driver. Every time the bell sounded the chaffeur coul stop the cab, hastily don a black mask, present his revolver in the direction of the passenger and assume personal charge of the money which had accumulated in the rak. By following that system taxicab companies would offer a pleasing diversion to their patrons.

The Chinese system of collecting taxicab fare was decidedly crude. When a passenger alighted he presented the driver with one of those laundry ticket affairs Chinese are so fond of making. The ticket informed the driver how many times the drum and bell had sounded since the passenger had started. The driver then reached for his abacus and, after a few simple manoeuvres on it, he announced the fare. It was then paid and the journey resumed.

The lower story of the busses usually was pre-empted by officials. The lower classes rode in the second story. It was the custom for the occupants of each story to select one of their number to sit beside the meter and see that the driver gave the figures no assistance. The drum was mounted, as has been said, on the first floor, front; the bell on the second floor, rear.

The Chinese cab was also fitted with a compass. That was necessary because of the entire absence of roads after one left the city in those days. That forced the driver to have some little intelligence, another feature in the situation in which modern companies.

(P. S.—Attention is called to the fact that at no place in the foregoing article is this sentence used: "The Chinese meters did not lie about the li.")

TOOK IN TRIP OF OBSERVATION

Commencing next week, the garbage collectors will start around at 7 a.m. To date the custom has been an 8 a.m. start, but there are many citizens who are desirous of having the garbage away earlier and a system inaugurated to this end now that the warm season is not far off.

A WARNING.

Sanitary Inspector Spence states that the carters through the city who are cleaning out back yards, etc., must be more careful about the dumping of refuse. The by-law distinctly states that only clean ashes may be disposed of on any dumping ground. All other refuse must be taken to the incinerator.

The Inspector has been receiving information to the effect that in some instances the by-law is being violated. Unless the carters are more careful, prosecutions will be in order.

Who Pays the Penalty?

Last April two of our representatives solicited applications for life assurance from a prominent Toronto wholesale merchant and his son.

They succeeded in selling to the father a policy for a considerable amount, but the son could not be induced to protect his dependents in this way against the financial loss which would result from his early death.

Less than two months afterwards the daily newspapers recorded the tragic story of the younger man's accidental death. His failure to act when action was possible deprives his family of the insurance money which he could have secured to them so easily.

Have you made any provision for your wife and little ones in case you should die suddenly? An Imperial Home Protection Policy will do it. Write for particulars to-day; tomorrow may be too late.

BIG FORCE UNDER ARMS

Italy Has Now 1,200,000 Men Ready For Service

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, April 17. (Via Paris.)—Italy to-day has 1,200,000 first line soldiers under arms. They are from 20 to 26 years of age. They are perfectly armed and equipped otherwise "to the last button."

Gen. Zupelli, the Italian Minister of War, speaking on the military situation in Italy, said that a miracle had been accomplished in that a country which for about twenty years had maintained a military organization merely for the preservation of peace had created what he termed one of the most perfect war machines. The change was not easy, Gen. Zupelli said, as was proved wherever the same work was attempted. Great Britain, for example, had faced the same problem, and though possessing greater resources, was even less prepared than Italy. The War Minister said that the equipment of the army with weapons was superior proportionately to that of the German army at the beginning of the war.

GROUND LITTERED WITH CORPSES

Terrible Condition Prevails in Front of Neuve Chapelle

NEUVE CHAPELLE, France, April 17.—The ground to the west of this now shattered town of Neuve Chapelle, from which the British March with such terrible loss of life for both sides, is literally cobbled with German skulls. The dead lie buried in shallow graves everywhere and the vicinity is strewn with wreckage and debris.

The British have made it as tidy as they can, but beneath many of the trenches and dugouts six inches of bayonet will meet the resistance of cloth and human flesh, while in the No Man's Land between the new British line and the German trenches to the east bodies still lie thick.

Neither the Germans nor the British dare attempt to remove the corpses, and unless some situation develops to alter the relative position of the opposing lines, they are likely still to be there when the summer comes. Many of the trenches and the dugouts where the men live unwillingly harbor the bodies of thousands of men which were covered with earth after the British rush. Many have been buried by both the Germans and the British, and little white crosses to-day dot the landscape between the lines.

CRUEL JUDGES DECIDE AGAINST GOOD NATURED ALTHOUGH UNTIDY WOMAN

The Ladies' Literary Society of St. Peter's T. A. S. held their final meeting for this season last evening, when a crowded house listened to a debate by four young ladies on the resolution: "That it is better for a man to marry a good-natured, untidy woman than a neat, cranky woman." The affirmative was taken by Misses May Grady and Kathleen O'Brien, and the negative by Misses Ethel Hayes and Kathleen McCarthy. The judges, Messrs. E. Reynolds, B. M'Avoy and J. New, awarded the decision to the negative, the "neat crank" winning the day.

The chair was very ably occupied by Miss Lillian Hurley. Miss Bernice Giroux played a piano solo, and Rev. Father McColl made a few timely remarks at the conclusion of the debate.

British Taking Up American Slang

Yankeeisms Rapidly Being Incorporated Into Everyday Speech

American slang and Yankeeism are rapidly being incorporated into the speech of the people in England, owing to the vogue of American variety actors, ragtime songs and American books and plays. So one hears born and bred cockneys, who have never taken a four hours' trip from London, tell a person that he will "fix him up" with as much conviction as a Connecticut Yankee—for the expression is a true Yankeeism, and has never been current in the southern states. Educated English men and women not only get off Americanisms unconsciously but seriously.

Newspaperdom has borrowed largely of its slang from the States in "story," "write-up," "thrown down," 'cub," 'living paper," and the like.

American business men have popularized in England such phrases as "made good" and "back to the woods," and 'quick lunch" restaurants have sprung up. Even on the under-ground railways the conductors say 'step lively" instead of the old "please hurry up."

Other bits of current slang attributable to American influences, ragtime and otherwise, are: "The glad eye," "I don't think," 'some peach," 'make a date," 'freeze on to," 'makes one tired," "surest thing you know" and kindred expressions.

Colossal stone statues and other relics of an unknown race on Easter Island, 2000 miles off the coast of South America, are to be studied by English scientists.

WIDOW CONCEDES SUM OF $20,000

Mrs. Fraser Gets Probate of Will With $100,000 to Good

BARRIE, April 17.—The famous Michael Fraser will case reached its final stage when probate was granted in favor of the wife. This litigation, which has been going on for over two years and cost $15,000, was ended by a settlement between the parties. The terms have not been made public, it is said that the McCormacks are conceded between $15,000 and $20,000.

Michael Fraser's estate was probated at $69,474.78, made up as follows: Household effects, $500; mortgages, $15,632; cash in bank, $23,342.58; real estate, $30,000. In addition there is the estate of John Fraser, valued at $60,000. This also goes to Mrs. Fraser.

If $15,000 was eaten upsby litigation, and a similar amount conceded to the McCormacks, it would still leave Mrs. Fraser in the neighborhood of $90,000.

800 RECRUITS IN FEW DAYS

ly as anything can be in a nation," he said. Answering my question as to what was producing this state of feeling in Ireland Devlin said:

"There are a number of causes, Belgium, hatred for the Prussians, and the changed relations between Ireland and England, among others."

The Course of Recruiting.

Replying to a query as to the course of recruiting, he said:

"At first it was somewhat slow for reasons that are perfectly obvious. The delay in putting Home Rule on the statute book; the incidents at Curragh camp; the collision with the Scottish borderers in the streets of Dublin and the increasing feeling in Ireland that the army was an anti-Irish organization. These factors disappeared, however, owing to the keen political instinct of our people concerning what was to the interest as well as the duty of Ireland; also the horror created by the German atrocities."

In answer to a request that he outline the story of recruiting, he replied:

"Ulster responded the quickest in the beginning, but is now slowing up. The South began slowly but is now running stronger than ever. The volunteer demonstration, the visit of the Irish guards, the more tactful methods adopted by the War Office have had considerable effect especially in Dublin, where the most astonishing results followed our demonstration. 800 recruits enlisting within a few days. It is impossible to find the same number of recruits in the agricultural districts, still I am convinced that they will show the same number in proportion to population as England.

"We should have shown more if methods better adapted to Irish recruiting had been taken earlier in the campaign. However, I can say with confidence, that never in the lifetime of any Irishman has Nationalist Ireland been united as to-day. Under the leadership of Redmond the Irish party have behind them an absolutely unanimous people."

PADEREWIKI'S HANDS HAVE GROWN STIFF DURING WAR

My hands have grown stiff and would need three or four months of hard practice before I should care to perform in public."

SIBERIAN WOLVES LEAD IN ALASKA DOG RACE

Took Lead From Scotty Allans Malamutes Outside of Gold Run

NOME, Alaska, April 17.—Leonard Seppala's team of sixteen Siberian wolf dogs jumped into the lead in the All-Alaska Sweepstakes race and entered Gold Run, 182 miles from Nome, one hour and four minutes ahead of the Allan-Darling team of Malamutes.

Seppala's time was 28 hours and 41 minutes, five hours faster than any previous time to Gld Run. He stopped only seven minutes to change his leader, and then started ahead through the snow for Candle, 24 miles away, the turning point in the 412-mile race. Allan rested his dogs 20 minutes, and then started out to overtake Seppals.

Eskimo John, driving the Council Kennel's Club's team, dropped into fourth place between Haven and Gold Run. Paul Kjegstead's bird dogs beating the native driver into that station by twenty-two minutes. Kjegsted's time at 182 miles as thirty hours and eleven minutes, and the Eskimo, 30 hours and 33 minutes. Alex. Holmson, driving Dr. Kittilsen's team of 18 Siberians, was only two minutes behind the Eskimo.

The dogs and drivers are all in excellent condition.

THE SUBMARINE

"Wall of the Sea"

Sea-Wolf is a most fitting name for such a craft. The stealth with which they attack is wolfish in the extreme. There are several types which differ widely in a technical sense, but in general principles they are all much alike They are substantially cigar-shaped and of relatively small diameter.

Until about five years ago, the maximum measurements were one hundred and forty feet length by fourteen feet diameter. In 1912, the length was increased to one hundred and fifty-seven feet and the diameter to seventeen and a half feet. At the present time the Electric Boat Company have under construction a number in which the length is two hundred and sixty-three feet and the diameter twenty-three feet. These are capable of travelling eleven to fifteen knots at surface, or, in case of necessity, even twenty knots, for short dashes. Needless to say, they are all of the best workmanship and material, and every [illegible] water-tight. More than any other vessel, do these boats require to be absolutely water-tight.

By means of the periscope they may be navigated a little distance below the surface in exactly the same way that any boat is navigated. When completely submerged the regular compass navigation is used. Pressure guages or levels are used in navigating the boat vertically—that is, in keeping it the desired depth below surface.

Like a fish, it is provided with a tail rudder, and side or fin rudders. The tail rudder controls its movements as it does in other boats, and the side rudders act to raise or lower it in a vertical direction. When submerged, it is driven by large storage batteries, and when travelling at the surface internal combustion engines supply the power.

The air in the hull is sufficient for about twenty-four hours, but large tanks of compressed air will keep the crew alive for a good many days before exhaustion. The boats at present being built, have a radius of action ranging from thirty-five hundred to six thousand miles, and are capable of making raids at long distances from bases.

SUGGESTS A SIGN AT WELCOME TO ATTRACT MOTOR TOURISTS

Several motorists have suggested that at Welcome, where the Peterborough road branches from the Kingston or Lake Shore road, a large sign should be posted for the direction of tourists who would otherwise overlook a run to the Kawartha Lakes. The Kingston road is the main highway between the east and west portions of the province. It is believed that more tourists than ever will visit Canada this year and especially Ontario, and that the majority will do the lake front. The branch highway from Welcome north is regarded as a good road by automobilists and with the added attraction of ample and first class hotel accommodation in Peterborough and at Kawartha Lake resorts it is felt that many visitors would come this way.

Just now it is nobody's business to erect a sign at Welcome and it is hardy to be expected that it will be done this year, although it would be in the interests of many tourists and especially of this city. If the local of the Kawartha Lake hotels were united they probably would have included in an advertising scheme a conspicuous sign at Welcome. Possibly the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association might undertake this work, but it does not appear to be a matter for their consideration. It might also be remarked that the suggestion made herein is not wholly a local matter. For instance Lakefield, Lindsay, Bobcaygeon and Fenelon Falls are all situated within Kawarthadom, acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful waterways on the continent. Hence if the Boards of Trade or similar organizations could associate to advance the popularity of this Midland Ontario a comprehensive and efficient body could be secured to operate for the mutual advantage of the entire district.

PIONEER RESIDENT IS DEAD

Mr. Edward B. Wilson Passes Away In His 82nd Year

A pioneer and most highly respected resident of Peterborough passed away this morning in the person of Mr. Edward B. Wilson, who died at his home in Smith township, near Jackson Park, in his eighty-second year. The deceased was born in Toronto, but lived nearly all his life in Peterborough. For a number of years he operated a woollen mill on White's Creek near the present site of Green's foundry, and afterwards a larger plant on the Otonabee river near the Hunter St. bridge. His father, the late Thos. Wilson, C.E., built the first locks in Peterborough, and also at [illegible]

The late Edward Wilson is survived by his widow, two sons, Messrs. T. J. Wilson, of Peterborough, and George Wilson, of Macombe, Sask.; three sisters, Mrs. Wm. Harper, of Lakefield; Mrs. Jas. Best, Peterborough, and Mrs. Stevenson, of Woodstock; and two brothers, Joseph, of Listowel, and Thos., of Covington, Ky.

The deceased was for several years a councillor in Peterborough. He was a Methodist in religion, and a member of Peterborough Lodge, No. 155, A.F. and A.M., under whose auspices the funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock to Little Lake cemetery.

Glandioli And Dahlias Can Be Sprouted Inside

It will soon be time to put out dahlia and gladiolus bulbs, but most gardeners have found that time can be saved and gained for flowering time if they are started to sprout before being set out in the beds.

Dahlia bulbs should be sprouted in some moist earth, indoors. It is a good plan to soak these bulbs a day or two in water with the chill just taken off, until they plump themselves out fat and firm. By this absorption of moisture before being placed in loose soil, the life of the plant inside is wakened up, and sprouting will take place much sooner. Those dahlia bulbs should be sprouted a good four to six inches before outdoor planting. However, later we shall discuss this point when we start the series of talks on transplanting. Be patient, but, first put the dahlia bulbs to soak, right away.

Gladiolus bulbs should be treated the same way. But, plant them outdoors when the sprout has just commenced to show about an inch. These take rather longer to firm up and get ready to sprout, than do the dahlias.

SINCERE THANKS

The Business Girls' Club deserves its name. They not only aim to do, but they do do, business, in the interests of the comfort and well being of our soldier boys. The following letter, received by the Club, is evidence that "business as usual," only a little more so, is the motto and practice of the Business Girls' Club:

Miss V. Guthrie,
Sec. the B. G. Club,
Peterborough—

Dear Miss Guthrie,—I have your letter of the 6th inst., enclosing cheque for $15.00 to be applied to the Field Kitchen Fund of the 21st Battalion. Please express to the members of your club my personal thanks and that of all the Peterborough boys for the king thought that prompted the gift, which I assure you is most acceptable and appreciated.

On our return after the war we hope to be able to thank you in person.

Yours sincerely,

Inspector Wilson Reports On The Fire Fighting Facilities of Peterborough

Would Have By-Law Regulating Storage of Oils Also Standard Fire Door Between Pump Room and Generator Plant—Recommends Erection of Three Auxiliary Stations and an Increase in Number of Men Employed by the Fire Department. Five Policemen on Night Patrol "Without Any System of Check." Call Stations Should be Provided in the Business Section.

Fire Chief Howard has received a copy of the report concerning the fire fighting equipment of Peterborough. The report was prepared by Norman R. Wilson, M. Inst. C.E., Inspector Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, and relates to an inspection that was made on March 17th of this year. Reference is made to the stoppage that was experienced in December last when the pumps were completely stopped owing to anchor ice.

Changes since 29th January, 1914, the date of the previous inspection, with appliances in use are noted as follows:

Total assessed value of all buildings, —On 29th January, 1914, $7,023,410; at present, $7,675,170.

First-class hose—Ont 29th January, 1914, 4,450 feet; at present 4,800 feet.

The new waggon drawn by two horses carries 1,000 feet of hose, playpipes and other usual tools, and is used as an exercise waggon.

The wires for the system are now being put underground on George street from Dublin street to the C. P. R. tracks, and on Charlotte street from George street to Park street. This includes all the principal business section.

Waterworks owned by the city. Source of supply, the Otonabee river. System, direct pressure. Water power. four pumps; total capacity, 10,800,000 imperial gallons per 25 hours. 261 hydrants, owned by the city, and about 30 others privately owned. Steam fire engine of 833 imperial gallons per minute. Fire engine water supply from hydrants, river and creek. First-class hose, 4,800 feet, 12 playpipes. Three hose waggons, two carrying 1,500 feet, and one 1,000 feet of hose. Hook and ladder truck, longest ladder carried 54 feet. Eight chemical fire extinguishers (2 of 5 gallons, 4 of 4 gallons, and 2 of 3 gallons each). Salvage covers. 4. Winter sleighs for hose and hook and ladder truck, and runners for all appliances. Brick fire station, with Standard hose drying tower. Brigade of 17 fully paid men, in addition to whom the driver of the city team sleeps in fire hall by night and another man, who does not sleep in the fire hall, goes there immediately following every alarm, and remains there till the return of the men and appliances. Eight horses owned by the city, six for fire purposes only. Two employed on the streets by day and stabled in the fire hall by night. Fire alarm telegraph system having 34 non-interfering street boxes, 5 of which are successive. All operating gongs in fire hall, pump house, in the dwellings of four firemen, and the general alarm bell. General telephone service two systems, Bell and Canadian Machine Telephone Company, 1,897 subscribers on former and 300 on latter. Police force of nine men, five of whom are on night patrol, but without any system of check. A night watchman, paid by the merchants, also patrols the business section.

General Remarks.

One additional hose waggon has been installed, carrying 1,000 feet of hose. Three hundred and fifty feet of new hose has been added and a further amount is in order.

One additional man has been added, now making 17 fully paid men.

The wires for the fire alarm telegraph system are to be placed underground in the business section and three more boxes have been added. The alarm gong has been reinstated in the pump house.

Recommendations.

Fire limit by-law allows roofs of shingles in mortar. Shingles, however laid, are not permitted by standard.

Storage of oils, etc., is not regulated by by-law. The standard limits are 5 barrels of coal oil, etc., and 5 gallons of crude oil, benzine, gasoline, etc., and a by-law in accordance with these requirements should be adopted. This deficiency has been pointed out in several previous reports, but no action has been taken so far by the city.

Storage of powder is limited to 28 lbs. instead of 25 lbs. as required by the standard.

Pump House — The pump room communicates with the Canadian General Electric Co.'s generator plant room by means of a wooden door with wood frames. A standard fire door should be put in place of the wooden door.

Automatic water pressure recording gauge—One should be placed in the pump house

Relief valves on pumps said to be set at 180 lbs. but not definitely known. They should be properly tested and set.

Suction Pipes — The second suction pipe, to the tail race, is not fitted with a foot valve. One should be installed without delay.

Pumps—A very serious stoppage occurred in December last owing to ice choking up the water wheels which operate the pumps. On 7th December the pumps were completely stopped from 7 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.; on 8th December, from 6 a.m. to 2 p.m., and on 9th December from midnight to 4 p.m., during which time the town was completely without water. The Water Commsisioners have gone into the question and have obtained power to install an auxiliary duplicate plant, and the work will be proceeded with immediately so as to be in operation before next winter. Electric power will not be used for the auxiliary plant, but steam or some other suitable power will be employed.

Supply Main—The two large supply mains only extended as far as Auburn Mills, and it was suggested in the previous report that a larger main than the existing 12-in. main be laid into the city. This, I understand, is now under consideration, and a scheme for bringing a large main in in the west side of the town, along Park street is being proceeded with. One or two short sections of it have already been laid, notably a 14-in. on McDonnel street and a 12-in. on Monaghan Road. I would urge that this be proceeded with as rapidly as possible.

Supplementary Main.

River Crossings—The supply for Ashburnham is by means of a single line of 8-in. main, crossing the river at Hunter street. The question of laying a second main over the new bridge on Smith street has been under consideration for some years, and I would again very strongly urge that this be put in.

Running pressures—In December, 1911, the approximate discharge for 10 streams was at the rate of 1,058,120 Imperial gallons per 25 hours, or 35 per cent. short of the requirements for 10 standard streams. In January, 1914, the discharge for 12 streams was at the rate of 2,628,000 Imperial gallons, or 27 per cent. short of the amount required for 12 standard streams. Also, in the hydrant tests the average pressures in 1911 were 99 lbs. normal and 67 lbs. running, and in 1914, were 99 lbs. normal and 78 lbs. running. These pressures are an improvement on the previous figures, but they could be materially improved, if the recommendations in paragraph No. 22 are carried out. The pumping capacity is ample for all requirements, and it only needs the alterations as above to make a still greater improvement in the pressures.

Hydrants—in the business section, on George street are spaced in accordance with standard regulations, but on Brock, Hunter, Simcoe, and Charlotte streets, an additional hydrant should be placed 250 feet on either side of George street, and an additional hydrant should be placed at the northeast corner of George and King streets.

Full Pressure.

Fire pressure at pumps—According to special arrangements when an alarm of fire comes in, the pump engineer raises the pressure to about 90 lbs. and holds it there till requested by the Chief to raise it. I would again strongly recommend that full pressure be put on immediately on receipt of the alarm, and it be fully maintained till the engineer receives instructions direct from the Chief or his deputy to lower it. If, at a fire, the pressure has to be increased, it shows that further streams have to be put on, on account of the fire increasing, and when that is so, the Chief should not have his attention diverted and his time taken up by having to go to a 'phone to ask for more pressure. On the other hand, if full pressure is not required, it is because the fire is under control and the Chief has then more time to telephone. This is a point which I consider is most important.

First-class hose—Only 4,800 ft. in service. There should be not less than 6,000 ft.

Playpipes—Only 12 in service. There should be at least 18.

Extra Slide Pole.

Fire Hall—There is at present only one slide pole, which is not enough—two others should be provided.

Salvage equipment—for a city of this size, there should be a fully equipped salvage waggon, with a sufficient number of men attached thereto, carrying not less than 50 waterproof sheets, not exceeding 12 by 9 ft., with all other usual tools and a light extension ladder for indoor use. The present sheets which are in service (20x20) are too cumbersome, and should be cut down to half the size.

Fire Stations—As has been recommended on several previous occasions, there should be three auxiliary stations, one for Ashburnham, and one each for the north and south parts of the city, with all the necessary men and equipment at each.

Brigade—Consists of 17 fully paid men. For a city of this size it should be considerably increased. The standard requirements are: One fully paid man per 1,000 of population, which, for this city, would mean 23 men; in addition to whom there should be an engineer for each steamer and chemical engine, and when auxiliary stations are established, there should be a sufficient number at each to operate the various appliances.

Night Patrol—The men on night patrol should be provided with watchman's clocks in connection with a sufficient number of call stations, to effectively cover the business section.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION IN FORD CAR SELLING

Remarkable Activity at the Duffus Garage—Orders for 60 Cars Have Already Been Signed Up for Delivery This Season by Mr. Duffus The Ford Factory Has Orders for 6,265 Cars for the Month of April.

"No, Sir, we haven't felt any business depression and do not expect to feel it," was the cheerful remark of the proprietor of the Duffus Garage this morning.

One did not have to search far for evidences of activity. Mr. Duffus's office, show room and garage were so brisk with business that anybody could see a wave of prosperity, and one had to do some patient waiting in order to "get a word in edgeways."

While waiting, a copy of the Ford Motor Company's April report to its dealers, which had been received by Mr. Duffus this morning, was shown us. The contents was so expressive of the magnitude of the business and the demand for Ford cars, that the privilege of publishing a copy of the first paragraph was granted. It reads as follows:

ENORMOUS CAR PRODUCTION

"We might just mention here that the factory has now on file unfilled orders covering total shipments of 6,265 cars for the month of April, and as their output is limited to 3,600 cars for the month of April, there will be approximately 2,500 cars which they will not be able to touch during this month, and these will have to be carried over to apply against the May schedule. In spite of the fact that they are shipping 150 cars a day, they are, nevertheless, carrying over from day to day unfilled orders.

"We are advised by the factory that they will fill 82 per cent. of the dealers' April orders on file. Consequently up to the end of April, if every dealer were 100 per cent. efficient, that is, figuring the orders against estimates, he would have received approximately 70 per cent. of his total estimate up to the end of that period."

Judging from the above report, it would seem quite apropos to repeat Uncle Ebenezer's sage remark when he said that "One reason why the Ford's the most talked of car in the world is because there's so many more of 'em to talk about."

THE REMODELLED DUFFUS GARAGE

It isn't what your job is—but the way you do it—that determines the character of the man.

The formal opening of the remodelled Duffus Garage, last week, called additional attention to the Ford car representative. Open house was held all week. Visitors were given the freedom of the handsome building daily, and were entertained with a special programme in the evenings, the principal feature of which was a moving picture show with films taken and provided by the Ford Moving Picture Department.

The interior of the showrooms, which is situated in the front of the building, has been conveniently arranged and finished. The walls have been painted with oil paint in a bluish shade, the ceiling in white, and the floor in a suitable floor colouring. A long, silent salesman, sixteen feet long, has been built along the east wall, which contains all kinds of car accessories and arranged above is a large display of tires of different makes. The arrangement of electric lights in the ceiling has been designed with a view to diffusing the light evenly as well as brilliantly. The salesmen's office is finished in oak grain, and is conveniently arranged for the public service. The Stock Room is in the rear, where there is carried in stock $2,500 worth of repair parts, so that no delay need be experienced by Ford car owners in getting supplies in case of accident. Mr. Eddie Collins is the stock-keeper.

Back of the show-room is the large store house, with elevator and other modern facilities for storage and handling of cars. Upstairs, additional storage room is provided and altogether the capacity of the Duffus Garage permits of sixty cars being stored in perfect safety.

The repair shop is upstairs. Here a skillful staff of mechanics are kept busy. A day and night staff is employed, so that constant service is available to owners of Ford cars when occasion requires the most prompt attention.

Mr. W. Duffus is the general foreman, and Mr. E. L. Duffus, the outside salesman.

Mr. Duffus' private office is at the front entrance to the showroom. It is suitably furnished with modern office furniture, including a register built especially for recording a detailed account of all transactions.

THE MAKING OF THE FORD

Automobile owners and prospective automobile owners enjoyed an interesting object lesson on "The Making of the Ford," which were given in the Duffus Garage, last week. Mr. Duffus, at considerable expense, engaged an electric plant, operator and films for a moving-picture exhibition which demonstrated the various details of making a Ford car from the time the raw material is brought into the factory on through the numerous processes, until the finished car is ready for shipment.

This practical exposition attracted crowded audiences for four evenings, and stirred up a profitable activity in the Sales Department. Great importance was attached to these exhibitions of Ford car making, as they inculcated a feeling of confidence in the character of the mechanical work and stability of the material in Ford cars.

A REBATE TO OWNERS OF THE NEW FORD

Ford owners—the ones who know more about the "universal" car than anyone else—are the ones who are boosting the strongest. The Ford is a woman's car, too, because it is not necessary for a woman to be an expert mechanic to drive a Ford—the simplicity of its control makes for its safety.

One of the most novel and generous inducements to buy the New Ford is the decision of the Ford Company to present every buyer of a New Ford car, between the months of August, 1914, and August, 1915, with a rebate on the price paid for their car, which it is estimated, will amount to between $40 and $60 each. This evidence of the modern spirit of confidence in motor car selling cannot fail to create such results as will prove of untold assistance to their salesmen.

MR. DUFFUS' PHENOMENAL SUCCESS

Faith in one's self and a fixity of purpose has sent many an enterprising man to the top rung of the ladder. In some cases, it has taken years to accomplish this result, but in others, success has been won after a few years.

Mr. Joseph J. Duffus is a young man who has fought his way to the top by sheer force of personality and business brains. His position in the City Council, where he was placed in the last municipal election at the head of the polls, is evidence of the esteem in which his business judgment is held, and how he has won his way in public confidence in the six years in which he has been the moving spirit in the business of automobile selling in Peterborough.

When Mr. Duffus tapped the spring of prosperity in Peterborough, a few years ago, and started the campaign of Ford car selling in this district, he began on a small scale, and in a small garage. To-day he is recognized as Peterborough's leading automobile dealer and repairer, working on a solid basis, with a garage, store room, repair shop and sales room that have become attractions to prominent citizens owning and desiring to own, motor cars. His place of business, at No. 195 Simcoe Street, has grown to such proportions that it has become one of the Ford Company's biggest distributing centres in Ontario, and serves a wide field in his portion of the Province.

In his methods of conducting his establishment, it is one of Mr. Duffus' inflexible rules that his patrons must be satisfied. His word is as good as his bond; and his integrity has never been questioned. As alderman, he has the confidence of the general public, as he has given Peterborough faithful business experience.

ANNUAL BANQUET TO FORD OWNERS

The annual complimentary banquet given by Mr. Duffus to Ford owners in this district has proved a pleasant way of bringing together the patrons of the Ford, and enjoying a heart-to-heart talk with each other on their motor car experiences. Last year this event was held in the Oriental Hotel on the 25th of April. This year Mr. Duffus is considering the propriety of holding the banquet in his own garage, where he can comfortably seat over 200. The event will take place about the end of May.

Play Not Idleness, A Plea For Playgrounds

Play is the expression of energy; play sends the blood in a stimulating flow to all parts of the body not excepting the brain, producing growth both mental and physical. Idleness means lack of energy, relaxed muscles, dullness of mind and body.

Success in play begets a confidence which extends into the business life. The boy who has not learned to play but is content to sit and look on, is most likely in after years to be among the lookers-on when jobs are few.

RUSSIAN ADVANCE INTO HUNGARY SLACKENS SLIGHTLY

Germans on Western Front Make Bitter Onslaught on French Position Without Success — Austro-German Counter-Thrusts East and West of the Uszok Pass Are Repulsed by Russians

NEW ATTACKS ON EPORGES

LONDON, April 17.—The fight for the Uszok Pass is still undecided. Conflicting reports from the eastern arena seem to point to a slowing down of the Russian advance into Hungary. Whether this is due to the bad condition of the roads, hinted at in the Petrograd official report, or to the heavy reinforcements which the railways have enabled the Germans to concentrate on the southern slopes of the Carpathians, is not yet clear. The most important news is the Russian report of the repulse of the Austro-German counter-thrusts east and west of the Uszok Pass. The fighting in the valley of the Stryj was particularly fierce and protracted, ending in the repulse of German picked troops.

Official reports from Paris last night record the renewed activity of the Germans at the position of Les Eparges, wrested from them a week ago by the French army, and desperate attacks to recover the spur of Notre Dame de Lorette, captured on Thursday by French forces operating north of Arras. On the latter position three determined attacks, each preceded by a heavy artillery fire, were made, but the French gunners had the range and stopped these advances at the outset.

Three German batteries were silenced and an ammunition depot was blown up by a well-directed shell in the Montmarie wood.

The French official report yesterday afternoon mentions that "some enemy destroyers" took part in artillery fighting near Nieuport and Ostend on Thursday, but were quickly silenced."

Continuing their process of dislodging the Austrians from a 75 to 100-mile section of the Carpathian mountains, it is reported, Russian troops noiselessly approached the barbed wire entanglements of the Austrians between Telepotch and Zuella villages, broke through, and in a brief engagement with the bayonet, captured two heights and a great number of prisoners. The enemy delivered a counter-attack with the 121st Reserve Regiment, and the fighting at this point has not ended.

On other sections of the Carpathian front the Russians stood on the defensive, the spring thaw having put the roads in bad shape. The rivers have swollen and in some places have overflowed their banks.

The Germans and Austrians still persist in making local attempts to create dints in the Russian lines. Towards Rostoki attempts are reported of attacks against the heights occupied by the Russians near the village of Crosspatch. Here the Russians held their ground well.

A Geneva despatch says The Tribune publishes a report from Ungvar, in northeastern Hungary, stating that a great battle has been fought between the Stryj and the valley of the Ondava. A German army composed of picked men attacked the Russians marching on Bereg. After thirty-two hours of severe fighting the Russians succeeded in repulsing the Germans and capturing a quantity of arms and ammunition.

Another despatch received here from Vienna says sixty-five Austrian officers have been disciplined for negligence which resulted in the annihilation of a division of reserves near Bereg and the Austrian defeat in the Sarao region.

An unofficial despatch from Petrograd states:

Military experts of the Russian press are divided in opinion regarding the true meaning of the present operations. The official military organ, The Russky Invalid, for over a month past has been presenting its readers with the idea that, as the Carpathian operations develop, and when Hungary has been invaded, the Russians will drive forward in irresistible force upon the direct road to Berlin from Warsaw.

The Novoe Vremya expert scouts this idea resolutely and points out that the Grand Duke's strategy has had one consistent aim from the outset of the war; namely, to reach Berlin by way of Vienna. This expert shows that the combined enemy forces now arrayed against Russia from the Baltic to the frontiers of Roumania are under two and a half million men.

Referring to the reinforcement of Austro-Hungarian defences by German troops from the western front, a Russian military expert says Germany is preparing a general attack along the whole strategic front, where men are fewer, and an endeavor is to be made, by means of guns, to supply their place. The whole seven or eight hundred miles, says this expert, will shortly be aflame from end to end.

ONE CASE FOR NON-JURY SITTINGS

Which Will Commence on Monday Next

The non-jury sittings of the High Court will open on Monday.

A case concerning Robert Maxwell Hamilton versus Robert Miles Hamilton versus Robert Miles Hamilton, in which defendant is sued as executor of the estate of the late Hon. Robert Hamilton, will come up for hearing. The will which has been before the courts several times, practically comes up for another construction. It appears that the plaintiff was left one-fourth of the state, and by codicil five thousand dollars in lieu of the amount prescribed by the will. No provision was made for the residence portion of the estate, which will form a part in the proceedings that are pending.

Mr. G. W. Hatton is appearing for the plaintiff and the firm of Hall and Hall for the defendant.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

The Fire, Water and Light committee is in search of a couple of horses for the fire department. Iron grey one preferred.

Without Representation.

Ald. McIntyre, who has been out of the city for several days in connection with a contract, has returned. His absence left the north ward without representation at the last meeting of the Board of Works and City Council.

Granted Permission.

The Bell Telephone Company has been granted permission to erect one pole on the west side of Park Street at the end of Townsend Street and one pole on the east side of Stewart Street north of McDonnel Street.

Endorsed Resolution.

The City Council endorsed a resolution asking the Provincial Government for a subsidy of $3,500 per mile of Hydro Radial railways.

A further grant of $50 has been made to the Salvation Army Home. This covers the month of April.

B. SQUADRON MEN WERE PART OF ROYAL ESCORT

Were Complimented on Their Showing--Names of Ten Men Wishing to Join Squadron Are Wanted

Ten of B Squadron, 8th C.M.R., formed part of the royal escore for His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, at the closing of Parliament. Major Medd was requested at noon to detail ten members of his squadron to form the advance guard. Although they were called upon at short notice to do the work of a nature that is generally performed by troops who have practiced the manoeuvres, they conducted themselves splendidly, and Major Medd was afterwards complimented on their showing. The B Squadron party consisted of Lieut. Sneath, S. Sergt.-Major R. T. Biggs, Q. M. S. A. Kent, Sergt. Hodges, Sergt. Portsmith, Corp. Lovell, Lance Corporals Bell and Eldred, Pte. Richards, F. Campbell and Wallace.

Major Medd wishes to secure the names and addresses of ten local men who are willing to join B Squadron to fill up vacancies. Applicants may ring up Major Medd at 'phone No. 507, as soon as possible.

If the weather is good next week the battalion will go to Brockville by boat or train and march back to Kingston. It is expected that the march from Brockville to Gananoque would be made one day, and after staying in Gananoque over night the troops would complete their march to Kingston.

Camps at Barriefield.

Kinston Standard: As all the troops now being trained outside of the second contingent will be sent overseas as reinforcements, and not as contingents, there will be no brigadier appointed for the infantry now being trained in divisional area, and Colonel Hemming will no doubt be in personal command of the camp, and will move his entire staff to Barriefield for the summer. It is said that the troops now being trained in Ottawa and Belleville together with the 350 men being drilled in Lindsay, and about 300 more that are held in various recruiting centres, will constitute the Barriefield camp, and as The Standard stated about two weeks ago, it will mean fully four thousand men under canvass across the Cataraqui bridge.

Help for kitchen and camp work is being sought in the city for the first of May, and all departments responsible for the tenting and feeding of the forces in the Barriefield camp are making arrangements for a big force of men.

No Cause For Uneasiness.

Since the news of the death of Pte. Harry Nicholls of Peterborough at Belleville following an attack of cerebro spinal meningitis has become known, there has been great anxiety among the relatives of the Peterborough men in the 39th, particularly among the friends of those who have been quarantined or isolated as carriers. The following message to the Examiner is from one of the Peterborough soldiers who is himself in quarantine. It may bring relief to many mothers and wives:

"I am writing as I thought possibly that some of the relatives of men now in quarantine might feel unduly anxious about their condition and spirits. You may assure them that all are in the best of spirits and to all appearances perfectly healthy. Of course their liberty is restricted, but every latitude possible is allowed them and as I write a vigorous football match is in progress.

"The men have been placed on their honour by the captain in charge, not to break bounds and there is no disposition on their part to do so. They recognize their responsibility and appreciate the confidence which their captain has placed in them."

Some fourteen members of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles are home from Ottawa for a few days' leave. All report the best of treatment, food, etc., and judging by their appearance, the stay at Ottawa has done them no harm. Among those home are C. Sergt.-Major R. T. Biggs, Sergt. Fred Shurety, Sergt. Harry Portsmith, Sergt Geo. Young, Corp. Geo. Harris, Ptes. Sturgeon, Flowers, Rew, Farr and Ferguson. The regiment has 200 horses now and the men are getting their first training in equitation.

The firing party picked from among the 57th boys in the 39th Battalion arrived last night to attend the funeral of Pte. Harry Nicholls, and will return to Belleville to-night. The squad is in charge of Sergt.-Major Dunkerlay.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—You have an editorial in your paper of Thursday last, which you may, as Tennyson says: "Hurt whom you should soothe and harm where you should heal." In the Trent Valley investigation, as in recent inquisitions, there were discovered some irregularities. Of course as is always the case, some innocent suffered with the guilty. When the present Government did what it could for some sufferers it is a pity that you, in your editorial column, charge them with inconsistency.

You appear quite careless of the interests or feelings of men who have been returned to their post after a loss of hundreds of dollars. It is surely not desirable to seek to antagonize those who tried to be considerate, rather than unduly severe. I am a Liberal, and yet I can see that injustice is more than likely to be done by such articles as the one referred to.

Fair Play.

ADVENTISTS IN WOODMEN HALL.

Elder F. W. Johnston will preach in Woodmen Hall over Nugent's drug store, opposite Cressman's on Sunday at 7 p.m. as usual. The topic will be, "The 144,000 of Revelation, 14: 1." Who are they? And on Tuesday at 8 p.m., "The Origin and History of Seventh Day Adventists." Who is the first one spoken of in the Bible? Sabbath school is held every Saturday at 2 p.m. and preaching at 3 p.m. All are welcome. Bring your Bibles.

TO-DAY'S MARKET

Staple Articles Showed Very Little Change in Price—Eggs Were Plentiful

Eggs at 17 and 18 cents; butter at 33 and 35 cents, and potatoes at 50 cents, were the usual features of this morning's market. The attendance outside was rather small. Two farmers offered maple syrup at fifty cents a quart, and apparently closed the season. Chickens were fairly plentiful and sold at from 45 cents each up to 1.00 each. A new stunt was the selling of roses. Wm. H. Young, Chamberlen street, opened up a large box of them and quickly sold out at two for five cents. Some bargain.

Home-made cakes, etc., made and retailed by church workers is growing. Three churches were represented to-day.

Scout News

Members of the Peterborough Boy Scouts are reminded to meet at the Armouries Friday evening, April 23. A full turnout is requested at 7.30, sharp. The Corporals and Sergeants of the Scouts are requested to meet at the Armouries at 8 p.m. as important business will be brought up. All officers are requested to attend.

A Scout story, entitled "The Crow Patrol's Hike," will be given weekly by one of the Scouts. This is a serial story.

The Crow Patrol's Hike.

In a small village, near Montreal, is a troop of Boy Scouts, known all over that district. In many cases there has been very serious happenings and one or another of the Crows have made themselves useful in First Aid or drowning.

The Scoutmaster, Joe Watson, who had just lately come from North Dakota, had organized a troop of Scouts in this village. The patrol consisted of the Crow Patrol and Harold Jackson was the appointed patrol leader.

It was a fine evening and all the troop were gathered at the home of Wallace Stinson, the Corporal of the Crows One matter after another was brought up till suddenly one of the boys said they should go up the St. Charles river for a hike. It happened at this time that some of the boys were trying to pass their second-class tests and it was decided that they should take a trip up the St. Charles to comply with the hike given in the said Scout test. Three boys were appointed to go at a time. The lot fell upon Wallace Stinson, Joe Watson and the patrol leader, Harold Jackson. They were to meet at the wharf at 6.30 on the following Monday morning. Wallace Stinson was to arrange about the canoes and they were to embark for their new place of abode for the summer months.

All was ready at 6.30 in the morning, and, after saying good-bye to their friends on the wharf they stepped into their canoes. As they dipped their paddles into the swift waters of the St. Charles, they heard that well-known cry of the Crow Patrol. On parting they were presented with a compass by the Scouts. On sped the two birch-bark canoes until there remained only a mass of dark blue, which only a few minutes ago was a crowd of never-ending friends.

As evening came on they were beginning to feel hungry and tired, so it was agreed to disembark and camp for the night.

(To be continued next week).

FIVE BOSTON RED SOX WERE CHASED

Athletics and Boston Play the Game Featured by Hitting of Oldring and McInnis—Recruit Won For Brooklyn Over the Giants

PHILADELPHIA, April 16.— The hitting of Oldring and McInnis featured a long-drawn-out game here to-day between Philadelphia and Boston. Play was stopped owing to darkness at the end of the ninth inning. In addition to tieing the score with a home run in the seventh, Oldring made a double and a single, while McInnis made three singles and drove in two runs. The early innings were marked by poor pitching. Umpire Connolly put five of the visitors' team off the field for yelling from the bench. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston | 1 | 0 | 1 4 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—6 | 5 | 0 |
| Philadelphia | 0 | 0 | 0 1 4 0 0 1 0 0 0—6 | 8 | 1 |

Called—Darkness.

Batteries— Ruth, Comstock, Mays and Carrigan and Thomas; Bressler, Shawkey and McAvoy and Lapp.

GAVE NINE BASES ON BALLS.

Washington, April 16.— Washington won the final game of the series from New York to-day, 3 to 2, making the most of Brown's wildness in the box for the visitors. He gave nine bases on balls. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Washington | 1 | 1 | 0 0 0 1 0 0 x—3 | 7 | 1 |

ST. LOUIS OUTPLAYED CHICAGO

St. Louis, April 16. — Loudermilk pitched a masterly game this afternoon, and should have scored a shut-out over Chicago. St. Louis won, 4 to 2. Errors accounted for the visitors' runs. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
| St. Louis | 0 | 0 | 0 1 0 0 3 0 0 0 x—4 | 11 | 4 |

CLEVELAND WON SLOW GAME.

Detroit, April 16.—In a temperature little above the freezing point, Cleveland defeated Detroit 9 to 6 to-day in a game that dragged through nearly two and a half hours of almost every kind of baseball. In the seventh inning four singles, a double, a pass and a sacrifice fly netted the visitors six runs and gave them a lead that the Tigers could not overcome. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland | 0 | 0 | 0 1 1 0 6 1 0 0 0—9 | 12 | 0 |

BROOKLYN BEAT NEW YORK.

New York, April 16.—Brooklyn turned the tables on the New York Nationals, taking the last game of the series by a score of 5 to 3. Appleton, a recruit member of the Brooklyns, pitched his first major league game, and held New York to six hits. Perritt, the former St. Louis pitcher, was on the mound for McGraw's team and went well until the ninth inning when, with the score tied, Wheat hit a home run. Two other runs followed on a pass, and two singles. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
| New York | 0 | 0 | 0 0 0 0 1 0 1 1 0—3 | 6 | 2 |

Batteries— Appleton and McCarty; Perritt and Meyers.

CHICAGO DEFEATED ST. LOUIS.

Chicago, April 16.— Good's home run in the fourth inning, gave Chicago a 4 to 2 victory over St. Louis to-day. The other scores made by the locals were the result of daring base running and bunched hits. The fielding of Dolan was a feature. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago | 0 | 0 | 2 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 x—4 | 7 | 1 |

VANCE'S WILDNESS LOST GAME.

Cincinnati, April 16.—Vance's wildness in the third inning cost Pittsburg the third game of the series, Cincinnati winning four to two. In that inning Vance gave four bases on balls, hit another man, which, with a single, gave Cincinnati three runs. Douglas, who started for Cincinnati, was also wild, but he managed to hold down the hitting of Fittsburg and Dale, who relieved him in the eighth, held the visitors safe for the remainder of the game. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |

Annual Meeting of The Lawn Bowlers

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Lawn Bowling Club, held last evening in the Peterborough Music Company store, for the election of officers was well attended and the enthusiasm displayed augurs well for the success of lawn bowling in the city during the coming year.

The officers elected were as follows:
Pres.—Mr. J. H. Renwick.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. T. C. Elliot.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. W. J. Oke.

The different committees were also formed and arrangements made for a busy season.

The New York Stock Market

NEW YORK, April 17—There was the usual Saturday lull on the Stock Exchange to-day. The troding activity of the ast few days was apparently held in reserve for next week. U. S. made a significant gain, opening at 57 7-8 and closing at 60. A. L. O., which has been attracting considerable attention of late, opened at 61 and closed at 58 1-4. This was in marked contrast to the buige of yesterday, when a gain of 18 points was registered. There is a strong undertone in Can. This morning it touched high at 39 5-8, closing at 38 5-8. The opening price was 38. This stock is likely to receive some attention fro mthe bull element between now and July, and might be worth watching. The market closed strong.

TRIGGER

The weekly practice shoot of the Peterborough Gun Club was held last evening, and considerable interest was shown in the scoring, as Mr. Chris. Graham presented three silver spoons for the highest scores, Messrs. Loucks, Routley and Mills being the lucky ones. Following are the scores at 25 birds:

| | |
|---|---|
| J. Loucks | 23 |
| H. Routley | 21 |
| C. Mills | 19 |
| C. Wood | 18 |
| B. Gillespie | 16 |
| C. Graham | 15 |
| L. Hall | 14 |
| W. Lang | 14 |
| C. James | 12 |

The next shoot will be held on Saturday afternoon next, April 24th, at half-past 2 o'clock, instead of Friday night This will be an open shoot and all persons interested in trap-shooting are invited to attend and take part in the shooing.

PLAYERS WHO WILL FIGURE IN THE ENGLISH CUP FINAL

Classic of the Football World Will be Played Within the Next Two Weeks—Scottish Cup to be Revived — Another International Suggested.

In view of the English Cup final, which is due to be played at Manchester within a fortnight, the following details regarding the Chelsea players may be interesting:

J. Molyneux, goalkeeper, is a native of Port Sunlight, and is in his fifth season at Stamford Bridge. A capable rather than a theatrical guardian of the net, though, like most men in the position, he at times takes risks. Was expected to have a difficult task in retaining his place owing to the engagement of Colin Hampton, from Motherwell, but has shown such consistently good form that the last line of defence has never been in doubt. Joined from Stockport County.

W. Bettridge, right back, and a fearless one. Discovered by Mr. Calderhead with Burton United when he went to watch a forward and signed at the end of the season 1908-9. Is a native of Oakthorpe.

J. Harrow, left back, of Mitcham. Was transferred from Croydon Common in April, 1911, and developed at a rapid rate the following season. A sound and sure tackler, kicks with delightful judgment, and recently critics have spoken of him as one of the most dashing men now playing. He is young and should get among the honours. Was hurt in the early ties against Swindon, but is now sound and strong.

F. Taylor, right half-back, the captain of the side. Belongs to Rotherham and was transferred from Gainsborough Trinity in December, 1909. A conscientious and consistent player.

T. Logan, centre half-back, a native of Barrhead, and a Scottish international, who is in his second season with the club. The management induced him to leave Falkirk. A quiet and unassuming fellow, he is most popular with all. Almost an ideal centre half-back, though as he recently demonstrated at Newcastle, he is equally good on the wing.

A Walker, centre half-back, was signed on at the same time as Logan, but as the centre forward. Fills almost any vacancy, but always plays centre, Logan accommodating himself elsewhere. He is so good that the trouble is to make room for him with other men playing so well. Dalkeith is his place of birth and he formerly played with Dundee.

L. Abrams, left half-back, an English player with a Scottish style, gained with the Heart of Midlothian, from whom he was transferred to Chelsea for the season. Hailing from Southport, he played with the Central club, afterwards having a turn with Stockport County.

H. T. Ford, outside right, is a native of Fulham, but was playing with Tunbridge Wells Rangers in the South Eastern League, when his work against Chelsea Reserves at Stamford Bridge attracted so much attention that he was immediately transferred. This was in April, 1912, and his three seasons in first-class football he has made wonderful progress, being at present one of the best right wing players in the country. He saved the game against Swindon, and won the replay at Newcastle by scoring the only goal of the match; 5 ft. 7 1-2 in. and 11st. 4 lb.

H. J. Halse, born at Leytonstone, is a product of London business house sport. Has travelled, having been with Southend United, Manchester United, and Aston Villa, being transferred from the Midland club in May, 1913.

R. Thompson, centre forward, a Croydon youth who graduated with the Southern League club at Selhurst. Of a particularly dashing type, he never hesitates to "go through" at every slight opportunity, and he controls the ball and gathers centres well. He has only the use of one eye.

J. A. Croal, inside left, a Scotsman from Glasgow, who also follows the profession of a schoolmaster. His play with McNeill in representative matches last season attracted universal admiration, and quite a sensation was caused when Chelsea secured this Scottish wing. His first season in London, being last season one of the Falkirk "bairns.' Was previously with Glasgow Rangers.

Scottish Proposals.

Football is seemingly to runs its course in 1915-16 in Scotland. Indeed, the Scottish Cup will be revived, for notice of the following resolution has been given: "That notwithstanding anything contained in cup competition in season 1915-16 irrespective of their position in Qualifying Cup during that season." The assumption is that all the provincial clubs who qualified this season are in existence next season.

The financial statement submitted showed a loss to March 2 of £2,258 11s. 10d. The East of Scotland Football Association were granted until May 15 to play the Rosebery Charity Cup competition. Clydebank F. C. are permitted to give a marriage present to D. Clark. A motion was carried to the effect that clubs may, on application to the secretary, be granted until May 1 to play competitive matches.

Another International.

There is a movement on foot to promote a match between representative English and Scottish sides, the proceeds of which are to be given to Belgian relief funds. Two influential Glasgow citizens now unconnected with the pastime have the matter in hand, and I understand the English [illegible] Park-head for the League international, were interviewed on the subject.

Referee For the Big Final.

The referee in the English Cup Final will be Mr. H. H. Taylor of Altrincham, and the linesmen Messrs. J. F. Pearson of Dudley and G. Miller of Norfolk. These appointments were made at the recent meeting of the Football Association Council, at which, it was also decided that the replay, if such is necessary after two hours of football, will be at Everton's ground a week later. The final, as already announced, is set for April 24 on the Manchester United ground, Old Trafford.

WOUND TROUBLESOME.

War Office Still Refuses to Allow Major Gault to Return to Front.

LONDON, April 17.— Anglo-Canadians are highly pleased with regard to honours conferred upon Major Hamilton Gault and Lieuts. Colquhoun and Papineau. Major Gault, who is absent from town, is still suffering as the wound in his arm has not healed satisfactorily and the War Office still refuses him permission to return to duty.

Police Now Have The Suitcase

The suitcase which David Rouselle and Frederick Mitchell, the two men who were sentenced to Kingston Penitentiary for five years, a couple of weeks ago, by Magistrate Dumble, had in their possession upon their arrival in Peterborough, has at last been found. Mr. Jim Daley, C.P.R. section foreman, was working with his crew, near Weir's crossing, about two miles east of here, yesterday afternoon, and found the suit-case. They were preparing to bark a pile of ties and, after removing a few from the top of the pile they found the missing suitcase hidden.

This afternoon Mr. Daley reported the find to the Police Station, and it was brought there from the local C. P. R. Station where the finder had deposited it.

When a list was prepared of the contents there was a quantity of cheap spoons, knives and forks and a miscellaneous collection of junk, including three boxes of very cheap cigars. There were two photos of a middle-aged woman, probably the mother of one of the prisoners.

A couple of envelopes, upon which was printed Nerlich and Company, Toronto, were also found inside the slide on the lid. The jewellery had evidently been the property of Nerlich and Co., the head of which firm is now awaiting trial for high treason.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

BEAUTIFUL BUILDING LOTS.

Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald is offering for sale some beautiful building lots on Benson, Geraldine and O'Carroll Avenues. This property lies within two minutes' walk of the Street Railway and ten minutes' walk of the heart of the City. The City water, gas, light and sewer services are installed, the property being already completely surrounded by beautiful homes. The site is an ideal one, with a gentle south-easterly slope, and being considerably elevated above the city, and not in the immediate vicinity of any manufacturing industries. The air is always pure, healthy and invigorating. Nearly all the lots are already beautifully wooded with foreign and domestic shade trees. Two handsome residences are already under construction on this property and several more will be erected this season and for anyone contemplating the erection of a home there are certainly no lots in the city that offer equal advantages. Copies of registered plan No. 140, which covers this property, may be seen, and all other information may be had at the offices of Mr. R. J. Kidd, J. T. O'Connell & Co., C. J. Carroll & Co.; also at the office of the owner, Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, Ontario Land Surveyor, 235 George Street. 'Phone 888. d.s.t f.-73

WEDDING BELLS

LONG—CAMPBELL.

At the Mark St. Methodist Parsonage on Wednesday last the marriage of Miss Margaret Campbell, daughter of Mr. Wm. Campbell, Concession street, East City, and Mr. Alex. Long, also of East City, was quietly solemnized, by Rev. L. Phelps. The bride and groom were unattended.

After a short honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Long will take up residence on Sophia street, East City.

DIXON—ROBINSON.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at six-thirty on Wednesday evening, April the 14th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Dixon, Drummond Station, Otonabee, when their eldest daughter, Maud Eleanor was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr Whitfield Robinson.

The bride who was attired in a beautiful gown of pearl grey Duchess satin and carried a beautiful bouquet of carnations and hyacinths, entered the parlour to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by the bride's sister, Miss Meta Dixon. Her niece, Miss Mary McGregor, was flower girl and was dressed in pink silk and carried pink sweet peas.

After the ceremony the guests retired to the dining room, where they partook of a sumptuous wedding supper after which the bride and groom left for their new home, "The Maples," Otonabee. The bride travelled in a navy blue suit with hat to match.

The bride received many beautiful presents, including a beautiful clock from the congregation of St. Mark's church, of which she has been organist for the last seven years.

OBITUARY

MRS. WILLIAM BATTEER.

A highly respected resident of Cavan, in the person of Mrs. William Batteer, passed away Thursday evening after a short illness. Death was due to pneumonia. Deceased was in her eighty-fifth year. She resided with her son on lot 19, concession 11, of Cavan township. Her husband predeceased her thirteen years ago.

The survivors are two sons and one daughter, namely, David and William of Cavan and Mrs. M. Campbell of Peterborough.

The late Mrs. Batteer was born in Monaghan, Ireland. She came to this country when a young girl, first residing in Monaghan township and latterly in Cavan.

The funeral will take place on Monday. Service will be held at the house at 1.30 o'clock. Funeral will leave at two. Interment will be in Little Lake cemetery.

JAMES W. FOWLER.

Death removed another of the older generation in the person of James W. Fowler, who passed away on Friday afternoon in his seventy-ninth year at the residence of his son, Albert A. Fowler, 159 Hunter St. East. He had been unwell during the past year, and his death came rather suddenly in a recent relapse. The deceased was born in Cavan County, Ireland, came to Canada when he was nine years old, and resided in Bethany, Lindsay and Peterborough, having spent the past twenty-five years in this city. He was married forty years ago, and is survived by his wife, two daughters, Mrs. J. Grimason, of Quebec City, and Miss Ellie at home, and three sons, Albert A., of Peterborough, J. W. Fowler, of Havelock, and Norman Fowler, of Toronto. The funeral will be held on Monday at 2 p.m. from 159 Hunter St., to the Little Lake Cemetery. Rev. R. G. Peever will conduct the funeral service.

The late Mr. Fowler was well known and highly respected in Peterborough, and his death creates another gap in the ranks of the city's old guard.

Books and Authors

Beary Sydnor Harrison and Rider Haggard Present New Novels —War Story by Chambers

"Angela's Business," by the author of "Queed," deals lightly with woman's suffrage. The Outlook says it is a wholesome story for those men who understand neither women nor the immense extension of women's activities in the modern world.

"In a moment of Time" by Reginald Wright Kauffman, is described as the story of a crucified people, and the best book on Belgium. It is fully illustrated.

"Prince and Heretic" is the title of Marjorie Bowen's novel, built around William of Orange, the founder of the Dutch Republic.

Amelia E. Barr, who recently presented "The Winning of Lucia," a Scotch love story, has just celebrated her tighty-fourth birthday, and is reported to be at work on the sixty-sixth novel.

H. Rider Haggard in "Allan and The Holy Flower," re-introduces Allan Quartermaster and other persons mentioned in a former story. One reviewer writes: "And running like a thread of gold through all this tale of dramatic happenings and hair-breadth escapes is the story of a very beautiful love." It is replete with romance and adventure.

"Modernism and the Reformation" by John Benjamin Rush is an analysis and comparison of the two movements in which their essential difference in principle and aim is maintained.

Books on the war are multiplying rapidly.

Mrs. Anna Bowman Dodd in her "Heroic France," says certain Socialists went to the Prefect of Lille and suggested that if no resistance was offered the Germans would respect the city. He hurried to France and secured the consent of the Minister of War. Meanwhile Gen. French's 90,000 soldiers were standing off 500,000 Germans before Mons, and hoping that Gen. Percin would come to their aid with his corps. Percin put Gen. Joffre's orders in his pockets for two days, waiting for the surrender of Lille to be authorized. The British, says Mrs. Dodd, were slaughtered as they stood, a Highland regiment being reduced in two hours from 2,000 to 600. By the time Joffre knew what was happening it was too late. He had Messimy replaced by Deleasse, but Lille had fallen, and the chance of making a stand, which Mrs. Dodd thinks might have changed the course of the war, was gone.

"Who Goes There?" by Robert W Chambers, is the story of a young American of Belgian ancestry, who is captured by the Germans, and is offered his life on condition that he go to London and conduct the General's daughter to her home in Silesia. Of course he falls in love with her. There is much action and dialogue, the latter a la Chambers.

The innumerable admirers of Gilbert K. Chesterton welcome the news that he is making a steady though slow recovery from his serious illness. Word comes from London that the statement that Mr. Chesterton had had a "stroke" has no foundation whatever, that he had simply spent himself in work to the point of breaking down completely when congestion of the lungs and dilation of the heart overtook him.

"In conversation the Darling girls reveal the quality commonly described as "sparkling," in a wearisome degree. I do not envy the man who is compelled to endure any one of them through life. To say nothing in a sparking manner is merely one of the methods by which women revenge themselves on the male sex. The suitable accompaniment to sparkling conversation is the inane giggle.

I am quite in earnest, however, in saying that there is a large public for this book. A great many women returning from a drawing room lecture on Brieux or Strindberg will return to it with the same feeling of relief that a fish feels when it flop from the grassy bank into its native element. And to these readers Mr. Howard Chandler Christy's pictures—all in his most characteristic style, will prove an added joy.

Hurts German Feelings.

LONDON, April 17. — Cardinal Mercer of Malines has annoyed the German rulers of Belgium by a recent letter to another cardinal in which he says: "I cannot doubt that the day is approaching when full freedom of our movements and our words will be restored. You and we will then have the great joy to express openly all the patriotic and Christian feelings which at present are pent up in our souls. God grant that we may patiently await the hour of liberation."

Hungarians In Despair.

ROME, April 17.—An uncensored despatch from Vienna says that the exodus of panic-stricken Hungarians is increasing, since it is believed that a Russian invasion of Hungary is inevitable and that the optimism expressed in official circles is groundless. The citizens of Vienna are described as indignant that the Hungarians are allowed to flee to Vienna, thus hastening a famine in the Austrian capital.

His Three "Wives" Make Trouble

Can't See "Why They Should Kick When He Kept 'em in Comfort."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 16—Thomas Nolan, who has supported three "wives" for more than five years in different parts of the city, maintaining all the while a regular nightly schedule for visiting each of the three, came to grief today when each learned of the existence of the other two, and he was hustled off to jail in default of bail.

His only comment was "I kept 'em in comfort and visited them regular. I don't know why they should kick."

Mrs. Martha Huston Nolan, "wife No. 1," said she and Nolan were married in 1897, and she had seven children; Mrs. Mary Wandt Nolan, "wife No. 2," said she and Nolan were married in 1910; Fannie Christoferson, "wife No. 3," admitted she and Nolan had never been married.

"Wife No. 1" said: "He took to going out at night about ten years after we were married. When I asked him where he was he told me he had got a position tending a heater in a club house. As time wore on the heater demanded more and more attention."

"Wife No. 2" said: "First I saw him; then I didn't. But he provided well for me, and it was only when his first wife came and asked me to swear out a warrant that I did so."

"Wife No. 3" said: "We are not married at all."

Nolan said: "These ladies will have to shift for themselves now that I have been 'interned.' It's a relief, though, to be taken from under such a load. There's no denying I have a certain amount of affection for all these women, but, taking it all in all, the last one is the best."

To transplant growing plants an Idaho man has invented a metal pot, made in two sections, which may be inserted in the ground around the roots and brought together.

ICE IS OUT OF CLEAR LAKE

Navigation Opens a Little Earlier This Year—News of Young's Point

YOUNG'S POINT, April 16—The death occurred of Mr. Louis Ayotte, of this place, on Friday evening, the 16th inst. The late Mr. Ayotte, who was 69 years of age, had been ailing the past year; but the family did not expect death would be so sudden, as he was up and around on Friday. The deceased leaves to mourn his loss his wife, two sons and two daughters. The sons are: Messrs. William and Francis, while the daughters are, Mrs. Matthew Young and Miss Tillie. The funeral was held on Sunday to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

Mr. Lenna Johnston, of Peterborough, is visiting his relatives here.

Mr. Frederick Young has painted his house, which looks very well. Mr. Sam Duval was the boss painter on the job.

Miss Esther Dugan gave a dance to her friends one night last week. Quite a large number were present, and all enjoyed themselves.

The Stony Lake Navigation Co. has taken a contract to bring down a drive of logs from Eel's Creek to Peterborough, for the Peterborough Lumber Co. There is about seventy thousand pieces, which were left last spring. Mr. Joseph Watson, of Lakefield, is foreman, and took up a large gang of men on Wednesday, 14th inst.

The English Church held a basket social in Mr. ChCarleton's Hall on Wednesday evening, the 7th. Quite a number were present.

Mr. Robert Dever is busy painting the Burleigh Locks.

Some say the day of peace is in sight. We sincerely hope also, the day is in sight, when some of the village cows will be taken off the streets.

WITHOUT BREAD.

In Trieste, Austria, the Supply of Flour is Exhausted.

Rome, April 19.—An uncensored despatch from Trieste says the supply of flour has been exhausted. There will be no work for the bakers to-morrow and the city will be without bread. The price for rice paste is prohibitive.

The barracks at Trieste were prepared for 20,000 Germans who were expected to arrive on Friday. They have not yet appeared.

IN SOLITARY CONFINEMENT.

10 British Officers Locked Up as Reprisal Measure.

Halle-on-the-Salle, Germany, April 19.—Ten British officers, prisoners of the Germans, have been taken from the local camp of prisoners of war and placed in solitary confinement in Magdeburg. This is a measure of reprisal for the treatment by Great Britain of the crews of German submarines held prisoners in Efkland.

The ten officers referred to include the son of a former British Ambassador in Berlin. The name of this officer, however, is not given.

NOTABLE VICTORY FOR FRENCH IN THE VOSGES

Operations In The Dardanelles Have Been Resumed

DARDANELLES' BOMBARDMENT HAS BEEN RESUMED

Turkish Aircraft Unsuccessfully Drops Missiles at Allied Warships—British Submarine Runs Ashore—Crew Captured.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 19.—Reuter's Athens correspondent says the bombardment of the Dardanelles was resumed Saturday. A Turkish aeroplane circled over Tenedos and unsuccessfully dropped bombs in the port and at several warships. Allied seaplanes pursued the Turkish aircraft, which escaped.

The British submarine E-15 has been sunk in the Dardanelles east of Karantik. Three officers and 31 men of the crew of 31 were rescued by the Turks. Among them was the former British Vice-Consul at Dardanelles.

The British Admiralty in a statement issued yesterday afternoon announces: "The submarine E-15 ran ashore yesterday on Kephez Point, in the Dardanelles while attempting a difficult reconnaissance of the Kephez mine field. According to an official communication published at Constantinople the officers and men were rescued and made prisoners."

The British battleships Majestic and Swiftsure on Thursday bombarded the Dardanelles fortifications near Gabatepeh.

The following Turkish official statement regarding recent operations at the Dardanelles was issued at Constantinople last night: "On the afternoon of April 14 the English battleship Majestic bombarded a land position near Gabatepeh, on Saros Bay. The fire was returned and the Majestic was forced to retire. On the following afternoon the Majestic attacked our advanced batteries, but was struck three times. The warship retired retired and was replaced by the British battleship Swiftsure, which continued the bombardment without result.

"On the nights between the 13th and 15th of April enemy torpedo boats tried to penetrate the Dardanelles. They were easily repulsed. German aviators dropped bombs which struck and exploded on enemy coal steamers.

"Main headquarters reports that Saturday an enemy hydroplane was damaged by Turkish fire and fell into the sea. A second hydroplane attempted to save it and was sunk by our fire. An English armoured cruiser which tugged away the damaged machine was struck by our shells. The cruiser with the hydroplane withdrew."

A despatch from Sofia says that the Russian Black Sea fleet bombarded Kara Barum yesterday. The extent of the damage is not stated. Kara Burum is on the coast of the Black Sea, about 30 miles north of Constantinople.

Considerable significance is attached to despatches from Sofia which say that the Turkish garrisons at several important fortifications are being moved to Constantinople. Troops are being moved from Tchatalja, Adrianople, Demotika and Kirkilsse. The object is to further protect Constantinople.

Saturday Night And Sunday Despatches

LONDON, April 17.—A Turkish destroyer was sung in Aegean Sea today while attacking landing party of the Allied troops. The crew was made prisoners.

ATHENS, April 17.—While disembarking at the Dardanelles one hundred British soldiers or sailors from the transport Manitou, were drowned.

PARIS, April 17.—British troops are preparing for an attack on Lille, which is now held by Germans. Canadian trenches are right opposite this situation.

PETROGRAD, April 17.—Twelve thousand Austrians taken prisoners in the Carpathians last week have arrived at prison camps here.

THE HAGUE, April 18.—A Greek steamer was torpedoed in the North Sea. The crew of twenty was rescued.

VIENNA, April 18.—(Official) — Owing to the possibility of a lengthy war, untrained Landsturm men between the ages of eighteen and fifty hereafter are liable for military service.

PARIS, April 18. — (Official) — A German aeroplane was brought down near Flanders. The aviators bombarded an aviation shed at Freidburg. Appreciable progress was made on the Fecht river in the Vosges.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 18. — The British battleships "Majestic" and "Swiftsure" bombarded our advanced batteries without result and were forced to retire.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 18. — Official reports say the British submarine E-15 was sunk in the Dardanelles. Three officers and a crew of 21 were rescued by Turks.

PETROGRAD, April 18.—(Official) —In desperate fighting between Telepotch and Zulla we took 1,140 prisoners, forty officers, and three machine guns. In the direction of Stry we repulsed attacks. No changes in other fronts.

PARIS, (3 p.m. official), April 18.—A Belgian aeroplane brought down a German aeroplane near Boulters.

BATAVIA — The commander-in-chief of the army in the Dutch Indies has forbidden bands to play "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

SCRAPS OF WAR NEWS

LONDON — A British military bandsman who suffered aphasia when buried by a shell explosion at Ypres, recovered his memory by reading a sheet of music placed on his bed.

COPENHAGEN — A report from Berlin declared the United States consul-general had ordered menus from all Munich restaurants to send to America to disprove German starvation newspaper reports printed in them.

LONDON — A British "Tommy" writing from the trenches in France thanked a London newspaper for sending cigarettes, and added: "The French 'fags' (cigarettes) are simply awful!"

AMSTERDAM—British soldiers interned at Groningen gave such a creditable vaudeville performance for the benefit of companions that they were asked to appear at the municipal theatre. The "debut" was a hit.

AMSTERDAM—A Dutch newspaper correspondent wrote a letter to a friend in Liege, Belgium. German authorities returned it inscribed: "Liege unknown." Correct address: "Luttrich, Prussia, Germany." This is the new German name for 'Liege.'

BERNE — The Swiss watch and clock industry has suffered a loss of $15,000,000 in revenue since the beginning of the European war.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE —Fourteen thousand Northumberland miners are now wearing the British uniform, leaving the coal mines to take care of themselves.

LONDON—A facetious employee of the London Office of public records decorated the office cat with a German iron cross which had been brought from one of the battlefields.

BERLIN — Berlin newspapers suggests that there are 20,000,000 pigs in Germany who are robbing the people of their food and urges the government to kill and pickle them.

AMSTERDAM — A German newspaper advertising for a new editor, stated that owing to war and the depicted condition of the staff, the editor's hours would necessarily be from 4 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Berlin's View Of Situation

British Attempt to Destroy Strong German Positions Has Failed, Says Berlin War Office.

BERLIN, via wireless, April 19.—The British attempt to destroy through mining operations, strong German positions south-east of Ypres, has failed, the War Office says.

The official statement says:

"The English after some blasting last night, rushed the German position on the heights south-east of Ypres. They were at once repulsed in a counter attack. The fighting here continues.

'The Champagne French have blasted a trench in a position taken on April 16 by the Germans between the Meuse and the Moselle.

"In artillery duels in progress in the Vosges, south-west of Strossweier, the Germans took French positions. South-west of Metzeral the Germans carried outposts but fell back before the superior force of the enemy.

GERMANS USE DEADLY GASES

In Their Trench Warfare, So Says German Prisoner

General Headquarters of the British Army in France, April 19.— The oft-repeated report that the Germans are using deadly gases in their trench warfare has been attested by a German prisoner speaking voluntarily to a British staff officer. The officer related to the Associated Press correspondent the description given by this prisoner of three-foot cylinders charged with an unknown gas, which they purposed releasing at some expedient time, the plan being to kill or stupefy the English, if possible. This expedient, the German said, was to be followed by a vigorous infantry attack, much as infantry advances after artillery clears the way.

"The prisoner exhibited cotton wool," said the officer, "which he said had been supplied them to plug their noses and prevent the gas from killing them also. It is not quite clear to me, however, why a shift of the wind would not turn the tables, blowing the gas into the German trenches instead of ours."

The Route of the Raiders.—This map shows the course of the German Zeppelins which passed over England on the eve of April 15th. They are supposed to have been picking a route to London.

CARRIED SUMMIT AT THE POINT OF THE BAYONET

Chasseurs Heroes of One of the Most Brilliant Charges of the War—Victory Won After a Week of Desperate Fighting.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, April 19.—In one of the most brilliant bayonet charges of the entire war, French chasseurs on Saturday carried the summit of Schnepfenrieth Kopf in Alsace, overlooking the Rhine valley. The victory was won after a week of desperate fighting. In a series of short dashes the French carried one after another of rows of German trenches on the mountain side. They fought their way through wire entanglements and over heavily mined areas in the face of a galling fire from the enemy's machine guns. Before a solid line of cold steel, the Germans on the crest finally broke and fled down the eastern slopes. The capture of Schnepfenrieth Kopf, according to French military experts, is one of the most important victories won by the Vosges armies in their advance toward the Rhine. Early in the week the French fought their way to the summit of the mountain, gaining nearly a mile in a 24-hour battle. The summit of the hill lies above the Rhine valley, and from their position French artillerymen can command the roads leading to Colmar, the capital of Upper Alsace, fifteen miles away. The Rhine itself now lies but 22 miles away from the French armies advancing over the Mountains. On the northern bank of the River Fecht, a few miles north of Schnepfenrieth, the French have made further progress, according to the official communique. At the same time the attacks against the German positions near Hartmanns-Weiler, 18 miles to the south, are carrying the French closer to the Rhine.

In the valley of the Aisne, French artillery bombarded Los Grottes de Pasly, which served as shelters for the German troops, and destroyed several of the caves.

The caves of Pasly referred to are in the hills that rise sharply from the northern bank of the Aisne. It was in the caves and the quarries connected with them that part of Gen. von Kluck's army made a stand after being defeated on the Marne. The British and French have unsuccessfully tried many times to take this stronghold. Now that some of them have yielded to the fire of the new heavy artillery, the recent announcements of the French War Office of superiority in heavy armaments, projectiles and explosives are forcibly recalled

Crop Bulletin For April

The following information regarding agricultural conditions in this Province is contained in a bulletin prepared by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, based upon information furnished by a large staff of correspondents, under date of April 1st.

Wintering Crops.

Fall Wheat—Reports of correspondents in November described the new fall wheat as never more promising, there being a good growth and a much increased area. The fields were well protected by snow until the middle of March, when in many sections they became comparatively bare and suffered more or less from alternate thawing and freezing, cold winds, etc., causing some heaving and considerable browning of the top. The hope was entertained, however, that warm rains and good growing weather later on would revive these more backward fields, as the tops only seemed affected. Late sown fields are the least promising. At present there is no cause for anxiety as to the condition of the main crop.

Clover—Clover did not make a good catch last year, especially in the eastern portion of the Province, owing to the unusually dry summer, and as a consequence new fields were not so well prepared for the trying spring weather. More or less heaving has occurred in every district, and while a number of correspondents report fields as giving good promise the prospects of the crop, taken as a whole, are not so encouraging as might be desired. However, favourable spring weather may yet put a brighter face on the situation.

Rye—Rye appears to have come better through the winter than either wheat or clover, and gives promise of being a good crop.

Orchards and Small Fruits.

Fruit trees so far have not suffered much from the winter, especially where care has been given the orchards. A few complaints have been made of injury to peach buds in some localities in southwestern Ontario, but so far the peach orchards of the Niagara peninsula have been practically unscathed from this cause. Several reports were made of girdling of young fruit trees by rabbits and mice, more especially in the county of York. Fruit bushes have come through the winter in good shape, but some correspondents speak of injury to strawberries from severe open weather in March where not mulched.

Live Stock.

The wintering of live stock, owing to the light crop and the poor summer pasturages of last year, depended largely upon ensilage, straw, roots and other roughage, of which, happily, there was more than an average supply, as many farmers were chary in using grain owing to the high prices prevailing during the winter.

Horses—As a class horses have come through in generally good shape although a number of minor cases of distemper have been reported. Working horses particularly are said to be in excellent fettle, although perhaps not so heavy as usual, as owners have in most cases been sparing with feed.

Cattle — Cattle also have come through the winter in fair condition —healthy but somewhat thinner than might be desired, owing to the high price of grains and mill feeds. All ailments have been of local nature, no serious outbreak of disease being reported. Fat cattle were picked up in large numbers in the fall—some of them rather unfinished—especially in those counties near the border; but in some sections a fair supply is yet on hand. Store cattle are not so plentiful as usual, and grazers are anxious to get them on the grass, owing to the scarcity of hay and the high value of grain. Many of these animals are younger than usual, and some correspondents point out that owing to the large number of milch cows in use grazing cattle are tending more toward the dairy type. It is also stated that farmers are holding on to their cows in the dairy counties owing to the good prospects for cheese, and that more calves are being retained than formerly.

Sheep—Sheep have been wintered better than any other class of live stock. They are doing well, and lambs are coming strong. The dread of the dog, however, is very apparent in reports of correspondents, and it acts as a brake on the sheep industry of the Province.

Swine—Hogs have been kept thinner than usual, but it is said that they have suffered less from crippling than for several winters past. The high cost of grain has caused many animals to be turned off in a somewhat unfinished state. A few spring pigs have died, but no serious disease is at present affecting swine.

Methods of Feeding—Nearly every farmer has his own plan of feeding, and the methods reported vary from careful stall care, the ration being well balanced and nourishing, to a feed of chopped straw and ensilage or some other roughage, with perhaps a trifle of hay or crushed grain just sufficient to bring the animals over to the grass. Some breeders of sheep and cattle speak well of rape for fall pasture, while advocates of the silo for general use are more enthusiastic than ever. There does not appear to be as much grain fed to like stock as in more recent years, except where they were being finished for delivery. Judging by the reports of correspondents, however, it is plain that a great advance has been made during the last few years in the economic wintering of all classes of stock while yet bringing them through in fair shape for early pastures.

Fodder Supplies — The fodder supply at the present time is largely a matter of local—or individual—experience. Hay and straw, where not too freely sold to pressers at tempting prices, will be sufficient in most cases, and there will also be enough coarse grains on hand to meet requirements. Progressive farmers have an ample supply of roots for all needs, while the excellent crop of corn last year ensures an abundance of either ensilage or dry fodder. In this connection a correspondent tersely remarks, "Ensilage solves the feed problem."

Increased Production.

Correspondents are not unanimous regarding the response to the call for a larger production. A few are outspoken against the movement, fearing over-production with a lowering of prices, but the great majority of those reporting heartily endorse the patriotism and production idea, and it is certain that there will be a substantial gain in the quantity of most of the commodities raised this year on Ontario farms.

Fall wheat already shows a decidedly increased area. More fall plowing than usual was done, much of it with old sod, and while this may mean an increase of grain (especially of oats) and of corn or roots, it will also mean to some extent loss pasture. In the cannery districts a smaller acreage will be devoted to supplying the factories, and more attention will be given to raising general farm crops. The cheese season will be earlier than usual, and this will require an increased production of milk and consequently a greater consumption of fodders.

Several correspondents point out that some of the grain in crop production will come not so much from an enlarged area as from a better selection of seed, a more careful preparation of the seed-bed, and a more thorough cultivation of the growing crops. They say that poor seed and poor tillage have been responsible for many of the poor yields of the past.

One drawback to farm crop development is the lack of competent labour, for while help is offering fairly freely, it often lacks quality.

Not only in field work, but in the orchard and the stable, the idea of improvement and increase seems to have taken hold of many, and the year 1915 promises to be one of the busiest in history of agriculture of the Province.

NO SHORTAGE OF MEN.

Twice as Many Answer the Call From Remount Dept. as Are Needed.

Kingston, April 19.— The call for recruits for the remount depot from this division has been answered by twice as many men as are wanted. Since so many have signified their willingness to go overseas this branch of the service an order doubling the establishment of the depot or some other way of accepting the men is expected.

Fig Layer Cake.

One cup sugar, three even tablespoons butter, one egg and yolks of two, two-thirds cup sweet milk, two cups flour and two teaspoons baking powder.

Filling—One cup sugar, one-quarter cup water, eight figs chopped fine whites of two eggs. Place sugar, figs and water on stove and cool to a paste. When nearly cool add the beaten whites and spread between layers, and on top.

Why Hesitate?

We Will Relieve You of Kidney Disease or Furnish You Medicine Free

We know we can furnish medicine that will almost always effect easy and positive relief for kidney ailments, e are so certain of this that we sell every package with our printed guarantee that the medicine shall cost the purchaser nothing should it fail to do as we claim.

We have been recommending and selling this medicine to a considerable extent, and are receiving the best kind of evidence that it is doing exactly as we said it would. That's why we can safely and truthfully ask all our neighbours to try it at our risk.

Our treatment consists of Rexall Kidney Pills, which are one of the finest pharmaceutical preparations we know of for overcoming kidney, bladder and urinary derangements, and associate ailments.

We want everyone who suffers from any kidney or urinary disease to come to our store and get a package of Rexall Kidney Pills. ## "THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

It is permissible in certain circumstances for the police to detain a suspect, without any charge, for a period of not more than twenty-four hours. Heldon Foyle had taken advantage of this to hold Grell while he tried to draw further together the tangled threads of the investigation.

He had changed out of his tweeds and, once more the spick-and-span man about town, he sat down in his office with an order that he was to be informed the moment that Sir Hilary Thornton returned. Meanwhile, he occupied himself with a work of composition. It was necessary to break gently to the public the fact that Robert Grell was not dead. But it had to be done in the right way. He could not altogether see what evidence might have to be offered at the inquest, but he was sure the newspapers would label it "sensational." He wanted to prepare, at any rate, for the revelation of the dead man's identity. That there was no possibility of avoiding, but it could be rendered less startling if it did not come suddenly. And beyond the public interest in the case Foyle had another reason for the publication of his effort. He worked steadily and made three drafts before he had completed his task. Two of them he tore up, an the third he read over carefully, making one or two alterations.

"When the inquest in reference to the Grosvenor Gardens murder is resumed it is understood that evidence of a remarkable nature will be brought forward by the police. Inquiries made by the C.I.D. have placed it beyond all doubt that the crime was not a planned one, and evidence is still being collected against a suspected person.

"A man for whom a rigorous search has been made by the police has been found in a Sussex village by Scotland Yard officers, acting in conjunction with the county constabulary. He was taken to Malchester Row police station, where he has been detained. It is understood that he refuses to give any account of the circumstances in which he took to flight.

"On inquiry at Scotland Yard yesterday, a representative of this journal was informed that the officers engaged on the case expect to be in a position to clear up the mystery in the course of the next few days."

"That ought to do," he muttered as he blew down a speaking-tube. To the detective-inspector who came in response to his summons he handed the paper. "Have fifty copies of that made, and bring me one. Put some one to 'phone through to all the journalists on the list, asking 'em to call here at half-past six to-night. They're each to have a copy of that."

There was guile in Foyle's fixing of the time. He knew that the paragraph would be a bombshell in Fleet Street, and did not want it to explode prematurely. At half-past six all the evening papers would have ceased publication for the day. At half-past six, too, he would take good care to be far away from the hordes of press men, hungry for details, who would strive to find more information from the hints given. At that time they were not likely to find any person wiser than themselves, and he had seen to it that there should be no indiscretion at Malchester Row.

"Sir Hilary just come in, sir," said some one, opening the door just wide enough to permit a head to be thrust within; but before Foyle could move the Assistant-Commissioner himself walked in.

"One moment, Sir Hilary," said the superintendent, and dashed out, to return again almost immediately. "I just wanted to make certain that we shouldn't be disturbed. There's a lot to tell you. Things have been happening."

"So I gather," said the other, settling himself in the armchair. "You've got Grell, I hear. What's the next move? Do his finger-prints agree?"

"They do not. He is not the murderer, but he won't say who is. The next move is, that I intend that to go in all the morning papers."

He placed in Thornton's hand a copy of the type-written paragraph, and the Assistant-Commissioner read it slowly through. "I don't quite follow," he said as he handed it back. "It hints that Grell will be charged with the murder."

"Exactly. It is intended to convey that impression. To tell you the truth, I have a piece of evidence of which I have not spoken to you before. It indicates a person possibly guilty whom we must not neglect. If she is guilty—which I half doubt—that paragraph may help us to get at the missing evidence."

His voice sank to a whisper and he leaned forward with arms outspread over his desk. As he spoke, Thornton's voice changed. He leapt to his feet and brought his fist down vehemently on the desk.

"I don't believe it, man!" he cried. "I don't believe it! It's incredible. You've made a mistake. It can't be. Why, you've believed it was Grell yourself all along. If you've made a mistake, then why not now?"

Foyle's chin became a trifle aggressive. Thornton's astonishment was natural, but the superintendent did not like the appearance of lack of confidence. His blue eyes were alight.

"You can draw your own inference from the facts, Sir Hilary," he said coldly. "I am clear in my mind. I have done nothing, because I want to make the evidence as to motive indisputable. Should I find I am wrong I shall, of course, write out my resignation."

Thornton was not usually an impulsive man. He had recovered himself immediately upon his outburst, and was once more calm and self-possessed.

"Don't be offended, Foyle," he said, more mildly. "I beg your pardon. It was just a bit startling at first. We've been associated too long for misunderstanding. I'll back you up, and there's not going to be any talk of resignations."

"Thank you, Sir Hilary," said the superintendent entirely mollified. Going to the big safe he unlocked it and took something from the shelf which he handed to the Assistant-Commissioner. The two bent over it.

It was nearly two hours before the two concluded their task. Sir Hilary, his hands clasped behind his back, walked in deep thought back to his own room. Helon Foyle put on his hat and coat and ordered a taxi.

"Brixton Prison," he said to the driver.

CHAPTER L.

There are many people who pass Brixton Prison every day who have no conception of its whereabouts. The main entrance is tucked away a hundred yards or so down an unobtrusive turning off Brixton Hill. Within a little gatehouse inside the barred gates a principal warder sits on duty.

Although Foyle was tolerably well known to the prison officials, the usual formalities had to be gone through, and he was kept outside till a note he had pencilled was sent up and replied to by the governor. Then, conducted by a warder, he was taken over the flagged courtyard and through long corridors to the remand side of the prison.

Another warder opened one of the heavy cell doors, and a man seated on a low bed looked up with a frown of recognition. The superintenent remained standing by the doorway. "Sorry to trouble you, Abramovitch," he said briskly. "I just wanted to have a little talk with you."

Ivan rose and deliberately turned his back. "You must go to my solicitor if you have any questions to ask," he said sullenly.

Heldon Foyle seated himself at the end of the bed and nursed his stick. "That wouldn't be of much use, would it?" he asked smilingly. "What I want to speak to you about has nothing to do with the present charge against you. Mr. Grell is in our hands now, and in the circumstances I thought you might care to know it."

"You've arrested Mr. Grell?" he cried. "Are you lying?"

"I am not lying. He is in custody and may be charged unless you like to clear him."

Ivan took a couple of short steps. His lips were firmly pressed together. The detective watched him narrowly as he came to an abrupt halt.

"You think I can clear him?" he said slowly. "You are wrong."

"But you know he never committed the murder?" The words came sharp as a pistol shot. Ivan never answered, and Foyle went on: "You have done all you could to help him escape us. Now we have got him you can only help him by telling the truth. There was some strong motwe to induce you to take all the risks you have done. What is at the back of it?"

Ivan studied his questioner suspiciously. Foyle made haste to dispel what was at the back of his mind. "You had reason for refusing to speak before," he insisted. "I'm not blaming you. Consider the whole thing fairly as it stands now and you'll see that you best serve your master by perfect frankness. I'm not trying to trap you. You may trust me."

"You are right. Secrecy can no longer do good," he said. "I will tell you all I know."

He sat down by Foyle's side and went on: "I was always what you English call a bad egg. I broke with my family many years ago—it doesn't matter who they were—and left Russia to become an adventurer at large. In the years that followed I was everything everywhere—seaman, barber, waiter, soldier, and gambling-house cheat. I wasn't particular how I picked up a living nor where it led me. All that won't interest you. I was operator in a gambling-joint at San Francisco when I first met Goldenburg, though I knew him by reputation. He came to our place now and again, and we were on speaking terms. After that Grell came and I mistook him for the other man. That was how we first became acquainted."

"That would be almost five years ago?" interposed Foyle quietly.

GOOD WORK NEAR METZ.

French Aviators Do Extensive Damage In German Lines.

PARIS, April 17.—Successful operations were conducted by French aviators yesterday, in which they bombarded a German shell factory, blew up a German powder magazine, hit the central electrical station which supplies Metz city and forts with light and power, and gave chase to three German aviators, who were forced to land. The official report follows:

"Our aviators were very active. Ten bombs were thrown on the workshops of the railway station of Leopoldshohe, which were being used for the manufacture of shells. Ten bombs were dropped on the powder magazine at Rottiweil. Six struck the mark, and a huge red flames shot up, surrounded by dark smoke. The aeroplanes were struck by shell splinters, but returned safe and sound.

"Forty bombs, most of which struck their mark, were dropped on the central electric station at Malzieres Les Metz, about ten miles north of Metz. This station supplies the town and fort of Metz with power and light. Much smoke rose from the central building. On their return, our aviators encountered three aviators, to whom they gave chase, forcing them to land. Our squadron suffered no mishaps, although subjected to a violent cannonade from the Metz forts.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Nelson W. Aldrich, former U. S. Senator from Rhode Island, and for years prominent in Republican political circles, died at his home in New York of heart disease.

For stealing two overcoats from the hallway of the Hotel Dieu, Montreal, Adolphe Chevalier and Arthur Lefebvre have been sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary.

Girls With Beautiful Faces or Graceful Figures

Canadian girls have a world-wide reputation for beauty, but, at the same time, there are girls in our cities who possess neither beauty of face nor form, because in these instances they suffer from nervousness, the result of disorders of the womanly organism. At regular intervals they suffer so much that their strength leaves them; they are so prostrated that it takes days for them to recover their strength. Of course, such periodic distress has its bad effect on the nervous system. The withered and drawn faces, the dark circles and crow's feet about the eyes, the straight figure without those curves which lend so much to feminine beauty are the unmistakable signs of womanly disorders.

When a girl becomes a woman, when a woman becomes a mother, when women pass through the changes of middle life, are the three periods of life when health and strength are most needed to withstand the pain and distress often caused by severe disturbances.

At these critical times women are best fortified by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription, an old remedy of proved worth that keeps the entire system in excellent condition.

Mothers, if your daughters are weak, lack ambition, are troubled with headaches, lassitude and are pale and sickly, Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription is just what they need to surely bring the bloom of health to their cheeks and make them strong and healthy.

If you are a sufferer, if your daughter, mother, sister need help get Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription in liquid or tablet form. Then address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., and receive confidential advice from a staff of specialists, that's free. Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada, at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.—Adv.

Suffered Intense Pain In Her Back.
Could Hardly Do Her Housework.

If a pain attacks you in the back "stop and think" what it is and what causes it.

If the kidneys are at fault—and in a large majority of cases of pain in the back they are—doctor them at once, and doctor them persistently, as it is impossible to have a well strong back unless the kidneys perform their functions properly.

Doan's Kidney Pills cure all forms of kidney trouble, and cure them to stay cured.

Mrs. H. F. Jacob, Lavant Station, Ont., writes: "I take pleasure in telling you how much good your medicine has done me. I had suffered from intense pains in my back, and was so bad I could hardly do my housework. My kidneys were also bothering me a great deal. I tried several kinds of patent medicines, and was almost discouraged, and was looking for some other kind of medicine to try when I noticed your advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills, so I thought it could not hurt to try them. I noticed a great difference when I had used one box, and to my great relief when I had used three boxes I was entirely cured, and I have not been bothered since. I will not hesitate to recommend them to all I know."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c a box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont. When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

The old lady shook her head.—A certain Scotch minister of considerable force of character and vigour of expression was wont in his pulpit discourses occasionally to make some what vehement attacks upon the Church of Rome, as some conscientious clerics deem it their duty to do. One year Mr. A— decided upon making Rome the scene of his annual autumn holiday. A member of his congregation, while calling upon the minister's mother, touched upon the subject of her son's projected trip, remarking that he would no doubt get a great deal of enjoyment from it. The old lady shook her head, and with an expression of much doubt in her face replied, "I've great fears about the whole matter. I doubt if it's safe his going to Rome at a'. Everybody kens that, there's few been so sair against the Pope as our Willie."

WHY SEVEN WOMEN DESIRE ONE HUSBAND

Bible Picture of the Present-Day Religious Conditions.

Woman a Symbol of the Church—Jewish Marriage Typical of the Union of Christ and the Church—The True Church a Betrothed Virgin—"The Marriage of the Lamb" — "The Spirit and the Bride Say Come"—Who Are the Seven Women? — Who Is the Man? — Why He Turns From Them.

[The matter under this heading is supplied by the Pastor Russell Lecture Bureau, who conduct the Brooklyn Tabernacle (unsectarian) Bible Studies, and who have arranged for its publication.]

Rochester, N.Y., April 18. — Pastor Russell spoke twice here today. We report his discourse on the text, "Seven women shall take hold of one Man in that Day, saying, We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; only let us be called by Thy name, to take away our reproach." (Isaiah 4:1.) He said in part:

Many of the Old Testament prophecies are highly figurative. Doubtless they had some measure of application at the time they were written, but we have Apostolic authority for concluding that they were intended for Spiritual Israel. (1 Peter 1:12.) Our Lord and the Apostles quoted continually from the prophecies and invariably applied the lesson to the Gospel Age. Hence we are abundantly justified in assuming that our text is applicable to the present. Its peculiar expression, "in that Day," is usual throughout Scripture in referring to the close of this Gospel Age, with its trouble and confusion incident to the inauguration of the Millennium.

Throughout the Scriptures a woman is a symbol of the Church—a pure woman of a pure Church, a corrupt woman of a false Church. Our Lord compared the true Church in the end of this Age to a company of virgins—part wise and part foolish—and likens Himself to the Bridegroom, who had come at the end of the Age to receive His espoused Church to Himself in glory. John the Baptist pictured the matter after the same figure, saying, "He that hath the Bride is the Bridegroom"; and St. Paul amplifies the thought, declaring, "I have espoused you (the consecrated Church) as a chaste virgin unto one husband, which is Christ." (John 3:29; 2 Corinthians 11:2.) Here, as in the parable of the Ten Virgins, the Jewish marriage is set forth as the type of the union between Christ and the Church—a very different figure from modern marriage customs.

With the Jews in olden time, when a betrothal took place legal and binding documents were signed by or for the contracting parties, but no actual marriage occurred for about a year. During that period it was required that the espoused be faithful to her espousal as is now expected of any true wife. We see the harmony between the Jewish marriage custom and the Lord's dealings with the Church. No one is espoused to our Lord who has not entered into a formal and definite contract with Him. On our Lord's part the contract is the great and precious promises of Scripture, assuring the espoused that if faithful, she shall be joint-heir with her Lord in His Millennial Kingdom. On the Church's part the contract is our covenant of consecration, faithfulness to our Redeemer even unto death.

The interim between our personal acceptance of the Lord's gracious promises and our death corresponds in a measure to the betrothal period of the Jewish maiden; but the more exact fulfilment of the figure is found in the history of the Church as a whole. Our Lord's virgin Church was espoused to Him at Pentecost, and has been awaiting the coming of the Bridegroom and her resurrection change to glory, honor and immortality—the marriage, the union—for nearly nineteen centuries.

In His last Message to the Church, recorded in the Revelation, our Lord continues to picture the Church as a betrothed virgin, unmarried, but under strictest obligations to purity and faithfulness down to the end of this Gospel Age, where she is represented as making herself ready for the Bridegroom's coming and for the marriage. To be ready she must have on the wedding garment, and it must be "without spot or wrinkle or any such thing." (Ephesians 5:27.) That robe represents the imputed righteousness of Christ, which covers her every unintentional blemish and imperfection; and an, spot or wrinkle upon this robe would be a cause of such grief to the betrothed one that the stain would be removed and the wrinkle pressed out by the gracious arrangement made therefor by the Heavenly Bridegroom; for He presented the robe and gave directions by which it might be kept "unspotted from the world."

The Revelation shows that with her resurrection change in the end of this Age the "espoused virgin" Church will be no more. She will have passed into the more exalted state of the Bride—married or united to her Lord and Bridegroom. Not the symbolical picture by which she is represented—"the New Jerusalem, coming down from God out of Heaven." (Revelation 21:2, 9, 10.) That is, the Heavenly Kingdom, the new rulership of the world, is then pictured as the Bride. The grand work of the Church in glory is also pictured as the work of the Bride—"The Spirit and the Bride say, Come. And whosoever will, let him take of the Water of Life freely."—Revelation 22:17.

At the present time not only is the Church not the Bride, but she is not privileged to say, Come, to whosoever will; for with the calling of this Age there is a measure of election. Our Lord declared, "No man can come unto Me except the Father which sent Me draw him." (John 6:44.) Moreover, there is no River of the Water of Life now. That bountiful provision is for the future—for the world during the Millennial Age. Now, as our Lord explained, those who become His consecrated followers are granted to have in themselves "a well of water springing up into everlasting life."—John 4:14.

The heathen and children in Christian lands when they begin to study the Bible are perplexed and inquire, Which is the Church of Christ? They see churches of various names claiming to be branches of the Church; and they ask, Which did Jesus establish? The answer implies confusion and reproach. All claim genuineness and originality, but none can show any existence of its present organization earlier than the Third Century. When we contrast their elaborate and formal services with the simplicity of the early Church, as described in the New Testament, we are sure that they cannot be the same. When we compare their doctrines with those of Christ and the Apostles, as set forth in the New Testament, their claims fall to the ground for lack of support.

To illustrate: The Scriptures teach that there is but one God, the Father, and one Lord Jesus Christ (1 Corinthians 8:6); that the Father, who is above all, sent His Son to be our Redeemer; that when the Son had faithfully accomplished that work, the Father raised Him from the dead and exalted Him to His own right hand, or place of favor—next to Himself. Our Lord Himself said, "My Father is greater than I." (John 14:28.) But the various churches, each claiming to be the original, unite in telling us that there are three Gods, "equal in power and glory." Some explain that the three Gods operate as one; others teach that these are but three different manifestations of the one God. What confusion!

All this has tended to undermine the faith of the more rational members of these various churches. So disgusted have people in general become with their inability to harmonize with common sense the creeds formulated in the Dark Ages that many of the brightest minds have abandoned them and sought to frame new and more rational conventions.

But alas! the great Adversary, as the Apostle forewarned, has manifested himself as an angel of light and leader into all truth, and has captured their college and seminary professors and their most prominent ministers. With wonderful unanimity they have become Higher Critics and Evolutionists. In the name of all that is holy and good they are persuading the leading minds in the various sects that the Bible is not the Word of God; that it is not reliable; that while Jesus and the Apostles were honest enough, they were not brilliant scholars, and therefore could not detect the falsities of the Old Testament, upon which all of their teachings are based.

These wise men of our time assure us that the story of Adam and Eve is, at very most, an allegory, which twenty men might interpret in twenty different ways; that there never was a Garden of Eden; that there never was a sentence upon Adam because of his disobedience in perfection; and that, therefore, the Scriptures delude us when they declare that by reason of Adam's disobedience sin and death entered the world. Since they deny man's fall, they perforce deny the need of a Saviour. They deny our Lord's words that He came "to seek and to save that which was lost."—Luke 19:10.

Denying that there was any sin, they deny that Christ died for our sins and rose again for our justification. (1 Corinthians 15:3; Romans 4:24, 25.) They ignore the Apostle's statement that by one man's disobedience sin entered into the world, and death as a result of sin; and that thus death passed upon all men, because all are sinners. (Romans 5:12.) Thus do they make void the Word of God and set up, instead, human theories—the golden image to which all are required to bow down and worship if they would be called respectable, intelligent.

All this while the true Church has been "in the wilderness," as the Scriptures explain. (Revelation 12:14.) In other words, she has been in disfavor, ignored, and unknown to the worldly-wise. Some of her members have been scattered throughout the various denominations, and some have been outside of all these. The popular institutions known as churches are worldly; their aims, ambitions and methods are worldly. Hence there can be very little religious sympathy, fellowship and co-operation between the majority in these systems and the minority who are true to the Lord and His Word.

Our Lord's parable of the Wheat and the Tares pictures the situation exactly. He and His Apostles sowed the good seed. Subsequently the Adversary sowed errors, and brought into nominal Christendom many who were Christians in name merely and who professed morality for personal profit—either to escape eternal torment or to gain present advantage. Look where we may over the field of Christendom, we see comparatively few true disciples of Christ, willingly and gladly walking in his footsteps in the narrow way of self-sacrifice and service. We see the vast majority ignorant of the Truth and of the grace of the Lord—not knowing from what they were redeemed, not knowing to what they have been called, and not knowing the trials and difficulties of this present time for all the faithful ones.

We see that the fruits of the Spirit—meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, love—possessed by the wheat class, are not esteemed by the tares. The tare class is full of earthly ambitions, schemes and plans; in every sense of the word they give evidence that they are of the earth earthy. Some of these tares are fine, noble people in many respects; but they have never consecrated their lives to the Lord's service even unto death; they have never entered the narrow way, which alone leads to glory and honor.

Having in mind the numerous brands of Churchianity and their various conflicting doctrines, we cannot wonder that the Scriptures use the word Babylon—confusion—as a name for these systems as a whole. One can put his finger with some degree of definiteness upon the teachings of Confucius, and his followers know what they believe; the same with those of Buddhists, Brahmins, etc., but not so with Christians; for their doctrines are legion.

The confusion of doctrines amongst the various branches of Churchianity has brought reproach upon them all. The heathen are inquiring how it comes that there are so many kinds of Christians, and how it is that they all get their conflicting theories out of the same Book. This reproach is keenly felt by the leading minds of all denominations. Consequently their creeds are very generally ignored; but the organizations built upon those creeds are held to most firmly. The systems are worshiped, and the creeds repudiated.

We have seen that in Scriptural usage women symbolize the churches; that the true Church is represented by a virgin, and the false systems by harlots, unfaithful to their espousals and associating with the world. (Revelation 17:5.) Throughout Scripture the number seven is well recognized as the symbol of completeness. Accordingly we assume that in our text it signifies all the churches of this world, but does not include the true Church, which is not of this world and does not follow its course.

We have come to the time when these seven women—all the various sects and denominations—are with one heart feeling the reproach of their situation. And what is their conclusion as to the proper course to be pursued? We answer that it is prophetically voiced in our text. The one Man represents our Lord, the Heavenly Bridegroom. Our text thus signifies that all the nominal churches have come, or are about to come, to the place where they desire to be called the churches of Christ, but care to have nothing more to do with Him. They wish to hold their sectarian names and at the same time to be called Christians. The name of Christ is almost their only asset. For the doctrines of Christ they care nothing; and for any thought of redemption and covering of sins through Him they care nothing: It is merely His name that they desire. "We will eat our own bread and wear our own apparel; merely let us be called by Thy name."

Still associated with these various earthly systems are not a few members of the true Church, but they will not long remain therein; for one by one they are hearing the voice of Truth calling to them, "Come out of her (Babylon), My people, that ye be not partakers of her sins and receive not of her plagues." (Revelation 18:4.) The more these women desire to eat their own bread and to wear apparel of their own furnishment, the more the Lord's true people amongst them will awaken to the situation, and find that they have neither part nor lot there.

The true Church does not wish to eat her own bread; she wants the Bread that came down from Heaven. She does not prefer her own schemes, her own theories, her own plans of salvation, her own methods; she desires that which God has provided as her daily portion—"meat in due season" for "the Household of Faith"—things new and old from the Storehouse of Divine Truth. Neither does the espoused virgin of the Lord desire to wear her own apparel; for she has come to understand that her own righteousness is as filthy rags. (Isaiah 64:6.) More and more does she appreciate the robe given her by the Heavenly Bridegroom—the wedding garment. (Matthew 22:11.) More and more does she trust in the merit of her Redeemer, the justification furnished by whom was symbolized by the skins of the sacrifices given to Adam and Eve to cover their nakedness.

The Message of the Lord has gone forth to His Church of the present Epoch, counseling all who claim to be His that they trust not in uncertain riches, but that by faithful sacrificing of the earthly interests they buy of Him the gold tried in the fire, the Divine nature, and that they maintain the white raiment of justification, that they may see clearly the things that make for their peace and the things to come—the riches of grace, the knowledge of which has not entered into the heart of the natural man. Therefore let His true people anoint their eyes and see the glorious situation of the Lord's espoused.—Revelation 3:14-22.

PIMPLES

APPEARED ON HIS FACE AND HANDS.

The primary cause of pimples arises from the blood not being in a good condition. When the blood becomes impure you will find that pimples will break out all over the body, but more particularly on the forehead, nose and chin, and although they are not a dangerous trouble, they make you appear unsightly both to your friends and yourself. What you need, when these pimples break out, is to get a real good blood purifying medicine such as Burdock Blood Bitters. One that will build up the system by cleansing the blood of all the impurities and poisons which cause the skin to break out in these eruptions.

Mr. P. A. McKenzie, Portage La Prairie, Man., writes: "Last summer I was all run down and unfit for work of any kind. All kinds of food seemed distasteful to me. Pimples appeared on my face and hands, and I seemed to grow worse every day. One day a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. Half-heartedly I did so, and the results obtained were marvellous. I regained my health, I took on flesh, and in a short time the pimples and skin eruptions disappeared entirely; thanks to the healing powers of B.B.B. I freely recommend it to all sufferers."

SIMPLY WONDERFUL FOR CHEST COLDS MAKES 'EM WELL OVER NIGHT

Nothing Half So Quick to Relieve and Cure as Good Old "Nerviline."

Don't lie awake to-night coughing your throat sore—don't let your chest cold develop further—that's the way to coax on pneumonia.

Be sensible, cast as thousands before you have done, use Nerviline. It's sure is a bully fine thing to knock out a cold or bad cough.

After once using Nerviline you'll swear by it for all time to come.

You'll say it's more like a miracle than anything else to feel its warm soothing action upon your tight chest.

It's safe for even a child to rub on Nerviline. Although five times more powerful than most other liniments, yet Nerviline has never yet burned or blistered the tender skin of a child.

It's worth while to remember that wherever there is an ache or pain Nerviline will cure it.

Try it on rheumatism, on a stiff joint, on the worst possible case of rheumatism, neuralgia, sciatica, or lumbago. These are ailments Nerviline is guaranteed to cure mighty quick.

The mother of a large family can save heaps of work and worry, can cure little ills before they grow big, can keep the whole family well by always having Nerviline handy on the shelf. The large 50c bottle is the most economical. Trial size 25c., all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

ACTIVITY AT STRAITS.

Both Russians and Allies Are Bombarding Turkish Forts.

LONDON, April 17.—The Amsterdam correspondent of Reuter's Telegram Co., writing under date of Friday, says:

"Turkish headquarters reports that a cruiser yesterday bombarded the Dardanelles fortifications from the entrance.

Telegraphing from Sofia under date of Thursday The Times' correspondent says:

"A Russian fleet has bombarded Kara Burun, which lies inside the Tchatalja line on the Black Sea, about 25 miles north of Medea.

"Travelers from Dedeaghatch report that a fresh batch of German officers has arrived in Constantinople. They say also that the greater part of the garrison of Adrianople, Demotica and Kirk-Kilisseh have been withdrawn for the defence of the capital."

Examination of the damaged Turkish cruiser Medjidieh has established the fact that anthracite fuel has been supplied to Turkey recently by Bulgaria. Russia will probably prohibit exports into Bulgaria.

Germans to Make Sunflower Butter.

LONDON, April 17.—The production of margarine from sunflowers is the latest device attributed to the German Government to meet the expected scarcity of butter, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Amsterdam. The message says that the Prussian ministry of railroads has ordered all station masters to plant sunflowers in every bit of available ground around the depots.

Sunflowers, it is claimed, yield an oil that can be used in the manufacture of substitutes for butter.

Greatest Aqueduct Open.

BARI, Italy, April 17. — Water from the Apennines was distributed Wednesday for the first time to the provinces of Bari, Foggia and Lecce through the Apulia aqueduct, the largest in the world, which was begun in 1905. More than 2,000,000 persons now are assured of a supply of fresh water from mountain streams brought through 1,875 miles of pipe.

French Battleship Destroys Bridge.

Austria's Latest Denial.

VIENNA, April 17. — The official Fremdenblatt declares that all reports of an alleged intention on the part of Austria to conclude a separate peace with Russia are devoid of foundation.

Would Welcome Italy.

PARIS, April 17. — Russia would welcome Italy's intervention into the war, according to a despatch from Rome which quotes from a letter written by Grand Duke Nicholas to Foreign Minister Sazonoff. To the famous author now in the Italian capital Grand Duke Nicholas said:

"I desire to fight with the gallant Italian army because it is only thus that Italy can completely gain her national aspirations."

"I have several times invited Italy to align herself with the triple entente," wrote M. Sazonoff. "Her national aspirations would thereby be amply fulfilled."

Not For Scotland.

LONDON, April 17.—There is a boom in whiske purchases, people fearing prohibition are laying in stores.

The Evening News claims to have authority for stating that the Government's scheme concerns England and Wales only, and that an expert estimate of the amount which would be expended for the expropriation by the state of the liquor industry places the figure around £300,000,000.

Wants More War News.

LONDON, April 17. — J. Austen Chamberlain, M.P. for West Birmingham, has appealed to the Government to take the people more into its confidence and let them know a little more of what is happening. He says the secrecy of the Government is being carried to an extent that is detrimental to the country's best interests.

TO DARKEN HAIR APPLY SAGE TEA

Look Young! Bring Back its Natural Colour, Gloss and Thickness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn grey, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, grey or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents a large bottle at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While wispy, grey, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all grey hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

MARKSMANSHIP OF BRITISH IS SUPERIOR

HALIFAX, April 19.—One hundred and four soldiers of the first Canadian contingent, of all ages, eight of whom have been in the trenches and wounded, returned here by the steamer Missanabie. Those who were on the firing line say the Germans have some expert shots, but on the whole the marksmanship of the British is superior.

Seven of them belonged to the Princess Patricia's Regiment. One is Private Laurie of Toronto, who lost the sight of one eye as the result of a fragment of shell striking him. Private W. E. Watts of Hamilton, who was in the trenches three months, is invalided. Privates King and Henry of Toronto, Private Davis of Edmonton and Private C. H. Cunningham of Toronto, who suffered from rheumatism and frostbites, are among those who returned. Private G. Morrison of Niagara Falls was wounded in the leg two months ago, but is recovering. Some of the other soldiers have returned on account of illness, and some are undesirables.

Do some foods you eat hit back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. There never was anything so safely quick, so certainly effective. No difference how badly your stomach is disordered you will get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favourite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. "Pape's Diapepsin" is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Go now, make the best investment you ever made, by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

TRIBUTE TO THE COW

These words were spoken by a well known auctioneer before he commenced selling a high record Holstein cow. I often think as I feed and care for those noble animals what a great part they play in the feeding of mankind.

Truly a 20,000-pound cow doesn't happen, but with breeding, feeding and care we have brought them to the high standard they hold to-day. I believe in starting with the calf. When the calf is dropped we leave it with the dam about 12 hours, and then start with four pounds of new milk, three times daily (always weighed before feeding), till the calf is four weeks old. Gradually then we increase with separated milk to 18 pounds daily: bran and whole oats (half and half) as soon as they will eat and clover hay. I never give too much at any time and always keep the pails and mangers sweet and clean. We have no trouble with scours or delicate calves, and at a year old have good growthy animals with any amount of constitution. Then when the time comes later on they are capable of consuming large quantities of feed which is so necessary to produce a 20,000-pound cow, or over, in a year.

We don't believe in breeding the heifers to freshen much before they are two years and three months old, unless they are extra large and strong, when they may freshen a little younger.

In fitting a cow for a large record we feed from 12 to 16 lbs. of a mixture of bran, ground oats and oil meal, depending on the cow and the length of time dry. Ensilage, roots and hay are the forms of roughage used. As she gradually comes to the time of freshening we cut off the grain and ensilage, increase the roots to avoid udder trouble, but aim to have them freshen in as high a condition as possible. It tells in both long and short distance performances.

After the cow freshens she gets bran mashes for 24 hours, water with the chill taken off and then we start with the regular ration, increasing one-half pound a day until capacity is reached.

Burkeyje Hengerveld, our great cow, was the first four-year-old to make a record of 20,177 lbs. milk and 782 lbs. butter in Canada. Unfortunately she did not freshen just in time to qualify under the present R. O. P. rules, and previous to her test she received no fitting whatever, freshening in a thin condition. She was fed on a mixture of brewers' grains and molasses, bran, cotton seed meal and linseed meal, one pound of grain mixture to three pounds milk, 75 lbs. mangolds and all the alfalfa hay she could eat in our hour. When on grass she was fed grain and milked three times daily in the stable. She did her best milking in the stable on dry feed without ensilage, giving 92 lbs. in one day and about 2,400 lbs. in 30 days. She was always fed and milked on time, and I believe if you want to do your cow justice you must be very particular in this respect.

In feeding large record cows you have to study every individual cow as what would suit one wouldn't at all suit the other. At the present time we are testing a cow, and it took me several weeks to discover what grain ration suited her, and before I got her to do her best. Now she is giving us about 100 lbs. of milk daily in four milkings; her best day's milk being 104.5 lbs. In a cow giving upwards of 100 lbs. or over you are working with a very delicate machine, and any change, if absolutely necessary, must be made very gradually.

Her official record for one year is 20,177 lbs. of milk and 782 lbs. of butter. How was she fed? Read the article adjoining. Her owner, Mr. Joseph O'Reilley, Ennismore, Ont., tells all about her rations.

NOTHING IMPROPER.

OTTAWA, April 17. — Hon. Frank Oliver has issued a reply to charges made against him in the House of Commons by Hon. Dr. Roche on Thursday. The charges were that he had retained coal royalties which should have been paid into the treasury, and that Indian lands bought by a man named Falerne were jockeyed into his own possession. Mr. Oliver states that it was not until he ceased to be Minister that he discovered that he did not have the mineral rights or land which he had acquired in 1890. He then got the rights, and Hon. Dr. Roche granted him an extension of time for the settlement of the royalties.

Of the Indian lands bought by Falerne in 1900 and sold to J. J. Anderson, son-in-law of Mr. Oliver, in 1910, and sold by Anderson to Mr. Oliver in 1914, the ex-Minister of the Interior says he bought the land from Anderson three years after he ceased to be a Minister, and he declares that in neither of these transactions did he do anything improper, there was no intention to defraud, and the Government lost nothing.

INDIANS SHOW ABILITY.

NORTHERN FRANCE, April 17.—(Via London.)—On an elevated plateau of northern France there was enacted yesterday one of the strangest scenes ever witnessed by French people. The actors were Indian cavalry brought hither from their native land, with their horses and equipment for use in the British army at the time when the expected drive makes expedient their entrance into hostilities.

As yet denied an actual battle in the line, the Indian cavalry foregathered for a demonstration of its horsemanship and its prowess with lance, rifle and sword. The first feat was a mimic charge, in which hundreds of dusky horsemen swept across the plain into lines of imaginary Germans, slashing right and left with their sabres or piercing with slender lance straw-stuffed sacks which dotted the ground.

Their control of their horses were superb, and the spirit and agility which they displayed astonished the French onlookers. Formidable and terrifying was the yell of the Indians as they galloped across the field.

CANADIAN CASUALTIES.

OTTAWA, April 17.—The casualties announced by the Militia Department this morning are as follows:

Princess Patricias—Wounded, Pte. George W. Wilton, Pte. Peter Bowen.

Fifteenth Battalion — Death, Pte. Harry Howard.

Red Cross Efficiency.

A splendid specimen of British Red Cross efficiency was furnished by the arrival at Brentwood recently of a Red Cross train bearing British soldiers who had been wounded in the battle at Neuve Chapelle. Within 24 hours the men were brought home to England, and were in the Coombe Lodge Hospital a. Brentwood, Essex.

New War Song

Tune—"My Bonnie Lies over the Ocean."

My Johnnie is over the ocean,
My Johnnie is over the sea,
My Johnnie is fighting the Germans
O, bring back my Johnnie to me.

Chorus: Bring back, bring back,
Oh, bring back my Johnnie to me.

Our soldiers who watch from the airships,
Our soldiers who guard on the sea,
Our soldiers who fight in the trenches,
Are guarding my country and me.

One night as I lay on my pillow,
One night as I tossed on my bed,
One night as my thoughts crossed the billow,
I dreamed that the Kaiser was dead.

The women of Britain are weeping,
Hearts break 'neath the Fleur de Lis,"
Ten thousands of soldiers are sleeping,
'Neath the turf, or down under the sea.

Then blow ye winds over the ocean,
Blow peace from far over the sea;
Then blow ye an end to this warfare
And bring back my Johnnie to me.
Chorus, last line—"O bring back my Johnnie Canuck."

"This song was composed by Miss Alice Ferguson and sung by the members of the King East Branch of the Women's Institute at a patriotic concert held recently. The concert was a great success, they clearing $105 for the Belgian Relief Fund.

"We Have Just Left Hell."

NEW YORK, April 17.—The horrors of war proved too much for three attractive young American nurses, who arrived home from Europe yesterday on the Cunard liner Orduna. They are Miss Beatrice Brown, of Mont Clair, N.J., formerly head nurse in the U. S. naval hospital at Norfolk, Va.; Miss Henrietta Koocblein, of Westfields, N.J. and Miss Mabel Walsh, of Cambridge, Mass.

"We have just left hell," said one of the young women tragically.

All three are suffering from shattered nerves.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 19.—Wheat rose at one time today nearly 5c a bushel. The turn up was accompanied by assertions that foreigners were buying new crop deliveries and were also purchasing new crop flour on account of belief that the war influence would extend into the 1915 harvest. Unusually heavy profit taking, tho, led to a reaction, the market closing unsettled 1-8c off to 3 1-8c up compared with last night. Corn gained 1 3-8c to 1 5-8c net and oats 5-8c to 1 3-8c. In provisions the outcome varied from 5c decline to 15c advance.

Higher prices for corn were based largely on bullish crop reports from Argentine, and on the first big lake shipments of the year. Besides, there were cash sales here of 350,000 bushels including a round lot to exporters.

Oats went up trade with other cereals. Clearances of more than 1,000,000 bushels at the seaboard helped to sustain the advance.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 16. — Winnipeg wheat futures opened ½c lower to ½c up, oats ⅝c to ⅞c higher and flax ½c to 1¼c higher. Some new short sales were put thru yesterday afternoon and the inquiry was fairly active today, altho the new business was reported. The cash demand was good for certain grades. Inspections 207 cars, as against 353 last year and in sight today 150 cars. At the close prices eased off considerably.

Winnipeg wheat futures closed ⅜c to 1⅛c advance. Cash closed 1⅜c to 1⅝c higher for contract grades. Oats closed ⅝c to ⅞c up.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 16—The export trade in grain today was dull, there being little or no demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat. The local market for oats continues strong, and prices have scored a further advance of ½c to 1c per bushel, in sympathy with the higher prices ruling in the Winnipeg option market. The trade in all lines of coarse grains continues quiet. There is a good enquiry from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour and further sales were made for May-June shipment. The tone of the market is strong at the advance in prices of 20c per barrel. Millfeed is quiet and steady. Demand for

FRENCH SUCCESSFUL ON BOTH BANKS OF THE RIVER FECHT

Division of Mountain Artillery, Two 74 Millimetre Calibre Cannon and Machine Guns Captured by the Allies--- Notable Progress Made on the South Side of the River

BRITISH ATTACKS PROVED SUCCESSFUL

Special to The Examiner.

PARIS, April 19.---The three o'clock official communique to-days says:

"The British troops yesterday captured in Belgium near Zwartelen, two hundred yards of German trenches. They have retained these in spite of several counter attacks.

"We have been successful on both banks of the river Fecht in Alsace and our advance is being pressed forward on the north bank. On the south bank in the region of Schneefanrieth, we have made notable progress, our troops marching from south to north in the direction of Fecht and Metzerol, which is southwest of Colmar.

"In the course of this action we have captured a division of mountain artillery, two cannon of 74 milimetres calibre and two machine guns.

"The German aeroplanes which flew over Belfort recently dropped four bombs. Thes did some damage to two hangars and set fire to four chests of powder. No casualties reported nor was any serious damage done."

ROME, April 17.—Official communications received by the Italian Cabinet and statements made by Germans in official circles, have given the impression here that the German general staff has abandoned the plans for a general offensive movement on the French front, and has determined simply to maintain a defensive.

This information has caused a deep impression here that Germany has no hope of penetrating farther into French territory and is rapidly moving guns and troops eastward to the Carpathians front.

CITIES ARE FORTIFIED

LONDON, April 19.---"A reliable per son who has just arrived from Austria and Hungary," says the Times Bucharest correspondent, "declares that Vienna and Budapest, both are strongly fortified. On the left bank of the Danube Vienna is protected by long lines of trenches, barricades, and barbed wire entanglements. Fourteen million dollars have been spent on fortifications."

BERLIN GETS JULY 31, 1914, TELEGRAMS

BERLIN, April 18.---Considerable amusement was caused here to-day by the censors releasing a large number of foreign telegrams dated July 31 and August 1 last. The afternoon papers were able to announce Russia's order for a general mobilization and other ante-bellum news. Among the despatches released were a large number of American messages.

GREECE MAY END NEUTRALITY SOON

LONDON, April 18.---Ernest A. Hill, the Daily News correspondent, telegraphs: "Prince George of Greece returns to Paris to-morrow. His journey is thought to have a bearing on the political situation. The journal Hestia indicates that the government is now making overtures to relinquish neutrality. These overtures are understood to be well advanced."

AVIATOR CAPTURED

BERLIN, via wireless, April 19.---The war office issued an official announcement to-day that the noted French aviator Garros has been captured by the Germans. During the early days of the war he was reported to have rammed a Zeppelin and on several occasions has been commended for his great work in the flying corps.

Unearthed Three Hundred Dollars

Port Hope Boys Made an Interesting Discovery.

PORT HOPE, April 19.—Two young lads, Richard Richmond and Harry McGibbon, while playing about the yard at the rear of Richmond's bakeshop came across a gem jar which appeared to have a green lining. Curious to find out just what this lining was, the little fellows managed to take the top off and to their surprise and delight roll after roll of money fell out. The boys felt like real millionaires and after straightening it all out they found they were wealthier by about three hundred dollars. The money was turned over to the police and is now awaiting an owner.

Mrs. Wesley Bone, who lives near by, had been house-cleaning and remembers of throwing out some old gems very similar. If this prized jar came from Mr. Bone's residence, in all probability the money it contained was saved by his former wife. If the owner cannot be found, the money of course will return to the boys.

ENLISTED IN LINDSAY

Sergeant Murphy of the First Canadian Contingent and former member of "C" Company, Peterborough Rangers, has been invalided home. He arrived in Peterborough Saturday night, and when seen this morning, was inclined to be somewhat reticent Sergeant Murphy enlisted in Lindsay at the outbreak of the war. He remained with the contingent throughout its somewhat strenuous career at Salisbury and was injured some time after his arrival in France.

Sergeant Murphy was frequently with the Peterborough boys during their sojourn in camp. He speaks of them as a fine body of men, and states they were in fine fettle when he left.

Prior to enlisting Sergeant Murphy was employed in the Horn Woollen Mills, Lindsay. Previous to that he resided in Brantford, where he was a member of the Dufferin Rifles. During his association with the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, Sergeant Murphy had charge of a team that won the trophy in an athletic contest, including a tug of war. He was very popular with the members of the Regiment and his many friends will regret to hear of his misfortune.

Mr. S. T. Harris Receives a Signet Ring This Morning Before Leaving to Join Cobourg Heavy Battery at Halifax

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Mr. S. T. Harris, cashier of the Peterborough Radial Railway Co. for the past three years, received word last night to report to the Cobourg Heavy Battery at Halifax at once, for service overseas, and left this morning to join the battery, making another in the long list of Peterborough soldiers who have answered the Empire's call. Mr. Harris, who is a son of Captain Harris of the steamer Geneva, was presented with a beautiful signet ring, suitably engraved, by the employees of the Radial Railway Co. this morning, accompanied by the following address:

Peterborough, April 19th, 1915.

Dear Mr. Harris,—The employees of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company, having just learned that you are about to sever your connection with the Company, to join the C.E.F., feel that they cannot allow you to leave for the front without expressing to you their deep appreciation of your kindness to them during the past three years in your capacity as cashier for the Company. Your integrity and kind disposition has endeared you to one and all. We certainly appreciate the fact that one of our members is going forward to fight for the Empire of which we are so proud, and when peace and prosperity return to this our beloved country, we sincerely hope that you will be with us again. We would ask you to accept this ring as a small token of our esteem and friendship.

Signed on behalf of the employees,

J. McCann,
Superintendent P. R. R.

H. L. Best,
Superintendent, Gas Department.

German General Staff Issues Chart Showing Condition o Sun and Moon up to May 14 and Covering Conditions at Paris, London and Warsaw Which Indicates General Air "Invasion."

Special to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, April 19.---The German general staff issued a chart to-day showing conditions of the sun and moon from to-day up until May 14. It covers the expected conditions over Paris, London and Warsaw and was generally accepted as indicating the comencement of general aerial attacks against the allies.

WILL BE SENT TO PREMIER

OTTAWA, April 19.— The soldiers' vote bill, as finally amended by the Commons and the Senate, will be sent to Premier Asquith to-day for approval. Voting by Canadian soldiers in Europe and in the Bermudas cannot go on without the Kings' approval. While it is not believed that the British government will undertake to veto the Canadian measure, it is fully expected that Kitchener will be consulted as to whether voting in the trenches would be in the best interests of military discipline and efficiency.

TRAWLER SUNK

HULL, Eng., April 19.---The Grimsby trawler Vanilla was torpedoed and sunk with all hands by a German submarine on Sunday. The trawler Fermo tried to rescue the crew of the Vanilla but was driven off by the submarine's torpedoes.

CREW ARE LANDED

GRIMBSY, April 19.---The captain and 19 members of the Dutch steamer Olanda were landed here to-day by a port trawler. The Olanda struck a mine in the North Sea and sank with a cargo of coal.

VEGETABLES WERE GUNS

GENEVA, April 19.---As the result of a railway accident, Swiss custom officers discovered yesterday that a sealed car marked "vegetables" shipped from Genoa to Germany, was loaded with Maxim guns. There were also many cars of chemicals for the manufacture of shells. All were confiscated by the Swiss government.

NEW SUBMARINES

LONDON, April 19.---The Daily Mail's correspondent says that several new submarines will enter into the work of blockading England to-day. He adds that new submarines are being completed at the rate of two each week by Germany.

FOR GIVING CIGARETTES TO A FRENCHMAN A GERMAN IS COURTMARTIALED

PARIS, April 19.---A despatch to the Havas Agency from Basle, says:

"The Cologne Gazette reports the trial of a German at Weimar on a charge of having given three cigarettes to a French prisoner passing through the town. The Court sentenced the man to one day's imprisonment for 'lack of feeling for his nationality.' "

Real Estate Interest Is Showing Encouraging Signs

Mr. H. J. McCannon Believes Indications of Past Two Weeks Are Quite Promising

Interest in real estate is gradually developing. H. J. McCannan told the Examiner this morning that the past two weeks have been decidedly encouraging, and his experience leads to the opinion that business this summer should prove quite satisfactory. Last week he sold a house on Gilmour Street, one on Belivar, two on Elias Ave., one on Perry Street, a lot on Belivar and two lots on Alfred Street. The latter are on the west side of Alfred, and it is understood that the purchaser intends to erect two houses at once. There have been enquiries for five and ten-acre parcels adjacent to the city for market gardening, but there have been no recent turnovers.

Rev. Mr. Pogue's Condition Improving

A private note dated April 16th, from Rev. Robert Pogue, who is undergoing treatment at Clifton Spring's Sanitorium, states that he is improving rapidly." His many friends in the city will be pleased to learn this news regarding his condition.

MUST BE PROOF OF SINCERITY

Sir Robert Borden is given great credit for his speech made at the closing of Parliament in which he denounced "graft" in the provision of war supplies, and "named" two of the Conservative members in the ranks of his supporters and expressed "grave disapproval" of their conduct, a fact that under the circumstances amounts to exceedingly severe condemnation. While Sir Robert is to be given credit for boldly assuming a position of hostility to graft; and while he performed what is described as a "painful duty" in reprimanding his own followers; as a honourable man, the responsible head of the Government, he could no do other thing. The revelations of the Public Accounts Committee, which though it was mere surface digging — mere exploratory work—revealed conditions of "graft," robbery of the public treasury, and treason to our soldiers in the provision of defective personal supplies, that could not escape condemnation not only of the conditions, but of the persons guilty of creating the conditions.

But Sir Robert Borden is more deserving of credit for declaring that there must be thorough investigation, by a Royal commission; and he will be entitled to more than credit if he provides that this investigation be thorough and impartial. There is need of this, for it is evident that the revelations of the Public Accounts Committee, simply disclosed the symptoms of a deeply seated diseased condition that can only be exposed by thorough and deep probing. Sir Robert has shown courage in promising this investigation; he will show greater courage in resolutely carrying it out. We can only recognize the bona fides of his intention by results.

We can well doubt the honesty of his indignation against looters, and of his desire and intent of investigation, if he takes a course that will prevent investigation. If he yields to the clamour of the baser elements—the practical politicians—of his official entourage, and brings on a premature dissolution and general election, he will do wrong. This would not only put a stop to investigation, but would involve an appeal to the country on the record of a government, besmirched with uninvestigated charges and suspicions of the most serious character; for technically at least, the present Government is responsible for the rotten conditions, which Sir Robert declares demand the searchlight. Not only that but there are charges of corruption in connection with the administration of Western affairs by the late government. These charges should also be investigated; for there has been no investigation that can be recognized as satisfactory. We have only the fishing for scandal by a partizan Winnipeg lawyer, whose dictum is too partizan to be regarded with any degree of respect.

If Sir Robert is sincere in his desire to clean the Augean stables, he must not stop short of thorough investigation that will reveal the truth and dispel or confirm the suspicions of wrongdoing that have been so amply justified by the revelation of a few surface facts. The exposures before the Parliamentary committees, have created a wide feeling of popular uneasiness, and have cast a discredit upon the good name of Canada, that must be removed if possible; and the only way it can be removed if the thing is possible, is by a rigid investigation by a competent and impartial commission. It cannot be removed by the verdict of a general election, if the people vote in ignorance of the facts an investigation will expose; in that event they will vote as their partizanship dictates, and their verdict of approval of the Government will mean nothing as far as clearing away the cloud is concerned. Whitewashing by a partizan popular vote will be no more satisfactory and convincing than whitewashing by a partizan committee. We want the truth fairly and fully brought out; and if we are to not "go it blind" we must have the truth before we declare a general election. Sir Robert has done well so far in condemning corruption and demanding investigation; but he will forfeit all claim to credit if he fails to thoroughly implement his good intentions.

NEW LICENSE COMMISSION.

The names of the new License Commission—the substitute for the License Department—have been announced. It is too soon to consider the personnel of the new board, but reference may be made to one or two points. The chairmanship of the board is a matter of local interest because, the chairman virtually is a local man, Mr. J. D. Flavelle, of Lindsay. If Mr. Flavelle is of the same fibre as his brother, for a brief space, license commissioner of Toronto, he will have a chance perhaps to have his mettle tried. The Toronto Flavelle, J. W., with his fellow commissioners, accepted office on the understanding that he was to be immune from partizan government interference. This partizan interference came and he resigned his position. We shall see if the new chairman has the requisite supply of backbone; for, from force of habit, it will be hard for the Ontario Lecense Department to refrain from making party capital out of license administration. It may be that the commission will be strengthened by the presence upon it of Mr. W. S. Dingman, of Stratford, a newspaper man—prima facie evidence of capacity and breadth of outlook. But Mr. Dingman, unless he has recanted over Sunday, is a sceptic as to the wisdom of the large legislative powers of the irresponsible commission which he is to help operate. While he approves of the substitution of provincial for local commissioners, he doubts the wisdom of "delivering over to such a commission so much power as is proposed." Previous to his appointment — when the commission was proposed and its powers suggested, Mr. Dingman wrote in his paper, the Stratford Herald, as follows:

"The License Law so intimately touches the life of the people that we question the wisdom of delivering over to a provincitl commission anything savouring of legislative power or other than purely administrative power. But extensive powers of cancellation of licenses, differentiating of house in various localities, for cessation of sale and transfer to the new commission of pretty much the powers now exercised by the License Department, are proposed, if we understand the proposition aright. We doubt if it is wise to hand over so much power to any appointed body not directly responsible to the people. The Legislature should continue to make laws, and the new commission do only administrating."

We shall see whether the fears of one of the new commissioners — his dread of the power placed in his hands as a member of a powerful but, independent body—a part of an engine without the balance wheel of popular discipline—are justified or not. The commission is an experiment in substituing autocratic authority for government responsible to the people.

A SILLY EXCUSE.

After long consideration, the Hon. Robert Rogers has found an excuse for plunging the country into an election in the midst of the war. The Senate has amended a bill providing for the appointment of some additional Senators for the West. The amendment is to the effect that the change shall not come into affect until after the next election. According to Mr. Rogers, the people of Canada are wildly excited over these Western Senators and the Senate generally, and are asking "in tones louder than thunder" for an early election.

The excuse is worse than none. Not one man in a hundred was even thinking about the Senate until Mr. Rogers made his farcical speech. Not one man in a hundred cares whether there are any new Senators from the West now or at any future time. The West itself does not care. The new Senators will be of no more value to the West than a new carpet for the Senate chamber.

If Mr. Rogers wants to abolish the Senate, he will find plenty of people to agree with him.

But what the people are thinking of at present is not the Senate, but the war and the war graft. An early election will divide the people of Canada when they ought to be united in the common cause.—Toronto Star.

Junior Closing At The Y.W.C.A.

The junior department of the Y.W.C.A. held its closing on Saturday afternoon. Splendid work has been done by the children in the different classes during the year. Prizes were awarded for seeding and cooking.

237 children have been enrolled, with an aggregate attendance of 1,398. The work included gymnasium. Classes were also held in household science, which included; sweeping, dusting, table setting and bed-making, domestic science, sewing, darning, buttonholes, needle, books.

Three dozen scrap books were made by the junior class and will be sent to Dr. Grenfell's work at Labrador.

The work has been carried on by volunteer workers and members of the Girls' Auxiliary.

To enable a base ball pitcher to practice his curves without any help from another man a North Dakotan has patented a tubular casing so formed that it returns with considerable force a ball thrown into it.

Why Was Correspondence With The Manufacturers Concealed by Sir Robert Borden?

Why did the Prime Minister arrange for the prorogation of Parliament without first bringing down the war-graft correspondence between himself and the Executive of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association? That correspondence was called for again and again, and yet again, within the past four weeks. Parliament had a right to it. It is of intense public interest. Its interest is measured not only by its intrinsic merits, but also by the studied and persistent efforts of the Government to keep it secret. Why is it kept secret by the Prime Minister?

That correspondence, as known to other members of the Cabinet, deals very plainly and in interesting detail with important lines of war-graft not investigated and not even mentioned in the committees or before the House. A series of typical graft cases in several Provinces, and covering various types of exploitation by different orders of favoured "middlemen," are described. Names and places and dates are given. Circumstances are recited. Evidence both illuminating and condemnatory is outlined. It is all in the hands of the Prime Minister. Why was it not submitted to Parliament?

That correspondence dates back to the early days of the war-contract scandals. It presents facts. It appeals for investigation. It warns against delay. Why was it unheeded?

That correspondence, with its serious allegations and earnest admonitions, was in Sir Robert Borden's hands before he left for his golf vacation in the United States last autumn. During his absence it was properly in the custody of the acting Premier, Sir George Foster. More recently it engaged the serious consideration of the Prime Minister and more than one of his colleagues. During all the months of the scandal investigations it was kept secret from the investigating committee. Why?

A month ago the fact of such important correspondence was known to several members outside the Cabinet circle. It may be some Minister or some Minister's confidant talked too much. That is of no public importance. The fact was known that the Prime Minister had the correspondence, and he deemed secrecy the only prudent course. Why?

When Sir Robert Borden returned to Ottawa several weeks ago he was angry that "the cat was out of the bag." Sir George Foster's evasions revealed too much. Sir Robert Borden was very angry. Why?

The Prime Minister showed much embarrassment. His temper was very bad. He talked about the correspondence being "confidential." He professed willingness to lay it before Parliament if granted "permission." He needed no man's permission. Why did he not do it?

The correspondence was public, not private. It was between a public body and the Prime Minister. It dealt solely with matters of high and serious public moment. Weeks ago the Executive of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association declared publicly that "the Premier may publish it if he chooses." Why did Sir Robert Borden not choose to lay that very important correspondence before Parliament?

Is it not true that the publication of that correspondence might clash very harshly with the Prime Minister's grave-toned condemnation of Garland and Foster, and might contradict very emphatically, and utterly discount, all his own protestations about war-grafters and middlemen? Why was not his zeal for Governmental honesty, his condemnation of barefaced robbery, his respect for the doors of the penitentiary, and his enthusiasm for political purity as professed solemnly on Thursday — why did all fine qualities slumber through September and October? Had he heeded the warnings of his friends in the Manufacturers' Association then would two of his supporters in Parliament be accursed as war-graft scapegoats now? What did he make of those warnings? That is the people's question to the Premier.

Why?—Globe.

KODAK SAFETY F

Canadian Soldier at English Seaside Resort is Struck by Care-Free Attitude of Crowd

SHORNCLIFFE, April 14. — From Folkestone to France is but a short distance as aviators go. Mile on mile of the French coast line is visible from Folkestone's famous promenade on a clear day, and the fighting zone is not far removed from that same coast line, yet the Huns might be a million miles away if one can go by the pleasure-making in Folkestone.

Time was when Folkestone was the resort of week-end trippers. In their stead reigneth British and Canadian troops—billeted and in barracks. The storekeepers of Folkestone are handling more money nowadays than they ever did at the same time of the year prior to the war.

"The Leas" Folkestone's famous promenade, has as great a number of promenaders along its wide expanse as it can comfortably accommodate at nights and Sunday afternoons.

Mixed Gathering.

Belgian officers and refugees, French families and Folkestone families take the air there in company with the troops from overseas, and those recruited in the tight little, right little Isle, and Folkestone frolics as though the hell hounds of war were a lead as the Pharoahs.

Folkestone is a Mecca of merry-makers. Music halls, picture palaces, pierrots, piers and pavilions are all extensively patronized. Roller skating—to the music of a band—goes on night and day—and all those things are much appreciated by the khaki wearers, whether they be fresh from Canada or the mud-mired of Salisbury Plain.

To the north of Folkestone are the white cliffs of Dover, and jutting out into the Straits, the sea-wall of that same city.

Still Rules.

From "The Leas" one can see proof pastime —in the shape of ships that come and go—that Britannia still rules the waves. Now and then a saucy little torpedo boat comes dancing over the choppy sea, and cannot ma to the half-sheltered waters off Folkestone has fascinated many folks in peace time. It has done that —and more—to those who see it in war time. Only the "Never take a back seat" British Columbian dares say Canada has any place to compare with "The Leas" on the Atlantic or Pacific seaboard. Other Canadians are content to hope that some day Canada may have a seaside resort nearly half as charming.

From Shorncliffe to Folkestone is but a "Tupp'ny" bus ride—and the busses do a great business. The troops are attracted by many magnets, not the least of which is the ships that come and go as serenely as they would were German submarines as harmless as herrings.

Zeppelins might be as remote as Halley's comet for all the promenaders seem to care. The lights are lowered, say the town folk. If that be true, Folkestone must be one blaze of glorious light each night in peace time.

There was a rare old "carnival" at Folkestone the other night, and those who were present can count themselves lucky.

"Slackers" Absent.

That rarity in a garrison town, the young civilian slacker, was conspicuous by his absence. Had any of the clan been there they would have had, in soldier' perlance, "a rought passage."

It was a military night, and the young bloods of the Second Canadian Expeditionary Force had the time of their lives, while some of the old bloods of the First Contingent renewed their youth.

From Folkestone to Flanders is no great distance as aviators go. From landers to Folkestone is a long, long way for the Germans to travel, say those who help to make happiness at Folkestone.

Their care-free bearing proclaims that belief, aloud and the Canucks who have seen and felt that faith will fight none the less sternly because they have been privileged to share in the frolics of Folkestone.

What Goodyear Means

An Unusual Story of a Canadian Industrial

How it grew from a small room to a large plant. Four-man pay-roll is increased to 800-man pay-roll in five years. An investment of a few hundred dollars grows to one of millions.

THIS is not a story of self praise. Modesty prevents us from claiming all we could. But we do believe men are interested in success stories such as this. We are but one of the innumerable industries that have struggled up from small beginnings. Today we hold an enviable position in the Canadian manufacturing world.

We won this place through five years of business evolution. We submit to you here the story, not of ourselves, but of Goodyear products.

We think you will agree when you read this, that there is scarcely a business story in Canada more interesting and human.

When four Goodyear employes worked together in a little 30 x 60 foot room at 85 Queen Street, East, Toronto, in 1910, little did they realize how quickly that small space would be magnified over 70 times.

They knew business would grow. They had faith in themselves and in their product. They saw the tremendous possibilities in the Canadian rubber demand. They would build here at home an industry to meet that demand.

Today the big factory at Bowmanville, the six-story General Office building in Toronto and the ten Branch Offices throughout Canada have proved their fondest hopes

The public confidence in Goodyear products has made possible this Goodyear growth from small beginnings. See what this growth has meant. The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Canada, Limited, has over two million dollars invested in Canadian property and Canadian factory equipment. For the products that we sell you are made in our own factory at Bowmanville, Ontario, by Canadian workmen. Our pay-roll for these workmen must be one of the largest in the Dominion.

The Bowmanville Plant

In the latter part of 1910, we purchased the plant of the Durham Rubber Company at Bowmanville, Ontario. The total floor space was 40,150 square feet. New buildings were erected. New machinery installed. About 70 men were employed. The capacity was 25 automobile tires per

Today the plant is set in a tract of 35 acres, and has a floor space of 116,884 square feet. The pay-roll has reached a maximum of 718 employes. The maximum capacity is 1000 tires per day. The factory is completely equipped with the most modern machinery for the manufacturing of Automobile, Truck, Motorcycle, Bicycle and Carriage Tires, Hose, Belting, Packing, Moulded Goods, etc. Over 500 different kinds of articles can be made.

This Service, Too, Is Yours

But Goodyear obligation does not end when we sell a Goodyear product. It begins there.

There are ten branch offices, located in Montreal, St. Johns, Ottawa, Hamilton, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver and Toronto, with 127 Goodyear employes to assist our dealers in satisfying your wants. For only in this way are you insured of proper service.

There are hundreds of Goodyear dealers throughout Canada. No matter where you are, you know that not far away is a Goodyear dealer. This means quick deliveries—no delays, no inconvenience.

Third Reduction in Automobile Tire Prices

For the third time in less than two years, the price of Goodyear Tires has been reduced. These have saved the user in all an average of 37%. And now this third reduction during war times!

This price reduction, effective February 15th, in face of the new war tax, showed the company's determination to keep the factory wheels moving. The capacity of the plant has been doubled.

To so enlarge the plant—to reduce the price—to pay the war tax itself—that is the Goodyear Company's expression of faith, not merely in its product, but in the judgment of the people. The response by the public—as already felt—has justified these progressive moves.

Throughout the Dominion the number of satisfied users is rapidly increasing. The sales last year were 29% greater than the year before.

These statements are not offered as boasts, but to justify the reduced prices—to explain why the Company will pay the war tax—to show how the user will benefit by getting greater tire value than ever before. Goodyears stand top-high in quality. This has been the verdict of Canadian users, attested by Goodyear sales records.

Goodyear Fortified Tires combat in five exclusive ways the chief troubles that you have with tires. Goodyears hold top place because they give lowest cost per mile.

Goodyear policy toward employes does not stop at good wages and good factory conditions — but embraces practical outside welfare work.

The Goodyear Company believes that however perfect are factory conditions, it owes its employes even more. That is why the Company itself has erected about 60 modern and attractive brick cottages, electric lighted, with hot and cold water. They are occupied by employes at a fair rental.

The basis for selection of employes is efficiency—not race, [illegible]. The Goodyear Club is the social Centre for all employes. Here also single men may room and board at reasonable rates. There is health, happiness and content—which are so essential in complete efficiency.

Every buyer of Goodyear products benefits by this practical system of welfare work—for it is part of the quality bought, part of the satisfaction resulting.

Fortified Tires

In five costly ways—ways that no other maker has—Goodyears are fortified against all major tire troubles. That's why they average best.

Here are the five reasons why every Canadian motorist should have Goodyear Fortified Tires. These features can be found in Goodyears alone.

1. No-Rim-Cut feature combats rim-cutting in best way known.
2. Countless blowouts are avoided by our "On-Air" cure.
3. Loose treads are combated by forming in each tire hundreds of large rubber rivets.
4. Security against blowing off the rim and tube pinching, gained by vulcanizing six flat-bands of 126 braided piano wires into each tire base.
5. The All-Weather tread combats puncture by being tough and thick. It resists skidding as no other tire does by its sharp-edged, bulldog grip.

These are the reasons why Goodyear Fortified Tires excel all other makes. Every tire trouble brings you nearer to Goodyears. They have averaged best in every Province.

GOODYEAR MADE IN CANADA

Right Inner Tubes

Goodyear Laminated Tubes are built layer on layer. This prevents leaky tubes due to porous rubber. Records show that tubes built in the Goodyear way outlast any tire. Four tubes outlast five casings.

This year Goodyear Inner Tubes are better than ever before. Small sizes have been thickened 12½%. Large sizes 16⅔%. Yet they are built of pure rubber, as always. Tubes that weigh more than Goodyears gain nothing in durability. Size for size, heavier tubes owe their weight to excess mineral matter, causing hardening and cracking.

This means that today's tubes average 14 per cent better—yet the price is one-fifth less.

Economy for Truck Owners

For many years Goodyear engineers have been developing truck tires. Thousands of dollars have been spent in tests and investigations.

In all, twenty-nine distinct types of Truck Tires have been designed. In the evolution of one alone seventy-four separate tire structures were built.

It will take some makers years to do what Goodyear experts have done in truck tire development; 1915 Goodyear truck tires inspire a confidence that others cannot give.

Goodyear Motorcycle Tires Give Extra Mileage

Men thought no better motorcycle tires than Goodyears could be made. They won and held top place. Yet the Goodyear Company have made this year six further improvements without increasing prices. The popularity of Goodyear Motorcycle Tires must be greater this year than ever before. For these new features come in spite of lowered cost to you.

"Blue Streak" Bicycle Tires Built for Rough Going

Goodyear "Blue Streak" Bicycle Tires are made in the same factory, by the same experts who make the Fortified Automobile Tires. They are smaller, of course, but the same high standard of workmanship goes into every bicycle tire we make.

Goodyear Mechanical Goods

The Goodyear plant at Bowmanville does not make tires alone. We manufacture Mechanical Goods for factories, mills and power houses.

Belts of every kind, transmission and conveyor, are made for each particular Canadian industry—saw mills, brick yards, elevators, paper mills, power plants, mines—all the foremost industries.

We make specific belts for specific machines—it's the only way to buy belting. Then you know you are getting the belt that will deliver the power all the time. Buying belting this way decreases shut-down losses, lost time, lost labor, lost product.

Hose—from the common garden variety to fire hose—is made by the mile.

When you see rubber goods, note the name Goodyear made-in-Canada products are part of every-day life, filling an urgent need here, giving pleasure there, turning the great wheels of commerce, or protecting lives and property.

Hardly a day passes but that every man, woman and child, wherever located, feels Goodyear influence in some way or other.

Try Goodyear

This is our story of Goodyear. It was not written directly to sell you Goodyear products, for they must sell themselves. What we want is just a hearing. We have told you of our small beginning here in Canada. Of our first factory, and its growth at Bowmanville. We have told you somewhat of Goodyear products and their record.

We want you to buy tires and mechanical goods from The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company of Canada, Limited not alone because they are made in Canada—not because our efforts alone have been commendable.

We want you to buy Goodyear products because of their inbuilt superiority. Because you get greatest service, dollar for dollar that you spend.

"HOMEMADE GOODS"

Why send afar to Troy or Rome,
For Sunday hats or bales of hay?
Let's buy the goods we make at home
And show we're patriots that way!
The giant vessels sail the deep,
And bring us doodads made abroad.
We buy such traps and fail to keep
Our money on our native sod.
Those ships take back our hard-earned cash
To pay the freight for Europe's kings;
To pay for battled succotash
And stuff we grow at home, by jings!
My wife's new lid was made in France,
And 'tis a phony thing indeed;
The broadcloth in my Sunday pants
Was manufactured by Tweed.
The sauce the grocer sent to-day
Was brought from London in a crate;
It costs like blitzen—I must pay
The duty added to the freight.
We sing our patriotic songs
And boost the flag and seldom cease;
But when we want gargoyles or gongs
We ship them in from Southern Greece.

BLOOD THIN AND WEAK TOO NERVOUS TO SLEEP

Here is Another Case in Which Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Proved Its Great Reconstructive Influence

Thin blood and exhausted nerves usually go together. A considerable portion of the blood is constantly consumed in keeping up the vitality of the nervous system. Once the blood is deficient, either in quantity or quality, the nerves suffer and bodily pains result. Headaches, neuralgic or sciatic pains are the indications in some cases, while in others weakness, nervousness, irritability and sleeplessness are the most marked symptoms.

Mrs. R. F. Catlin, Elm Springs, Sask., writes: "For years I was troubles with nervousness, and could not sleep nights. Also had lack of colour as a result of the blood being thin and weak. My husband saw Dr. Chase's Nerve Food advertised, and got some for me, and wanted me to try it. I did so, and it has proven a wonderful help for me. By enriching the blood, it has restored colour to my face and has built up the nervous system so that I rest and sleep well. It is a pleasure to recommend so excellent a medicine."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food goes direct to the formation of pure, rich blood, and for this reason is the most certain means of increasing the quality as well as the quantity of blood in the human system. The feeble, wasted nerves are restored, and through the nervous system new vigor and energy is imparted to every organ and member of the body.

You will be surprised at the way this food cure puts new strength and vitality into the weakened body. And the best of it is that the benefits are both thorough and lasting. In this the Nerve Food differs from mere stimulating medicines which give rise to false hope and when discontinued leave you as weak as before. Put this great restorative treatment to the test and prove its merits in your own cases. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.50. All dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

To Have Greatest Submarine Most Powerful of Its Kind

The submarine Schley, which is to be built at once by the Electric Boat Company at Groton, Conn., will be by far the most interesting and the most dreaded of all submarines, and in its design and construction the naval architects have taken big strides. Up to date, the largest submarine, as far as can be learned, that is building under 200 feet in length. This is the class F of the British, which has not yet made its appearance unless it has been commissioned recently and is being used secretly. The boats of this class are to have a surface speed of 20 knots. The largest of the German boats are of 800 tons displacement with a cruising radius of 2,000 miles and make, so it is planned, 18 knots on the surface and seven knots submerged.

The Schley is to be of the Holland or daving type. It will displace approximately 1,100 tons on the surface and much more when submerged. The length will be 265 feet over all, or about 65 feet longer than any submarine now projected by any European power. This craft is to be driven by Niseco Diesel oil engines which will develop 400 horse-power, and these engines will enable the craft to maintain a speed at the surface of 20 nautical miles an hour. When submerged the vessel will be driven by electric motors, and will then make 11 nautical miles an hour.

The cruising speed of the Schley will be from 11 to 15 nautical miles an hour, and at these speeds it will have a cruising radius of 7,000 miles. That is, it will have sufficient fuel capacity to enable it to cruise across the Atlantic and back again without replenishing its fuel oil. This is an advantage that no other submarine at present projected has, and will make the Schley the most destructive vessel of its kind ever built.

With its speed it will be exceedingly difficult for any vessel to avoid its attack, as merchant ships are able to do in many cases with the present German submarines.

It has been suggested that this vessel, instead of using heavy oil engines, should be fitted with steam power using the high speed turbine; but this idea was not practical for a vessel of this kind if steam were used it would take from 30 to 40 minutes to prepare the vessel for diving. With an internal combination engine the diving is to be done instantly, because when the motor is shut off there are no fires to draw or bank, no boilers to cool; and again when the vessel comes to the surface the oil motors can be started instantly. From a military point of view it has been decided that vessels of this type will prove very inefficient.

There will in all probability be a class in the United States navy of these fast submarines, and the one now building is only the first.

From a military point of view the Schley will be of enormous value in both offensive and defensive service. The boat will have considerable freeboard to make it seaworthy under all conditions in the open sea. It will have an elevated bridge in addition to a conning tower, and this will make it practically a small gunboat when used on the surface. It will carry a number of guns of small caliber and machine guns, and, in addition will be fitted with 10 torpedo tubes. These tubes will be arranged to discharge torpedoes at all angles, and it will not be necessary to manoeuvre the vessel into some certain position to send forth its weapon of destruction, but it will be able to discharge ahead, broadside and astern.

The interior of the vessel, too, will be more like that of the war-ship of her size. She will have comfortable quarters for officers and men; be heated, well stored with fresh air, and carry supplies that will last for a lengthy cruise. It is expected that the Schley will be ready for service next year, and work will be rushed as fast as possible to get her out early. The cost of the Schley be $1,350,000.—New York Sun.

Garibaldi, Home Life Ideal, Hero Proud of Wife

LONDON, April 14—General Garibaldi, the Italian patriot, has two overshadowing ideals. His life is tuned to two great themes. One is the Garibaldi tradition, the other is his wife.

Mrs. Garibaldi is a sweet-faced Venetian woman of perhaps sixty-five years, who has nursed dying men on nearly all of her husband's thirty-two battlefields, and the mother of ten children.

Garibaldi is just now engaged in fighting with the Allies against Germany and Austria. He took three thousand red-shirted men into the field, and to date one thousand of them, including two of his own sons, have been killed. Now the General is in London raising funds to equip a legion of forty thousand. Incidentally he is telling some high British officials wherein he thinks their method of campaigning is wrong and it may be added that the doors of Downing Street are open to him.

Had a "Good Talk"

I have made two calls on the Garibaldis at their hotel, the first a perfunctory visit and the second in response to an invitation to come this Sunday morning that we might have a good talk."

To-day I found the General seated before a great pile of letters and notes, carefully replying to each one. They were some of the three thousand messages of sympathy that have been sent to the couple since the death of their two sons.

"This is a bothersome task," the General explained, "but they are all good folks and their sympathy is sincere. One cannot deal with such people through a secretary."

Mrs. Garibaldi, a little woman in black, was devotedly unwrapping and arranging huge bouquets of flowers.

Garibaldi is well past seventy years now, but in spite of his patriarchal beard and a rheumatic limp that necessitates crutches, he is sturdy as an oak. He has a grip of iron and eyes that sparkle. I marvelled at his physique and good humour after so many bloody years.

Wounded Four Times.

"Very simple," he assured me. "I think luck must have had something to do with my physical well being. I have only been wounded four times, and had only two horses shot under me. As to my good humour, you must give my wife credit for that. This dear child (as he reached across the table to pat Mrs. Garibaldi's head) has been with me always, everywhere. And such a busy person! In war she is on the field, nursing the wounded and doing a thousand other things. In peace she still nurses at her little hospital up in the hills outside of Rome.

"Yes," assented Mrs. Garibaldi, "I follow you over the world, you killing while I cure."

"I tell you," concluded the General "the Mohammedans had the correct theory. They used to believe that human beings were made on the principle of a great pile of huge cheeses placed on the top of a hill, cut in two and then rolled to the bottom. Then to make one wholesome cheese each half must find the other half from which it was cut. I was lucky and found mine early."

AUSTRIAN STATESMEN MEET GREY AND PAU IN ROME

Significant Conference Has Just Ended in Italian Capital and Belief Is Expressed That Dual Monarchy Is Preparing to Break Away From Alliance With Germany—Anti-War Riots.

LONDON, April 19.—A letter from a correspondent in Rome says:

"The first great peace conference of the war has just been concluded here. How much was accomplished, if anything, cannot now be stated; such elaborate measures to preserve secrecy have been adopted that it is doubtful even if this letter will get through.

"The great significant fact is that Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, came to Rome to take part in this peace conference, arriving here on April 6; that Gen. Pau, the distinguished French commander who has been making a triumphant tour in Russia and the Balkan countries, arrived here April 8 to attend the meeting on behalf of France, and that while here these two representatives of the allies met three prominent Austro Hungarian statesmen and an important delegation from Russia.

"It is public knowledge that at the same time two very prominent Turks, Carasso Effendi and Miahat Chucry Bey, made it convenient to be here. These Turkish leaders took a prominent part in the preliminary negotiations for peace in the Turco-Italian war, and although they deny publicly that they are now here on such business, the impression is strong that the sudden gathering of world-famous diplomats cannot be explained in any other way than as a preliminary discussion looking to a separate peace for Austria."

Travelers from the interior of Austria bring reports of increasing unrest, resulting from the insufficiency of the bread allowance, which, although it has been increased, still is considered inadequate. Demonstrations against the war are said to be increasing in number and violence, especially in Vienna, and at points in Bohemia, where mobs are reported to have sacked storehouses in which were stocks of provisions for the army.

J. D. Flavelle of Lindsay is Chairman of License Board

W. S. Dingman, of Stratford, is Vice-Chairman, Fred Dane, George T Smith and John A. Ayearst, Commissioners—Existing Board Will Issue Licenses for the Current Year

TORONTO April 19.—Before leaving the city last night Premier Hearst announced the personnel of the new Provincial Board of License Commissioners which is to supersede the [illegible] Boards in as many districts in the province. Following are the members of the new board selected by the Premier himself: J. D. Flaville, Lindsay, chairman; W. S. Dingman, Stratford, vice-chairman; Frederick Dane, Toronto, commissioner; George T. Smith, Haileybury, commissioner, and John A. Ayearst, Toronto, commissioner.

This announcement coming within two weeks of the prorogation of the Legislature shows that the Government has lost no time in having the effects of the new legislation made available. A proclamation has been issued bringing the whole act into operation on May 5th next. By that time the existing license boards will have completed the issuing of licenses for the coming license year which starts on May 1st, and the new board will at once take charge of the administration of the law and proceed to reorganize the system as outlined by Premier Hearst and Hon. W. J. Hanna on the debate in the Legislature.

The salaries to be paid to the members of the board will be as follows: Chairman, $6,500; vice-chairman, $6,000; commissioners, $4,000 each.

Mr. J. D. Flavelle, chairman, is a well-known merchant in Lindsay, and brother of Mr. J. W. Flavelle of the Canadian Bank of Commerce and other large financial institutions. He was born at Peterborough in 1850 and has been engaged in business in Lindsay since 1864. He is identified with a number of public undertakings, in 1905 was appointed to the Dominion Grain Survey Board, and is a councillor of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and is widely-known as a devotee of amateur sport.

Mr. W. S. Dingman, vice-chairman, is known throughout Canada as an entertaining journalist. At different times he has been connected with The Strathroy Despatch, Port Arthur Daily Sentinel, and latterly, along with his brother, has owned and edited The Stratford Herald. In 1899 he was president of the Canadian Press Association, and all through his life has maintained a sympathetic attitude towards temperance questions. He was born in 1858.

Mr. Frederick Dane was born at Belfast, Ireland, in 1861 and came to Canada in 1880. For many years he was a grocery importer in Toronto and in 1906 was appointed a member of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission and subsequently became Land Commissioner. He resigned to accept the post of Canadian Commercial Agent at Glasgow, Scotland. He is a prominent Orangeman, and at one time was president of the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society.

Mr. George T. Smith is mining recorder at Haileybury and knows the conditions in that country intimately. His advice in connection with the administration of the law in the newer districts will be of great usefulness.

Mr. John A. Ayearst has a reputation as an efficient officer in the Liquor License Branch. Through his efforts much of the irregularities that used to exist have been stamped out. His work in Ontario drew recognition from the West where he went for a year, but came back after a while to this province to give more useful service.

ELLIOT'S

Proud of Their Uniforms

By W. A. Murton of the Toronto Telegram

KINGSTON, April 16.— So many boys are joining up with the colours that a khaki suit is the order of the day. Well, the first thing you notice is that you don't have to pull the blamed pants up at the knee whenever you sit down on a chair. You let the knees bag out as much as they please. Recruits have great trouble at first with the puttees, and the late riser in the barracks curses in soft and brand new oaths the man who first invented them.

Startling Change.

But once he gets the King's uniform on, and begins drilling and working out in the open air, a change creeps over the former office boy. From the Robert N. Chambers chevalier to the Jack London hero is a change which is perfectly dazzling in its suddenness.

You walk along the street with your eyes looking into those of each one you meet as they never looked before. You are proud of your uniform. You are more serious, perhaps a bit touchy at sneerers, but you feel like smashing them across the face with your swagger whip, and then explaining afterwards.

Are Now Weatherbeaten.

The boys from Toronto who joined the 28th Battery, now quartered in Kingston, have all changed somewhat in their few weeks of training. The fresh air, sunshine and rain, has blossomed them forth as the hand of nature touches up the flowers themselves.

One boy is only voicing the opinion of many, who remarked: "I would rather drive a team, go prospecting, or anything else to be out in this God's fresh air, than work in a bank again when the war is over."

Socialism Personified.

The boys get all about the same pay. The money question raises little thought so long as they get their allowance with regularity. The stern reality is made doubly real that there is something far above money to live for in this world. The man who puts an extra charge on an article because a soldier is buying it, is perhaps only [illegible] such a man is scorned, and cursed, and trampled in the dust, stamped with the brand of ignominy in the superlative, and ostracised from the hearts of men.

"Keep sober, boys," if not a spoken phrase, is likely to become one among the soldiers. The man who wanders into the crowded barracks filled with barleycorn receives the whole-hearted condemnation of all his fellows. He makes himself a nuisance both to his near friends and to the officers themselves. An officer is only a human being in the King's uniform. He likes to see his men pass in review without a flaw, and he like to see them keep straight and brace up the good name of the battery.

Value of Being Serious.

And one of the great virtues which gradually creeps into many men at this time, and in this life of things military is that of veneration. It is not the officer which brings the soldier's hand to his cap in smart salute. It is the uniform which he bears. It is its representation of the British Empire, from which we have all sprung, and shall we then disown our own parents; and more than this our own guardians, and "our help in ages past?"

The soldier may languish in the popular imagination as being the possessor of every vice that is attainable. But veneration they do have, and that is not a vice. It is the back ground of religion and its lack makes countries neutral. Maybe these are little things for a man with much intelligence, for one able to philosophize. But it is the little things that count, as the grains of sand make up the desert, and it is only men with real hearts in their chests that go down in the ships at sea, that fight in retreats like "Mons," that go back to the sane man's logic with a query which is answered in the words, "Fight and get what you want or die in the attempt."

W. A. MURTON.

Dernburg Did Not Want a World Empire

PORTLAND, Me., April 19. — A letter from Dr. Bernhard Dernburg, former Colonial Secretary of the German Empire, was read at a mass meeting here Saturday night, in which the German ides of permanent peace was set forth. Dr. Dernburg wrote, in part:

"I can with full authority disclaim any ambition for my country for world dominion. She is much too modest on the one hand and too experienced on the other not to know that such a state will never be tolerated by the rest. The aim of Germany is to have the seas, as well as the narrows kept permanently open for the free use of all nations in times of war as well as in times of peace.

DR. BERNHARD DERNBURG.

"Germany does not strive for territorial aggrandizement in Europe; she does not believe in conquering and subjugating unwilling nations. Belgium commands the main outlet of western German trade, is the natural foreland of the empire, and has been conquered with untold sacrifice of blood and treasure. It offers to German trade tho only outlet to an open sea, and has been politically established, maintained and defended by England in order to keep these natural advantages from Germany."

Voice of The People

Editor of Examiner:

Sir,— At the Board of Works meeting, Alderman Stratton had the temerity to call the attention of is members to the numerous complaints of the merchants and others regarding the dust nuisance from which they had suffered. After some more discussion it was decided "to look into the question for a more adequate means of watering the paved streets" only, and the matter was again left over for further consideration by another committee sine die. As a matter of business, this question should have been decided two months ago and everything should have been in readiness by the first of March to cope with the nuisance at its first appearance. Now that the ball is only started a rolling, it will probably be two months more before their embryo scheme will be brought into full working order. For their delinquency, City Engineer Parsons vouchsafed the silly excuse that it would be impossible to water the streets now on account of the frost freezing the water. Is that not the limit? No, I thing that Aledrman Edgar as a humourist can beat him. He thought the streets ought to be flushed by the firemen. Just imagine the noble fire brigade being turned into full flushers. That would be infra dig for Chief Howard. Alderman Green objected to the proposal on the ground that it would be detrimental to the duties of the fire-fighters, whereupon Alderman Edgar suggested that the firemen should trail after them the entire fire outfit, consisting of horses, waggons, hose, etc., while the flushing was going on, and in case of a fire alarm, they should climb aboard and proceed to the fire. With the street thus blockaded, and the poor horses standing around and starving with nothing to do but switch away the pestiferous blue tail fly the ludicrous sight might occasionally be relieved by the fire alarm. Posing as an economist, the visionary alderman would have to provide some cheap uniform for the flushers, as the firemen's uniform would be too expensive for such menial labour. In case that sticks him, I will give him a tip. No doubt he would be able to borrow enough uniform suits from Castle Nesbitt to go around, and thus show his consistency. One would suppose, to hear the aldermanic talk, that our handful of shop-keepers are the only sufferers from the dust, and that only as it affects their goods; but it affects everybody, and that, too, in a worse manner, that of their health, if not of their life, which has been dinned into our ears by the best medical authorities all these years. The discussion seems to be confined to the small area that is paved, where the dust is less harmful than beyond those limits. If our Council had been forced to march along George Street between McDonnel and Smith streets for one hour on Thursday they would have been rudely awakened to a sense of their duty. But why awaken them. Let the dead and beautiful rest.

Yours truly,
One of the Many.

April 17th, 1915.

THE LAST TWILIGHT MUSICALE

The last of the series of delightful twilight musicales that have been held monthly at the Conservatory Hall, took place on Saturday afternoon, quite a large number attending. These musical treats on the second Saturday of each month, have been a source of great pleasure to local music lovers, and the large attendance at these affairs is a tribute to their popularity. Selections are always given by the Conservatory orchestra, under the direction of Mr. R. Gliddon. On these occasions the orchestra is assisted by many of the best known local vocalists and entertainers, making the programmes attractive and very enjoyable.

On Saturday last, the orchestra, while not present in full numbers, rendered Paderewski's minuet and the overture "Lispiel" in splendid form, receiving well merited applause. Mr. Maurice Park's splendid voice was heard to splendid advantage in his sympathetic rendition of "Mavis." His encore number, "The Land of the Sky Blue Water" was also well received.

Mr. Weller contributed greatly to the pleasure of the musicale by his singing. His powerful baritone was first heard in 'Down in the Deep,' and in response to an insistent encore he sang with much feeling and expression "My Rosary."

Mr. George Lynch, whose readings are always accorded such enthusiastic receptions, excelled himself on Saturday last in two of Dr. Drummond's poems, and in response to repeated applause, he gave a very humorous selection, entitled, 'An Englishman's View of Life."

Other numbers that afforded great pleasure was a violin duet by Misses Palmer and Logan and a trombone solo by Mr. Gilbert.

The closing concert by the Conservatory orchestra will be held on Monday evening, May 10th.

TEACHERS' GUILD HAVE MUSICALE

Delightful Function at King George School, on Saturday Afternoon

The ladies of the Peterborough Women Teachers' Guild were the hostesses of a charming musicale on Saturday afternoon last at the King George School, Ashburnham. Quite a large number was present, and altogether a very enjoyable time was spent. A choice programme of vocal and instrumental number was given, at the conclusion of which dainty refreshments were served at small tables, very prettily arranged. One of the features of the affair was a report by Miss O'Connell, who was a delegate to the Ontario Teachers' Convention recently held in Toronto. In the course of her remarks, Miss O'Connell stated that Peterborough's Women Teachers' Guild was much in advance of similar associations in other places, in the accomplishment of various enterprises.

Those contributing the musical programme on this occasion were: Miss B. Read and Miss Voaden, who gave a splendidly executed pianoforte duet; Miss Sophie Elliott, who contributed a piano solo, and Messrs. R. F. Downey and Maurice Park, vocalists.

Mr. Downey's rich, powerful voice was heard to advantage in his singing of "British to the Core," while Mr. Park's clear tenor voice of much sweetness and purity of tone, delighted all present, in two well rendered numbers. Messrs. Downey and Park also gave a duet that was thoroughly enjoyed.

The New Pastor Delivers A Very Inspiring Message

To the Congregation of Park Street Baptist Church—Yesterday's Services Were Well Attended

A NEW PASTORATE

Park Street church was well filled both morning and evening yesterday and appreciative audiences listened to two splendid sermons by the new pastor, Rev. Dougald Brown. Mr. Brown is a man in middle life and in appearance on the platform reminds one somewhat of William Jennings Bryan. Like Bryan, too, he has a sonorous bass voice which during the course of a sermon varies frequently from a whisper to a thundering shout. His gestures are simple and he performs no Billy Sunday athletic stunts, but they are very finished and none the less expressive of what he has to say. He makes a very strong appeal and his exhortations to conversion and better living are gripping in their intensity and wonderfully effective. In the morning his sermon was a message to the church to establish again the Ark of the New Covenant, Jesus Christ, even as David established again the Ark of the Old Covenant. He considered the beginning of a new pastorate a critical period in the history of any church and strongly urged the congregation to unite with him in setting up afresh in the church an altar to the living God and in sanctifying themselves afresh by establishing Christ in their midst as their Saviour and Leader. In the evening he took his text from Genesis, 19-17, where Lot is warned by the angels to flee from Sodom to the mountains because of the imminent destruction to that city of iniquity. With this as a setting for his sermon he made a powerful appeal to his hearers to surrender a life of sin which must lead to destruction and go up to the mountain of safety which God has provided in the person of his Son Jesus Christ. After yesterday's services the general impression was that Mr. Brown will be one of the strongest preachers of the city and the Park Street people look forward to a most successful pastorate. Deacon Harding, of Murray Street Baptist church, assisted Mr. Brown in the evening service and special music was rendered by the Park Street male quartette. Mr. Brown will settle in the city the second Sunday in May.

NO DOUBT OF AN ELECTION

OTTAWA, April 19.—The Cabinet is awaiting the return of Hon. Robert Rogers from the West and of several other ministers who have taken a few days off before deciding definitely the programme for the coming summer. That there will be an election is no longer doubted, the date is the only thing hanging in a balance.

It is stated Mr. Rogers is looking over the whole western situation. On his report much depends.

A guage to be fastened to the head of an axe has been patented to permit that tool to be sharpened with a file as accurately and with less labor than with a grindstone.

CONDOLING MESSAGES

Lt.-Col. Preston and the Peterboro' Non-Coms. Express Regret at the Death of Pte. Harry Nicholls

Mr. Daniel T. Nicholls, 2 Anson Street, has received two messages of condolence from the 39th Battalion at Belleville, sympathizing with him in his bereavement in the death of his son, Pte. Harry Nicholls. One of these came from Lt.-Col. Preston, the officer commanding the 39th Battalion, and the other from the Peterborough boys at Belleville.

Belleville, April 16, 1915.

Dear Sir,—Permit me on behalf of myself, and the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., to convey to you our sincere sympathy on the occasion of the death of your son, our comrade, the late Pte. Harry Nicholls.

We regret that he was not spared to prove his mettle and bring you honour on the firing line, but he has done his duty just as faithfully as if he had reached the front, and his name should be held in grateful remembrance by all his friends as well as the country for which he died.

With sincerest sympathy, I am,

Yours faithfully,

J. A. PRESTON,
Lt.-Col.
Commanding 39th Battalion, C.E.F.

From Peterborough Boys.

Belleville, April 16, 1915.

Mr. Daniel T. Nicholls,
2 Anson Street,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—On behalf of the members of the 57th detachment, 39th Battalion, C.E.F., we wish to convey to yourself and Mrs. Nicholls our deepest sympathy in the loss you have sustained of your son Harry.

He was a general favourite with us and we will all miss him.

Hoping you will both find consolation in the fact that your son died when on duty for his King and country, and that time will heal your great sorrow.

On behalf of all the members of the Peterborough Rangers, we are, sir,

Yours respectfully,

SERGT. H. WILFORD.
SERGT. H. DODDS.
SERGT. R. W. A. STEVENS.
SERGT. H. BARRETT.

Negro in Georgia Is Turning White

Doctors Cannot Account for Bleaching of Skin

The arms and part of the body of a negro living near Atlanta, Ga., in Wheeler county, have turned white. The brown colouring of his face is growing lighter and around his nose and his eyes are distinct white lines. His nails are pink and the skin of his hands is indistinguishable from that of a white man. His lips also have assumed a roy hue.

Doctors at Alamo have examined the negro and say that he is suffering from no disease. They cannot account for the bleaching of his skin. In their experience it is an unheard-of phenomenon.

The negro's name is Jim Allen, he is about 25 years old and he owns a farm near Alamo. Fifteen years ago the colour of his skin began to change, and each year has grown a shade lighter. It is said now he is over one-half white.

Before the bleaching of his skin began he was dark brown in colour—not a mulatto, but of lighter colouring than the usual negro. First his hands began to change, then his arms and body, and now his face. On his arms remain small brown splotches, but except for these his skin from his shoulders to his finger tips is perfectly white.

He is married and has several children, but they have shown no disposition to turn white. The man himself is strong and hearty, works his farm, and shows no signs of sickness.

But negroes near Alamo are afraid of him. They say he has been bewitched.—Atlanta Journal.

LIFE IN AN AFRICAN CITY

Khartoum a City of 1000 White Inhabitants

When Kitchener had fought his way to the forks of the Nile, he found Khartoum was just like any other Soudanese village a handful of mud huts with fat-tailed sheep staked outside. Like cans in a rack stood the date wees, sometimes growing through the mud roofs themselves, but everywhere, in front of every mud hut, was the fat-tailed sheep. To-day Khartoum is a city of 1000 white inhabitants who send to London for their clothes and have standing orders for all the latest musical records. Even though it is a city of motor cars and bicycles, Khartoum is still an Egyptian town. The streets lit sprawling and baking in the Soudan sun. At noon it is the deserted village; there is nothing stirring. A native lies across a cool stone in a doorway, his face covered with a thick, dirty cloth to keep away the flies, while his bare toes stick straight to heaven. As long as his face is his own the flies are welcome to the rest. The stores are closed and will remain so until 3 o'clock when the iron window shutters go rasping up and the place is open for business. A native woman with a Standard Oil five-gallon tin on her head swings erectly down the street carrying water, for the Standard Oil can has taken the place of the earthen jar for carrying water, commerce thus hitting art another jolt behind the ear. Behind her is a black, shiny Nubian astraddle of a donkey, a basket of dates swinging on a pole on each side of the creature, while he guides the animal with a stick, tapping it first on one side of the neck, then on the other, according to direction desired.

The street fills with noisy Nubians. A shiny ace of spades carrying a ladder on his head is brushed aside by a camel loaded with sugar cane, towering half as high as a load of hay. The dark son of the Nile stops and tells the camel driver what he thinks not only to him but of his ancestors for three generations back. If there is one thing in the world that the Khartoum native is proficient in, it is in expressing his opinion of some one who has pushed him out of the way.

So hot does the mid-day sun boil down in Khartoum that some of the streets are covered over, so that you walk down them in the shade, and off the corner behind a row of drinking tables on the sidewalk is a thriving moving picture show. Wherever civilization puts up its sign these days, there the cowboy film is sure to follow.

The natives do not look with wonder upon moving pictures. They explain all such phenomena satisfactorily in one word—"machina." It makes no difference what it is, if it is a machine there isn't anything wonderful about it.

So far away one hardly looks for the comforts of civilization, but there they are; while I was counting the flies on a native child's face, I was nearly run down by an automobile, and over on the Nile I could hear the chug-chugging of a motor boat. What astinoshed me most of all was to find shower baths in the houses: real shower baths. The mystery was solved when I saw a native servant climbing up on the roof to fill the tank with a couple of canvas buckets over his shoulders.

In the cool of the evening there were cricket games, and just outside of Khartoum is a spanking golf links —From Leslie's Weekly.

Murray St. Sunday Evening Service

All Great Men are the Possession of the Christian People of This World.

For his evening sermon the Rev. Mr. Webb chose as his text 1 Cor. 3:21, "Therefore let no man glory in men. For all things are yours," or, paraphrased, it might read: "Let no Christian glory in any one single possession when all things are his."

There had arisen a schism in the Corinthian Church: the company of Christians had become divided into groups, one said my hero, my teacher, my preacher is Paul; another said I am for Apollos—and he was wondrously eloquent compared with Paul; —the third group said you may have Paul, or Apollos, but Cephas, or Peter, for me. I glory in Cephas. But Paul admonishes them: "Let no man glory in men, for all things are yours." Paul is yours, Apollos is yours, Cephas is yours, life, death, things present, things to come, all are yours, then why glory in any one thing when all are yours. Such is the setting of the text.

Paul's teaching requires reiteration in the world to-day. We need to raise our eyes and behold our possessions. All great men of the world are the property, the possession, of the Christian people of this world. No matter whether they are Christians or not, all man, prophets, statesmen, warriors, philosophers, are our servants because we are Christians.

To illustrate: A certain well known Canadian millionaire boasts that he has never given a cent to any church. He has never contributed any money for the extension of the Christian church, yet he gives millions to a certain university, and that money becomes incarnate in the students of that university. That man's money, that man's brains, through the students, are working in China, in Japan, in India, in the leprosy colonies, without his will, yes against his will because of the Christian systems of the world; because there has been a Christ.

It is refreshing to think of the army of great men who are working for the extension of Christ's kingdom. It is no credit to them, but they prove a power to Him and a profit to the Christian systems.

In the hours of world stress; in these days when the hand of judgement seems to be laid heavily upon us, when men are made to weep and shed their blood, when hearts are grumbling, and brains are swaying amidst dire calamities, it is great to see men, who formerly, like Joseph of Arimathea, had to worship in secret, now stand out rejoicing in the name of the Lord.

The speaker said it rejoiced his heart to hear the manly utterances of Lord Kitchener. A few days ago he received a card from a soldier boy containing Lord Robert's prayer. Truly, all great men, kings, rulers, everywhere, are ours as never before.

When Paul says: "The world is yours," he does not mean the world as we generally understand the term, that of the "world, the flesh and the devil," but refers to the beautiful creat world, as now, in the spring time, it is bursting into new life, heralding the waving trees, the verdant carpets, the fragrant flowers, and the leaving seas of grain. All of this is ours, but we must beware lest it possess us.

The heathen nature looks upon the skies with dread. The sea, to them, is a horror. When a star drops someone dies, when a comet appears the devil reigns. When Christ comes into the life all superstition goes out. The stars have nothing to do with our careers; Friday and the number thirteen are bereft of their sting; a howling dog beneath our window has nothing to do with life or death.

Sir Wm. Puleney—Who commanded the Canadian troops when they first entered the trenches, being attached then to the Third British Army Corps.

Because we are Christ's everything is ours. The question naturally arises: How can the earth be ours when we possibly don't own a foot of it? A man owns a great forest, which he turns into lumber,—and into cash. It benefits us. Another man owns a water-power, which he converts into electricity, and into cash. It is ours to use. Unmolested we may view the waving of the trees, listen to the music of the rushing river; our souls may be filled with infinite harmony; then who owns the forest, who owns the river? As Mrs. Browning beautifully puts it:

And every common bush afire with God."

Therefore, as Christians we may walk with stately step, our heads up, conscious of the fact that we are heirs with God.

Paul also says, "Life is yours." O the joy of living, the glory of existence! The first stone in the structure of any permanent civilization is the proper valuation of life. Things sinful make for the destruction of life, such as murder; also drunkenness and lust, which lower the vitality.

And again Paul says, "Death is yours." In another connection he states that death is an enemy, but it is the last enemy to be destroyed, and in destroying an enemy we gain a friend. There is nothing beautiful in death. The speaker marvelled that so many people seemed to enjoy going to funerals.

When we think of it rationally, however, death loses its sting. The last enemy to be destroyed is death, and after death comes victory.

Paul, in addressing the Christians at Corinth, characterizes them as poor, halting, wheak, silly, wrangling people, but because they have believed in Jesus Christ, all things are theirs, since they are Christ's, and Christ is God's.

In like manner, we with our failures and weaknesses, if we have accepted Christ into our lives, are Christs, and because Christ is God's, everything is ours: the world, life, death, things present, and things to come, all are ours.

"Just as I am, without one plea
But that Thy blood was shed for me,
And that Thou bidd'st me come to Thee
O Lamb of God, I come!"

—PAUL PENMAN.

ST. ANDREW'S SUNDAY MORNING SERVICE

"Our Happiness Depends Upon the Way We Meet the Events of Life"

The sermon at St. Andrew's church Sunday morning, partook of the nature of a heart to heart homily on the seldom touched question of "Harmony in the House," or "Happiness." It is a wonder that preachers do not dwell upon it more, for if there is one cause more than another, that is tending to create disrespect on the part of children for their parents and their home, it is that canker— discord —which is eating its way, cancer-like, into modern society.

Sir H. Day, in commenting on this subject, says: "Life is made up, not of great sacrifices or duties, but of little things, on which smiles and kindness, and small obligations, given habitually, are what win and preserve the heart and secure happiness."

The Rev. Mr. Rollins took as his text part of the fifth verse of the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes: "And the grasshopper shall be a burden," the context having reference to the weakness or weariness of old age.

All things have a relative value. Little and large, light and heavy, easy and difficult are not fixed terms by any means. They are pliable, like clay in the hands of the potter. A great thing dwindles to littleness when a greater comes to view.

Life is not a fixed, unchanging thing; it is not a constant, but is always in the process of transformation, ebbing and flowing, first with weakness, then with strength. God and eternity are great constants, but we, in our imperfect state, are constantly fluctuating, swaying, rising and falling like the hour glass, growing old before our time, and being young again, when every difficulty, every [illegible] becomes a burden.

A grasshopper is one of the meanest of symbols, typifying that which is light, or inconsiderate. The spies reported. "And there we saw the giants, the Sons of Anak, which come of the giants; and we were in our own sight as grasshoppers, and as we were in their sight."

All men have giant days, days of conscious power; they also have their grasshopper days, days of littleness, when the faintest sound seems like a crash of thunder.

The chapter of the text refers to the weakness incidental to old age. Oriental old age of self-indulgence in which the victim pays in debility the follies of youth; to such, a grasshopper is a burden. We should be thankful for the new things, for the help of science that renews the vigour of aged people and enables them to reach the eventide full of life.

Age is not altogether a matter of years. Attacks of old age sometimes comes early in life; days of weariness, when a feather becomes a load; when the slam of a door, the prattle of a child, or the overture of a dog to the moon cause us to break out in a fit of remonstrance out of all proportion to the offence.

The causes may be ill-health, disappointment, inaction, weariness or monotony. Indeed, petulence may grow into a habit. There may be days showing symptoms of temper and indulgence of self-will, when we are scarely aware of our conditions and unless broken they invariably become a habit, the seriousness of which is manifested by the unhappiness of our life and home.

We all have our tempers. Every man's morning temper becomes a living reality to family, friends, clients or customers. If it should assert itself on one of grasshopper days, when the smallest things become burdens, then everybody has to up and take notice. If it should be the wife's grasshopper day, then the folks about the house know it before the day is far spent.

What is to be done to effect a cure? We are not the same person every day. Some days older, some days younger; some days weaker, more querulous, when we are quite unfit to punish a child. It may be a relief to take off the lid, but it will be hard on the other people.

Know Thyself.

Know yourself day by day. Consult the thermometer of your temperament; get a line on yourself, just for the day. Take yourself in hand. Take time for quiet communion with your own soul. Ask God for grace. Come unto Me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden, and I will give thee rest," is for you.

Learn your danger signals. If experience tells you that difficulty comes at certain hours, then be on guard and see if you cannot negotiate things in such a way that you will pass safely and successfully. Otherwise you will become a prey to your grasshopper days, a position not very dignifying to a man with brains, with spirit, and a soul fashioned in the image of God.

We must not only know ourselves, but we must know other people. We must be alert to read the signals in their voices and faces. The people about us are not all angels; they have their troubles. Life with other people is ever changing. The chirp of a grasshopper is a very little noise, but if it is the last straw with you, remember it may be the same with them. Silence under such a condition is like a balm. In these little things we should try and utilize our resources by wisdom and common sense, and endeavour to be helpful ,else we may find life altogether too great a burden.

Let us try to recognize the fact that the grasshopper is not really heavy; that it varies according to our mood; that peculiar combinations of circumstances tend to make it so. We should learn to do nothing decisive, nothing final on grasshopper days; we should wait till the illusion passes away. Possibly the bubbles of our illusionment have been of our own making. We should strive to get a clearer view of life, to seek all the aid that our religion can give — and it can give a great deal—to seek more life and the strength which comes from it, and finally we shall be able to overcome in triumph.

'God is near thee, therefore cheer thee
Sad soul!
He'll defend thee, when around thee
Billows roll."

—Paul Penman.

"We Can Go Ahead Whenever We Please"

Cheerful Letter From Pte. Gordon Wyatt Who Says That If by Bad Luck He Has to Die in France he Will Die in Good Spirits.

TWO BROTHERS THERE

Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt, East City, have received an interesting letter from their son, Private Gordon Wyatt, who with his brother, Howard, is at the front in the 14th Battalion. Pte. Wyatt, after stating that he and his brother are both well and in good spirits, says: "I must say if I was back in Canada now and waiting for the third contingent I would feel very cheap, for I do not think the second contingent will see much fighting. I came over to do something for the country, and so would feel disappointed if I hadn't a chance. We have had a turn in the trenches, and are now in reserce billets, getting fitted up again, and put into good condition. There is not much news, only we can go ahead now whenever we please, but we take pity on the poor German brutes, so are giving them a rest.

"Now I must close, but I want you to feel proud that you have two sons (Canadians at that), who are not down-hearted. More than that we are both well and happy, and if (by mere bad luck), we have to die here, we will die in good spirits, and that's more than a lot in Canada will do."

Was Case For Division Court

Police Court Will Not be Used to Collect Debts.

Magistrate Dumble made it plain this morning that the Police Court was not going to be used for "debt collecting" if he could help it. He had a case before him which was purely a misunderstanding of a contract, but the information was laid under the criminal code and the Magistrate heard the evidence before ordering a dismissal.

The information was at the instance of Mrs. Emily Miller, charging that Mrs. Catherine English "did unlawfully and without colour of right steal bedding, carpet dishes, two chairs, a table and clothing, the property of the informant, contrary to the Criminal Code."

According to the evidence Mrs. Miller rented a room from Mrs. English, on February 3rd. She swore the contract price was at the rate of $2.50 per month in advance, and her husband was to live here with her. She had receipts for the payment of $2.50, three times. Each receipt was dated about a month apart. Last Thursday she said she was ordered to leave. On Friday she went for her property but was refused permission to remove it. Result—an action under the Criminal Code.

$2.50 per Week.

Mrs. English, when sworn, stated that the contract was at the rate of $2.50 per week. She was accustomed to rent her rooms by the week or night and never rented them by the month.

Mrs. English had been ill and said she should be in her bed instead of in the Police Court. Her sickness did not impede her vocabulary any, however. She had to be ordered to stop talking several times. The Magistrate informed her that if she talked like that at home he would not live in her house for $10.

The case was dismissed, the conflicting parties being informed that the Division Court was the place to settle the dispute.

Mr. C. R. Widdifield represented the complainant.

Non-Support.

Oliver Frank Havery left his wife last October to look for work. He had been away about six months and never sent her any money, neither did he have any permanent address, whre she could write to him. During his absence twins were born to his wife. When he came home he was arrested and had about $15 in his pocket.

Havery is a plumber by trade. He has been in Montreal, Cobourg, Ottawa and Port Hope, since October, but said he could not get work. He had worked for his board most of the time. He was very penitent this morning and thought he would get along alright if let go.

The Chief asked for a remand for a week to see Mrs. Havery. It was a cowardly trick to leave his wife when he knew her condition.

Drunk and Disorderly.

Wm. Sullivan was drunk and disorderly. He got ten days in which to pay $2, and costs of $3.75.

Address By Mr. H. B. Cowan

On the Single Tax Question Progressive West Sees Need for Real System of Taxation.

Speaking of the spread of the single tax doctrine among the farmers of Canada at the social meeting of the Single Tax Association of Ontario at on Friday night, H. B. Cowan of Peterborough, editor of Farm and Dairy, and President of the Tax Reform League of Eastern Ontario, said that 52,000 farmers of the west stood for single tax.—Nearly all the leaders in farm improvements in Ontario are single taxers, he said, and expressed the belief that Ontario farmers would follow the lead of those in the west.

Mrs. Hector Prenter, President of the Equal Suffrage League, spoke on "Woman and the Land," saying that woman's viewpoint is needed in the solution of the land question. Dr. O. C. G. Withrow, discussing social hygiene and tax reform, said that as a medical man he was vitally interested in tax reform and thought that single tax would do much to clean up unsanitary conditions in a community by relieving over-crowding. Mr. A. B. Farmer briefly considered the question of how to educate the people. Mr. D. B. Jaques, President of the association, was in the chair.

Funeral Of Mrs. Pentland

The funeral of the late Mrs. J. B. Pentland on Friday afternoon was very largely attended, many friends gathering for the service at the house. The W. M. S. of the George Street Methodist Church, of which the deceased was a member, attended in a body and marched with the cortege from the house to the church. The pall-bearers were Messrs. A. Allison, R. J. Kidd, J. Stanger, W. Bothwell, S. Touchborn and T. W. Robinson. The service was in charge of Rev. R. G. Peever.

T.A.S. Interest In Athletics All Ready For Initial Push

One of the first activities of the amalgamated total abstinence societies will be directed at athletics. Instead of the more or less disinterested and unconnected attitude toward games since the new parishes were formed, an attempt will be made through the central body to get as many as possible of the boys and young men playing his summer. The matter was touched upon again on Sunday, although only incidentally. A meeting will be held to-night at St. Alphonsus Lyceum when the subject will be more fully discussed, and by next week it is intended that all the details will be outlined. The existence of the three parishes injects the element of competition which practically assures the success of the new movement in favour of athletics. In each T.A.S. the older members are unanimous in their support of giving the youth every encouragement in this direction.

In the Sacred Heart Parish the committee in charge of sports is as follows: W. Grady, chairman; Fred McGrath, secretary; Peter Milloy, Henry Guerin and A. Rose. They have already decided in favour of baseball and track events. Lacrosse finds no place in their favour, and it is believed that by confining attention to several popular lines better results will be obtained this year than if a scramble is made to take up numerous games.

Tennis will be played as usual, and it is expected that the courts will be in better condition than ever this summer.

In the parish of the Immaculate Conception the men are equally eager to give the boys an opportunity of playing baseball and other games. It is understood that an effort will be made to secure the use of Riverside Park if satisfactory arrangements can be made.

St. Peter's men are in the same mode, and it is generally believed that the present athletic movement will be worked out to a success.

Millionaires Made Over Night on Stock Market

NEW YORK, April 19.—"Get rich quick" yarns of stock speculation fortunes to-day permeated Wall Street. The skyrocketing of Bethlehem Steel, American Locomotive, U. S. Steel and other stocks in the recent big bulge brought out the usual crop of millionaires made over night.

One of the biggest winners in Bethlehem Steel, according to reports circulated to-day was Samuel Untermeyer, foes of the "money trust" and opponent of the stock market and speculation. He is said to hold 15,000 shares of Bethlehem, bought around 25, and at closing figures of 138 is said to be $2,000,000 richer. Jules S. Bache, of J. S. Bache & Co., is said to have cleaned up $1,000,000 on Bethlehem.

The street again to-day was flurried with talk of "war orders." Reports that a half dozen steel manufacturing concerns had allies' orders for shrapnel and other material running into millions were circulated.

SPECIAL MUSIC AT MURRAY STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

A very pleasing feature of the Sunday evening music at Murray Street Baptist Church was the singing of the Male Quartette, consisting of Messrs. Sid Mitchell, first tenor; James Brown, second tenor; Asa Huycke, first bass; Fred Skitch, second bass. The balance of tone and shading was all that could be desired. It is to be hoped this combination will stay together, as from a musical standpoint, they are hard to improve upon. Mr. Asa Huycke's solo "O Dry Those Tears," with violin accompaniment by Miss Laura Logan, was beautifully rendered. The full tones of the violin blended with Mr. Huycke's voice in exquisite harmony.

Cattle May Be Slow Rounding Into Shape

Some farmers stated on Saturday that the dairy prospects are not exceptionally bright. Cows have not come through the winter very well and may be slow to pick up. More rain is needed just now to put the meadows in good condition. As a result, the first makes of spring butter and cheese are not expected to be as heavy as usual.

Tests in Germany have shown that pens made of tantalum outwear those made of steel or gold.

ON SERVICE IN BERMUDA

The Examiner Hears From Pte. R. Rouse With the Royal Canadian Regt.

The Examiner has received the following interesting letter from Pte. R. Rouse, one of the Peterborough boys in Bermuda with the Royal Canadian Regiment:

R.C.R., St. George's Bermuda.

Dear Sir,—I have had great pleasure in reading your paper, and I always feel proud to show the letters in your paper from Peterborough boys who are at the front to my chums. Although it is our misfortune to be in Bermuda, we are all waiting to get a chance at the Germans.

We are having some very nice weather here in Bermuda, after a very bad winter, which, I am sorry to say, has caused a great dislike to Bermuda by our men.

We have been under canvas all winter, and it has not been such a snap as it looks. We generally had to get up in the middle of the night and put our tents up, and it rained cats and dogs.

I am enclosing you a photo of the boys and the way that we are passing the time. The photo is that of a mock court martial, which we held one Sunday. You can tell by the photo that there was some fun. I think there is only one Peterborough boy there, that being myself.

I think I must close now, hoping to soon be in Peterborough again.—I remain, yours truly,

R. Rouse.

Spring Seeding Has Commenced

In Peterboro' County—High Land is Dry—The Fall Wheat Situation

Seeding operations have commenced in Peterborough county. A number of farmers from different points in the district lay claim to being the first in this respect. It is possible that honours may be equally divided. The high land is inclined to be dry, and the farmers are hoping that the spring rains may be copious enough to offset this prospective contingency.

THE FALL WHEAT.

Concerning fall wheat, the April crop bulletin of the Ontario Department of Agriculture says:

Reports of correspondents in November described the new fall wheat as never more promising, there being a good growth and a much increased area. The fields were well protected by snow until the middle of March, when in many sections they became comparatively bare, and suffered more or less from alternate thawing and freezing, cold winds, etc., causing some heaving and considerable browning of the top. The hope was entertained, however, that warm rains and good growing weather later on would revive these more backward fields, as the tops only seemed affected. Late sown fields are the least promising. At present there is no cause for anxiety as to the condition of the main crop.

NO NEW CASES IN BELLEVILLE

Pte. Ephriam Lindsey Writes From Belleville

Mrs. J. (Lindsay) Crouter, 179 Sherbrooke Street, is in receipt of the following letter from Pte. Ephraim Lindsey, with the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., at Belleville:

Belleville, [illegible]th, 1915.

Dear Mother,— I got your welcome letter, which I always enjoy reading, as it helps to pass the time away, and we can all forget the barracks for a little while. There have been no more outbreaks of the disease up till now, and it is fairly well in hand. We all expect that passes will be given out again in another week if everything goes along alright. I am on guard to-day for twenty-four hours, working at the rate of 2 hours on duty and four hours off, but cannot leave the barracks, as we may be called out at any time for an inspection by the officer of the guard. It is rumoured that we leave here in about three weeks' time for camp at Barriefield, but I think most of us will get home before we leave here; at least I hope so.

It is getting warmer every day now. Sometimes it is quite hot for us drilling, but the sooner we get out of here the better, when the warm weather comes to stay with us for a while. This city is very quiet, far worse than Peterborough. I think when the soldiers leave here the place will be crossed off the map altogether.

I hope you are all well and happy at home. The bunch down here are trying to make the best of it, and we will pull through alright; but it will be a long time yet before we get to the Old Country, let alone France. We want to give a good account of ourselves when we do get there, if the war does not end too soon. Wishing you the best of luck and health. We have had good luck. We were paid last Friday. I will close now with love. From your son,

EPHRAIM.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, April 19.—Railroad stocks were very active on the market to-day. C.P.R. made a net gain of five points, but fell off towards the close to within half a point of the opening quotation, which was 169. Mexican Petroleum recorded a net rise of 8½ points, closing at 90. The opening quotation was 86½. Many of the leading stocks made fractional gains.

PRESENTATION TO PETERBORO BOY

Gunners Revoy and Airriess of the 26th Battery, Kingston, who have been home on leave of absence, return to Kingston to-night.

Kingston, April 18.—The call for recruits for the remount depot from this division has been answered by twice as many men as are wanted. Since so many have signified their willingness to go overseas in this branch of the service an order doubling the establishment of the depot or some other way of accepting the men is expected.

That mounted branches of the service are popular with the Canadians is shown by the ready response to the invitation extended by Major S. T. Medd of the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles for applications from ten local men to join B squadron. Although only a brief notice was published on Saturday there has been no lack of applicants and there is a squad of men to be examined this afternoon. There will be little trouble in securing four good men for this unit.

Signalling Sergt. Frank Derewe, formerly of Peterborough, and now attached to the headquarter's staff at Ottawa is in the city to-day. He is leaving to-night for Quebec for duty there.

Another Peterborough boy is off to the front. Word has been received that Mr. J. E. Dickenson, formerly organist of St. George's Anglican church, who has been on a visit to relatives in London, Eng., has joined the Royal Engineers and is in training at Brixton, expecting to go to the front immediately. He was for several years employed in the Canadian General Electric Works and more recently at the De Laval.

The "Magic Touch" of Bovril

The fine natural flavor of prime beef—that is what Bovril gives to your soups and stews and gravies. Just a spoonful here and there cleverly used by a skillful cook does so much to make meals more attractive. But remember "it must be Bovril."

We will send post paid to any Soldier in England or France two 4 lb. tins Bovril for $1.40.

Non-Jury Sittings Of The High Court

The non-jury sittings of the High Court opened at 1 p.m. to-day, Chief Justice Sir William Mulock presiding. The only case for the sittings was Hamilton versus Hamilton, over the construction of certain terms of a will. The terms of construction were agreed upon by all parties concerned and consenting minutes of the judge filed.

Mr. D. O'Connell was counsel for the defendant, and Mr. G. W. Hatton for the plaintiff.

Music & Drama

MUTT AND JEFF.

The old favourite "Mutt and Jeff," this time convorting in Mexico, drew two big audiences to the Grand on Saturday, and Bud Fisher's funny creations seem to have lost none of their powers of amusement, judging by the gales of laughter that shook the house. The production is well up to last year's company with plenty of tuneful songs and pretty chorus ensembles, and Saturday's audiences found the whole programme most entertaining.

JOHNNY EVERS HURT AND "ZIMMY" CHASED

Mathewson Lost His First Game of the Season to Philadelphia the Giants Making Five Errors Behind Him—Severoid's Home Run Beat the White Sox

BOSTON, April 17.—The Braves defeated Brooklyn 5 to 1 today. Captain Evers was injured when he slid into second base during the second inning. Manager Stallings reported after Evers had been carried off the field that it was a sprained knee, and that the player would be out of the line-up for a few days. Crutcher twirled for seven periods, and kept the visitors' hits fairly well scattered. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
| Brooklyn | 0 | 0 | 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0—1 | 9 | 0 |
| Boston | 0 | 0 | 0 0 1 1 0 3 0 0 x—5 | 9 | 0 |

Batteries — Aitchison, Ragon and McCarthy; Crutcher, Strand and Gowdy.

At Chicago—In the practice preceding the sixth inning of to-day's game between the Cubs and the Cardinals Zimmerman, of the Cubs, threw the ball over Saier's head, and it struck Umpire Eason. Zimmerman claimed the throw was an accident, but Umpire Quigley said it was intentional, and fired Zimmerman from the game. Eason's leg was bruised, but the damage was not serious. The game was won by the visitors, 7 to 4. Zabel, Cheney and Vaughn were all wild. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

At Cincinnati—Pittsburg took the last game of the series from the Reds today, 3 to 2. Adams weakened early and was relieved by Mamaux, who held Cincinnati scoreless the remainder of the contest. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |

At New York—The Phillies outplayed and outgeneraled the Giants today on their visit to the Polo Grounds, winning by the score of 7 to 1. As tacticians, as fielders and as timely hitters the visitors did better than the Giants. The latter, in fact, played a poor game and could do nothing with the pitching of Alexander. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 0 | 0 | 0 0 0 0 0 0 1—1 | 8 | 5 |

Cincinnati Won from St. Louis.

Cincinnati, April 16—In a slow game Cincinnati, by timely hitting, won the first game of the series with St. Louis here to-day, six to two. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

Cubs Defeated Pirates.

Chicago, April 18—Gerber's fumble of Phelan's grounder paved the way to a two or one victory for Chicago after ten innings against Pittsburg in the first game of the series. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

Batteries — Cooper, McQuillen and Schang, Gibson; Vaughn and Brenaham.

Washington, April 17—The Boston Red Sox beat Washington 7 to 5 here this afternoon in an excellent battle With the score tied in the ninth and two gone, Boehling was taken out, and Walter Johnston substituted. Lewis singled to centre, scoring Wagner and Speaker.

Washington knocked Foster out of the box in the fourth, and tied the score in the seventh, while Shore was pitching. Boehling's wildness gave the Red Sox an early lead. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Washington | 0 | 0 | 0 1 2 0 2 0 0 0—5 | 8 | 2 |

Batteries — G. Foster, Shore and Cady; Boehling, Johnson and Henry, Ainsmith.

At Philadelphia—The Yanks pounded out a victory over the Athletics this afternoon. The score was 9 to 1. McHale twirled a splendid game. Wretched work on the part of the Athletic twirlers, Wyckoff and Bressler, contributed to the Yanks' success. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

Batteries: McHale and Sweeney; [illegible]

At Detroit — Detroit made it an even break with Cleveland today, when Jean Dubuc, backed by errorless support, shut out the Indians, 5 to 0. Timely hitting by Crawford, Veach, Kavanagh and McKee, drove in the Tigers' runs. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland | 0 | 0 | 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—0 | 4 | 1 |

At St. Louis—Catcher Severoid won today's game with the White Sox in the last inning, when he lifted the ball over the left field fence for a home run, scoring E. Walker and C. Walker before him, after Austin had crossed the plate on a walk and a two-bagger by C. Walker. The score was 4 to 3. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

Cobb's Great Throw Beat White Sox.

Detroit, April 18—Ty. Cobb's throw from deep centre, which retired John Collins at the plate in the ninth inning, gave Detroit the opening game of the series with Chicago, 6 to 7. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago | 0 | 0 | 0 3 0 1 3 0 0 0—7 | 6 | 3 |

Made Only Five Hits.

St. Louis, April 18—Mitchell held St. Louis to five scattered hits to-day while his team-mates bunched hits with bases on balls, Cleveland winning six to one. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|

Cool Reception to Marquard Quickly Changed by Shut-Out

Rube Marquard's reception by New York fans last week and his sensational come-back in his first game of the season against Brooklyn, is outlined in the following from a Gotham daily:

He made his first bow to a critical crowd of home fans, already condemned for his eccentricities, knowing beforehand that he was on the tblock stone, at the turning point of his New York existence, where to win would assure him a further chance for redemption, but to lose would send him into oblivion, through the minor league route. And "Rube" pitched probably the most brilliant game of his long and remarkable career, winning 2 to 0.

Every condition was against Marquard. He laboured against the will of the crowd, who, to a man felt no sympathy for him nor offered him encouragement. The psychological effect of knowing that this game, this endeavour, would make or break him as a member of the New York team undoubtedly added to his worries. It seemed, too, that he carried the entire test on his own shoulders without advice or verbal help from his team mates. And that he accomplishes this his greatest achievement even against these great odds, makes the performance stand out alone among his record displays.

Marquard now is once more accepted by "King Fan". He has once more won his place in the hearts of Giant rooters. That he jumped to the "Feds," that he had a poor season last year, that he seemed on the decline—all are forgotten and forgiven, for he has conquered, has made good.

No Doubtful Performance.

Marquard's performance was clean cut. There was not a doubtful smash—one of those drives that might be scored a hit or error—during the game. He subdued the hard-hitting warriors from Brooklyn in a manner that left no question of his effectiveness. He was a power in himself.

Glasgow Celtics Clean Up The Championship

Head Football League for Twelfth Time—Derby in Danger—Oldham Likely to Displace Everton—Nearing Close British Soccer Season—Saturday's Scores

LONDON, April 19. — For the twelfth time, or of times than all other clubs put together, the Glasgow Celtic have won the championship of the Scottish Football League. Heart of Midlothian, after topping the table for the greater part of the season, have been unable to hold that post, and on Saturday were beaten by St. Mirren, while Celtic had a 4 to 0 victory over Third Lanark.

In the English League Everton, Chelsea, Sheffield United, and Preston were winners, but Derby County failed at Bury, and it is possible that Derby may be displaced from the lead.

Everton are now at top of the First Division, but as Oldham have two more games in hand than the Liverpool team they have still the best chance of winning. Manchester United and Notts County are now certain to go down to the Second Division.

In the Southern League Watford on Saturday made sure of the championship. Scores:

LINDSAY IN THE BIG FOUR

The different teams forming the Big Four League last year, are perfectly agreeable to have Olympias enter the league. Lindsay gaurantees to enter an all home-brew team which overcomes the difficulty the others feared.

The meeting of the league has not taken place yet, but when it does, in the course of a short time, the result is almost certain to be that the locals will be admitted, due to the missionary trip of Messrs. Bakageorge, Howe and Weeks, who made a special trip to Cannington and Woodville yesterday.

Woodville and Cannington were reported to object to Olympia's entry but came around when the matter was explained to them.

There is a possibility that the league this year will comprise five teams: Uxbridge might also be admitted as well as Lindsay. Of the original four teams, Beaverton drops out, so that Woodville, Cannington and Sunderland remain.—Lindsay Post.

Tennis Comes to Fore, Unaided

Millions Playing it To-day Because of Pure Sport Spirit—Cities Laying Out Courts for Public

Tennis is the only sport that is coming to the fore without thousands of columns of newspaper publicity. And in the past five years tennis has increased in popularity to such an extent that there are millions of devotees where there were only thousands before.

Other games like baseball, football, pugilism and golf have interested the public and been taken up by it because publicity has influenced them. But with tennis it has been different. There isn't a sporting page in the country that has averaged one-tenth as much tennis news as it has baseball, pugilism, golf or football.

Tennis has won its several million enthusiasts because of the merits of the game alone. It is not a weakling's game, but a game for red-blooded men and women — a real game in every sense of its athletic usage.

A successful player must be fast of foot, and faster of brain. He must have a steady eye and a steady arm. Tennis doesn't require brute strength, but it does require well-balanced muscles, nerve, coolness and skill. A good tennis player must hit hard and hit softly as the occasion demands. And there is not much chance for him to figure out how he is going to hit. His decision and the action must follow each other within a fraction of a second or he loses a point in the game.

Many sports have been pointed highly as health builders, but none is better than tennis. The net game is an ideal one for those who have grown a bit bulky and want to lose some of the bulk. If constant playing of tennis doesn't send a portly person back to, or near, normal weight nothing can.

Tennis once was a game only for the wealthy. Now it is everyone's game. In other years there were no public tennis courts. Those who liked the game of tennis had to belong to some club that had courts. That meant a sizeable initiation fee and dues each month that were too big for the ordinary person to pay. But things are different now.

In every big city in the country the municipal authorities have built tennis courts in the parks. And they will build more this summer and more next because the army of tennis players is increasing amazingly and the city courts cannot accommodate half of those who want to play.

Owners of vacant lots in the residential sections of many of the cities have shown enterprise by laying courts on these pieces of land and charging a moderate rental for the courts. Their courts are always in demand.

Tennis is not a costly game. A racquet costs from $2.00 to $5.00 and will last for years. The tennis balls are very cheap and a pair of them will last for many games. The rest of the equipment includes a pair of sneaker shoes and a flannel suit. Although the suit is in no way a necessity.

And for this small outlay one gets many hours of pleasure and much health-giving exercise. No wonder the popularity of the game is growing by leaps and bounds.—Rochester Times.

TWO SNAPPY GAMES IN INDOOR LEAGUE

Two games were played on Friday night. In the first game the Bugle Band defeated No. 5 Co. by a score of 18-19. Line-ups:

No. 5 Co.—Leether, 3rd b.; Rumary, l.f.; Henderson, 1st b.; Carpenter, 2nd b.; Meyers, p.; Lightheart, r.f.; Cook, c.; E. Dunmitt, l.s.s.; H. Dunmitt, r.s.s.

In the second game No. 7 Co. defeated No. 6 Co. in a very exciting and close game. Score, 13-10. Line-up:

No. 7 Co.—Hall, c.; Echobichon, 1st b.; Freeman, p.; McLeod, l.f.; Munro, 2nd b.; Freeman, r.f.; Barrell, l.s.s.; Evans, 3rd b.

Umpires: Balls and strikes, Abe Quinlan; bases, Bert. Cranfield.

H. Co. practice to-night, Monday, April 19, from 7 to 8 p.m.

Ottawa May Get Isaacs From Leafs

OTTAWA, April 19. — The Ottawa Baseball Club received a telegram Saturday from President McCaffery of the Torontos, offering to sell them pitchers "Bobby" Auld and Matt Kirley, also Catcher Harkins and Shortstop Killilea. Auld, Kirley and Killilea have been South with the Leafs and are evidently not ripe for the International company. Another crack player offered to the Ottawas is Charlie Isaacs, who wound up last year at third base for the Leafs, after Charlie Pick had gone to Washington. The Ottawa pitching staff is complete with Kubat, Shocker, Roberts and Peterson, but they are endeavouring to get Isaacs and will probably make a bid for Killilea. Isaacs was purchased by Toronto from Guelph two years ago and Killilea from Hamilton. If the Ottawas land Isaacs, Bullock will likely be sold to Hamilton or exchanged for Catcher Navitt. They made a bid for Catcher Fisher at Hamilton, but were evidently late. Earl Rice, an amateur pitcher from Montreal, has accepted terms with the Ottawas and will report on May 16 at Chatham. He was recommended by Lichtenhein of the Royals.

JOE LALLY HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Mr. Joe. Lally, lacrosse missionary, is expected in Peterborough on Friday night to meet the local fans and players with the hope of creating greater interest in the game this summer. The local clubs will undertake during the week to make some kind of a showing for the visitor's benefit.

Secretary Frank Doyle has written Mr. Dillon regarding the local opinion of the district in which Peterborough is entered.

OBITUARY

LEWIS SPRY.

Another of the oldest residents of Peterborough was suddenly called away by death on Sunday, April 18th, at midnight. With only a few hours' illness, which developed on Sunday morning, Lewis Spry passed quietly away at his late home, 210 Stewart Street. His faithful wife and a few near friends were present at his death.

The deceased was born in England and came to Canada with his family, who settled in Port Hope, the deceased afterwards removing to Peterborough, about half a century ago, where he was first employed with the late James Stevenson in connection with the latter's stove business. Later deceased went into business for himself, having built a store on part of the property on which he died. He was a practical mechanic, and was rewarded with a good business.

Deceased was married twice. His first wife was Elizabeth Dixon, his second wife being Eliza Johnston, to whom he was united in marriage in 1855, and who survives him. He was a charter member of Court Peterborough, Canadian Order of Foresters, and always took a live interest in political and civic affairs.

The funeral will take place from the residence, 210 Stewart Street, on Wednesday afternoon, April 21st, at 2.30, to the Little Lake Cemetery.

MISS MARY DOAK.

Miss Mary Doak passed away on Saturday evening at the residence of Mrs. Shannon, 493 King Street. She has been a resident of Petrborough for a number of years, and was a useful worker in the George Street Methodist Church.

Surviving relatives reside in Sterling and Chicago.

The remains were transferred to Sterling this morning for interment.

ORATORICAL CONTEST IN ST. PAUL'S

An oratorical contest will be held to-morrow evening in the Sunday School hall of St. Paul's Church, in which members of the Young Men's classes of St. Paul's and Knox Churches will take part. The public is invited to attend. The speakers have been allowed to select their own subjects and each will speak for fifteen minutes. They will be scored on the points of the material contained in their addresses, on the language used, and on their style of delivery. The speakers will include Louis Ingram, John Herron and Kingsley Kenyon, of Knox Church, and Harry Taylor of St. Paul's Church. The subjects have not been fully announced, but it is understood that they will include such subjects as "The World Position of Small Nations," "An Irishman's First Impressions of Canada," "Some Fallacies of Protection and Hard Times, their Cause and Cure."

The Young Women's classes of both churches are cooperating. The Deborah Bible Class of St. Paul's Church is providing the refreshments, at the close. As an oratorical contest of this kind has a great influence in developing the speaking talents of young men it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

BIRTH.

ARCHIBALD—On Sunday, April 18th, 1915, to Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Archibald, 888 Chamberlain street, a son.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Miss Clara Storey, of Cobourg, was the guest of Miss Leona Hummel over the week-end.

Mr. E. M. Kay, who has joined the 2nd Canadian Contingent at Toronto, spent Sunday in the city, the guest of his brother, Mr. A. C. Kay.

Chief of Police Miller, of Millbrook, was in the city to-day attending the funeral of the late Edward Wilson, which is under Masonic auspices.

Mrs. J. Wilson, of 372 George St., and Miss Hepburn are in Toronto, attending the summer millinery openings.

Miss Carveth and Mrs. W. J. G. Gillett, of Millbrook, were in the city on Saturday arranging for the redecorating of the Presbyterian Manse at that place.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Langley will be pleased to learn that they arrived safely in Ottawa on their visit to their son and daughter. Mr. Langley writes to say that "Mrs. L. bore the journey well and is improving all the time."

Mrs. John Straine, 417 Pape Ave., Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough, has returned home owing to the serious illness of her daughter, Mrs. Arthur Whatley, corner of Wolfe and Rubidge Streets, and is the guest of Mrs. W. H. Roberts, 562 Bethune Street.

MEMORIAL SERVICE WAS HELD

A most impressive memorial service was held in the Salvation Army Temple last evening in honour of the memory of the late Pte. Harry Nicholls. Court Stanley, A.O.F., of which the dead soldier was a member, attended in a body, marching to the Temple headed by the Salvation Army Band, playing the dead march in "Saul." The relatives of the deceased occupied seats at the front of the [illegible] bring comfort to the bereaved. The hymns sung were appropriate to the occasion, and Adj. McElhiney's address brought the message of the resurrection after death and the happy reunion to come. He offered prayer for the Peterborough soldier boys at Belleville, Kingston and Ottawa, and those at the front.

ICE OUT OF CLEAR LAKE

Clear Lake is clear once more; a little ice remains in Stony Lake, but the larger open spaces are quite free.

Last Tuesday a Peterborough lady paid a visit to her cottage near Mt. Julian, and thoroughly the experience of making the journey partly on water and partly on ice. Whenever a strong piece of ice lay in their way the canoe was simply dragged across till an open space was reached. She reports that the only ice left is that between small islands which lie close together. By this time, no doubt, it has all disappeared.

This season was somewhat remarkable for the easy manner in which the ice vanished. Former seasons usually witnessed the river full of floating blocks, which invariably congested at dams causing damage by floods.

It is exceedingly interesting to watch the ice break up in Stony Lake. High winds send the masses moving hither and thither, causing the ice to crumble to snow as it slowly moves in irresistible force on the rocky shores. The cracking and grinding noises, which grow ominous at times, produce a creepy feeling, as they remind one of the mighty power of Nature. Such power is sometimes felt by wharves in exposed places, which, sometimes, are literally ground to pieces.

"To him who in the love of Nature holds
Communion with her visible forms, she speaks
A various language."

—MONTY LA ROCK.

city hall ..... 7890$.. 890$.....

His Worship Mayor Buller states that the paving contractors are employing a greater number of their own men than will be the case when other arrangements are completed.

Conditions Improved.

Merchants on George Street have noted an abatement in the dust nuisance since the matter was brought to the atention of the Council.

A Decrease.

Relief Officer Miller states there is a marked falling off in the number of applications for relief since the fine weather set in, combined with the opening up of the Spring trade.

DIED.

SPRY—In Peterborough, at No. 210 Stewart street, at midnight, on Sunday, April 18th, 1915, Lewis Spry, stove-dealer.

The funeral will take place from the residence, 210 Stewart street, on Wednesday, April 21st, at 2:30 p.m., to the Little Lake cemetery.

POODLE ATE MISTRESS' TEETH

Canine Has Developed a Peculiar Appetite

WANTAGH, L.I., April 20. — A French poodle belonging to Mrs. Emma Seamon, of this village, has developed a peculiar appetite. His diet has been carefully guarded by his mistress, all luxuries being kept from

A few morning ago the poodle's hunger took an unusual turn, and he swalloked the false teeth of his owner. Mrs. Seaman had placed the teeth on a washstand near her bed on retiring, and when she went down stairs in the morning she did not take them with her. Her husband, who was still asleep, was awakened by an unusual noise in time to see the poodle jump down from the stand and begin breakfasting on Mrs. Seaman's teeth. He called to his wife, but before she arrived the dog had swallowed them.

Mrs. Seaman has placed an order for a new set.

Sacrificed Two Toes

In Order That he Might Join the Contingent.

WELLAND, April 20—Many minor operations have been performed and numerous molars have been sacrificed by recruits here that they might pass the medical examinations necessary to join the various contingents, but William Ritson has gone the others one better. When he volunteered he was rejected owing to the fact that he had a hammer toe on each foot. Not to be denied his desire to fight the Germans he submitted to an operation by which the offending toes were amputated. Fully recovered from the operation, he was to-day accepted, and is now a member of the third contingent, joining the quota from the 44th Regiment.

How to Care for Your Complexion

There is no truer saying than that "beauty is only skin deep." Good features lose their charm under a sallow or blotchy skin and poor features are glorified by a beautiful complexion.

A very useful toilet booklet entitled "Your Complexion" has just been issued by Nyal's and contains many helpful health and beauty hints, including proper methods of massage. It can be had for the asking at the Nyal Agency Drug Store and you should call or 'phone for it. Among other things it points out is that diet, sleep, ventilation, and a thousand other things we cannot escape are continually warring against our complexions. Get a 25c or 50c jar of Nyal's Face Cream and convince yourself of its cleansing and refreshing and beautifying qualities. It is greaseless, oxygenated and quickly absorbed by the skin, leaves no shine, and gives a pleasant, smooth, cool sensation, quickly removing the irritation produced by wind and weather. 119a

All Nyal preparations are justly famous and none more so than Nyal's Face Cream which we unhesitatingly recommend. Call or telephone us for your copy of this book which contains most valuable information.

VANGUARD OF RUSSIAN ARMY ADVANCE 12 MILES BELOW ROSTOK INTO HUNGARY

Morale of Germans Appears as Low as That of the Austrians—Prisoners Seem Gloomy—Vast Numbers of Enemy Have Been Captured

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, April 20.—The foremost Russian column in Hungary was Saturday a dozen miles below Rostok towards Gumennoye. It forms the centre of the main Russian southern advance which is developing slowly and successfully with fierce infantry fighting. The officers of the Galician army say they never had such a succession of bloody struggles since the war began.

German officers everywhere control the Austrian tactics. Vast numbers of prisoners both German and Austrian are now reaching Kiev. The last consignment included men of the 32nd Prussian Infantry Regiment, who began the war in General von Kluck's army and subsequently fought at Soissons. They were recently brought to Hungary and moved immediately from the train into battle in the Southern Carpathians. They are as tired and depressed as the Austrians. The [illegible] grateful for food and the attentions shown them by the Russians.

The weather now is much better throughout the southern battle area, but the roads are still in a deplorable condition. The lower Danube is flooded and the island in the river is under water. Inside the Roumanian frontier numbers of cattle have been drowned. The villagers are living on the roofs of their houses.

There are signs that Gen. von Hindenburg, who is in East Prussia and not France, contemplates an attempt this week at a formidable diversion with the object of counteracting the effect of the hopeless Austro-German position in the Carpathians. This is likely to take place in Suwalki province in the region of Mariampol, where the Russian army westward of the lower Niemen has for a fortnight past been gaining a succession of sectoinal victories.

At the Produce Exchange in Petrograd representatives of the Russian trades and industries have opened a congress for strengthening co-operation in business. General Shuvayen, director of the non-armament supply department, who has recently been in Moscow and Nijni Novgorod, spoke with pride of the solidarity of the nation. He is certain Russian can feed and clothe her soldiers even if she sends more than ten millions of them into the field.

Sun Not White But Bright Blue

There is a general belief that sunlight is white and therefore that the sun is white. But this is a long way from the real condition of things. The sun is a bright billie, as blue in colour as seems the water of a mountain lake. It is the air that makes the sun seem white.

Everybody has noticed, when the air is very foggy, that the sun appears as a red ball, as red as a red-hot poker. Yet we know the sun has not changed at all. It is the mist in the air that makes the colour seem different. And in the dawn and dusk, no matter how clear the air may be, the sun is much redder in colour than when it is overhead in the middle of the day. The reason for this is that in the morning and evening we see the sun through a thicker belt of air. It is this thicker air which makes it look redder, just as it is the fog which has the same effect. If the air were taken away entirely, then we should expect the sun to be still less red.

Since, in the middle of the day, the sun is white, how could it be less red? By being blue.

The atmosphere is really like a thick orange-coloured veil spread between the world and the bright blue sun. Like a veil it dims the light, and its colour acts as a filter. Actually the air stops most of the blue rays, but lets nearly all the orange-coloured rays come through.

It has been quite definitely shown that if it were not for this orange-coloured veil of the air we could not live upon the earth to-day. Even as it is, the actinic rays of sunlight give sunstroke in Summer, and it is in the blue and violet rays that the damage is done. The air softens the sunlight enough for us to bear it.

A few million years hence the sun will be yellow, and already some of its earlier blue-heat is gone. But for a million years ahead—"we should worry!"

Italy's 1,200,000 First Line Troops Called Best In Europe

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, via Paris, April 17.—Italy to-day has 1,200,000 first line soldiers under arms. They are from twenty to twenty-six years old. They are perfectly armed and equipped otherwise "to the last button."

General Zupelli, the Italian Minister of War, speaking on the military situation in Italy, said that a miracle had been accomplished in that a country which for about twenty years had maintained a military organization merely for the preservation of peace, had created what he termed one of the most perfect of war machines. The change was not easy. General Zupelli said, as was proved wherever the same work was attempted. Great Britain, for example, had faced the same problem, and, though possessing greater resources, was even less prepared than Italy.

The War Minister said the equipment of the army with weapons was superior proportionately to that of the German army at the beginning of the war.

Eagerness of the soldiers concentrated along the frontier to begin action is so great that their officers are compelled to hold them closely in check, for fear of disturbing border incidents.

In view of extensive preparations which have been made, the question is asked with increasing frequency why Italy does not enter the war. Men in a position to speak with authority say that a majority of the people prefer and the government still hopes to obtain territorial concessions from Austria without rupture of friendly relations.

Weather conditions in the Alps also must be remembered in considering Italy's probable action. Snow still lies deep in the mountains and the cold is intense. Most of the passes are still closed by snow and ice.

A Big Demand For Farm Land

SASKATOON, Sask., April 20. — Local land companies report many more enquiries and much better and bigger business than for the past two years. As some indication of this, the Saskatoon branch of the C.P.R. Land Department reports that last month's sales totalled 6,420 acres, disposed of to thirty-three actual settlers. Such satisfactory business so early in the season is held to promise most encouragingly for the real land season when it opens a little later on.

Kept on Firing at Men Who Had Fled From Ship

LONDON, April 20.—The captain and three men were killed and seven men were wounded by Turkish artillery fire when the British submarine E.15 ran aground in the Dardanelles, according to a Turkish official statement issued in Berlin and forwarded by way of Amsterdam. After the submarine had been abandoned, aviators of the allies threw bombs at the craft in an effort to destroy her, but whether this purpose was accomplished or not the Constantinople report does not state. The report says:

"The submarine started from Tenedos at midnight, entered the Dardanelles at 2:20 o'clock in the morning and dived at 2:30 in order to avoid the searchlights. Carried forward by the strong current, it grounded four hours later with conning tower showing out of the water. The Turkish batteries opened fire. The first shell struck the bridge and killed the captain; the second shell hit the chamber containing the electrical machines and the crew were obliged to leave the boat. The Turkish batteries, however, continued to fire. Three of the crew were killed and seven wounded.

"Three hostile air machines, learning of the fate of the submarine, flew over the straits and threw bombs at the periscope and conning tower in an attempt to keep the submarine from falling into Turkish hands. About the same time Turkish troops set out in boats to save the craft and crew. The wounded English sailors were taken to a hospital, where they were given attention."

VENGEFULNESS OF THE GERMANS IS ILLUSTRATED

North of France, April 20. — The fierce fighting of a week or so ago at Drei Grachten has inflamed Belgo-German hatred to the highest degree. A frightful example of German vengefulness has just been reported. The Belgians who crossed to the right bank of the Yser were surprised at night and one regiment of men were killed, wounded and made prisoners. A tremendous effort was thereupon made by King Albert's army and finally the Germans were driven back to the old lines, leaving six hundred dead on the field. Taught by experience, the Belgians are organizing a system of night patrols to guard against surprises. Four days ago one of these patrols fell upon some German sentries and killed them all, as indeed it was their duty to do, or otherwise the alarm would have been given to the enemy. The whole affair was a regular and characteristic episode of the noctural warfare that goes on every night along the whole line of trenches from Switzerland to the sea.

The German commanders determined to make an example that might prevent the sentries from being dealt with in this fashion in the future. Using some incident or other as a pretext, they had a certain number of Belgian prisoners put to death, who had been captured in the fighting at Drei Grachten. The number of those "executed" was far greater than that of the sentries who had been surprised by the Belgians, according to all the rules of war.

WOLF DOGS WON ALL ALASKA RACE

NOME, Alaska, April 20.—Leonard Sepala and his team of 16 Siberian wolf dogs won the all-Alaska sweepstake dog race in 78,44.37, four hours behind the record. He finished five miles ahead of Scotty Allan's malamutes, and 15 miles in front of Eskimo John's Council Kennel Club team.

"THIS IS NO TIME TO SUGGEST PEACE" SUBSTANCE OF REPLY TO U. S. REPRESENTATIVE

Stoppage of War Now Would Only Benefit Germany—Allies Have Assumed Task of Crushing Prussian Militarism.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, April 20.—"This is no time even to suggest peace talk. Stoppage of the war at this time would benefit only one( Germany. The Allies have assumed the task of crushing Prussian militarism and muct refuse to be diverted from that task."

That is the word given Col. E. M. House, personal friend and "observer" for President Wilson, of the United States, who is now in this city. The position of the Allies was made very plain.

In blunt, but very courteous language Col. House was told that if he desired to initiate a movement for peace this was not the time. Such a mission was worse than useless. Any real or attempted movement to end the war with German troops holding the long line through French territory and Belgium would give Germany too great an advantage. And Col. House was told that France could view only with disfavour the initiation of a movement for Germany's [illegible]

The Allies are now prepared, he was told, with men, money and ammunition, to continue war until Germany is completely defeated. The countries are united on the necessity of continuing to an ultimate victory. The Allies daily are growing stronger while Germany daily is growing weaker. Any attempt by the United states to bring about peace now would be regarded by Frenchmen, so Col. House was informed, as an unfriendly act on the part of the United States.

It is understood that Col. House will communicate the substance of the statement presented to him to President Wilson at Wasnington.

GERMAN WAR NEEDS TAKE BABIES' SOOTHERS.

LONDON, April 19.—The Exchange Telegraph Company publishes a despatch from its correspondent at Copenhagen who says the shortage of rubber in Germany is so acute that the government is arranging for next week a special campaign to collect rubber throughout the Empire. Not a single thing made of rubber, even soothers for babies and discarded overshoes, will be overlooked by the fleet of waggons which will daily parade the streets of German towns.

WILL ALSO BE ALLOWED TO GO

Thomas Riley of Hamilton Will be Released From Kingston Penitentiary

OTTAWA, April 20.—Thomas Riley, of Hamilton, whose release on parole from Kingston Penitentiary was recently made ineffective by the freeing of Thomas Riley of London, by mistake, is to be let go anyway. He will be released from Kingston Penitentiary in a few days.

Steps towards the extradition of Thomas Riley, of London, are now under way. There is some doubt, however, whether extradition proceedings will be pressed. Riley, of London, has always been a well-behave prisoner and is reported to be developing into a model citizen down in his home in Missouri and there is considerable doubt, besides, whether legal technicalities would not block the way to his return.

One reform effected by the release of the wrong Mr. Riley has been the establishment of a new system of freeing prisoners.

Warrants for release hereafter will contain, besides the name, full particulars as to age, crime committed, place of conviction, time served and length of sentence.

Washing Won't Rid Head of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and never fails to do the work.

GERMAN IS SUSPECTED.

Had Enlisted Twice, But Took Too Much Interest in Railway Bridge.

KINGSTON, April 20.—Karl Kessler, a German suspect, was placed in Fort Henry yesterday. He came here from Montreal two months ago and joined the mounted infantry for overseas service. He was discharged, and then went to Napanee, where he enlisted with the 47th Regiment. He was observed taking apparently too much interest in the bridge at Napanee over which the railway passes, and was taken into custody.

Villa's Defeat Is Confirmed

Carranza Men Are in Pursuit of Revolutionist Forces—The Mexican Fiasco.

EL PASO, Texa April 20.—It reports from Carranza sources are to be believed, Gen. Francisco Villa will soon be fighting for his life at Torreon. Despatches received by the Carranza agency state that General Villa's army, half destroyed by the loss of 14,000 men at Celaya, has been further weakened by the desertion of 3,000 men, who had followed Villa only while he was apparently winning.

Villa's troops have also abandoned their efforts to reach Tampico. The Carranza garrison at that port is reported marching southwest in pursuit of the retreating Villaistas.

London, April 19 The Mexican Consulate received a despatch from Gen. Carranza confirming the defeat of Gen. Francisco Villa at Celaya with the loss of 14,000 men at the hands of Gen. Obregon.

ALL WELL WITH THE CANADIANS IN GOOD SHAPE

LONDON, April 20—Capt. G. E. Hall of the Montreal Heavy Artillery writing to a London friend from the front, under the date of April 14, said that all was well with the Canadians and that things generally were in good shape.

Miss McInnes of Hamilton, who succeeded Miss McMahon as acting matron of the Queen's Canadian Hospital at Shorncliffe, has now joined a hospital at the front. Her departure is regretted by the committee in charge of the hospital.

Soldiers Blinded by Shock of Explosion

PARIS, April 19.—Dr. Sendral, who has made a study of firearm wounds as affecting the sight, declares that the former proportion of twelve per cent. to fifteen per cent. of wounds in the head has been increased in the present war. He attributes the increase in part to the war of trenches and in part to the increased effectiveness of shell fire. Fifty per cent. of wounds affecting the sight are caused by shell fragments, forty per cent. by rifle bullets, eight per cent. by shrapnel bullets and two per cent. various. The destruction of sight is in the greater number of cases the indirect result of wounds. There are a great many cases of what Dr. Sendral calls hysterical blindness. Men are frequently struck blind, as well as deaf and dumb, by shock.

Nervous Prostration and Heart Troubles

Nervous Prostration, or Neurasthenia, is one of the worst forms of nerve trouble and brings about a general weakness of the whole nervous system.

The symptoms presenting themselves are headache, a feeling of depression, disturbed and restless, unfreshing sleep, often troubled with dreams, fright when in crowded places, dread of being alone, horror of society, fright of travelling, muscular weakness, sense of fatigue upon effort, etc.

All are curable if taken in time.

Milburns Heart and Nerve Pills are just what you require at this time. They strengthen the nerves and build up the whole system.

Mrs. John Howson, Caledonia, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to let you know the great benefit your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills did for me. I suffered for four years with heart trouble and nervous prostration. I was so bad I could not go up stairs without sitting down at the top before I could go to my room. I could not sleep nor could I lie on my left side, for it would seem as if my heart would stop. I thought my time had come. I was doctoring with the doctor, but didn't get any benefit. I took eight boxes of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and am enjoying good health."

Price, 50 cents per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

"Just about that. They never came together, by the way, and Grell always called himself Mr. Johnson. His own name would have been too well known. Well, one night, or rather one morning, he had been winning pretty heavily. He must have had close upon four or five thousand dollars in notes on him. At the time I didn't attach any significance to the fact that two or three of the worst toughs at the table went out shortly after him. I followed about five minutes later to get a breath of air, and came on the gang in a narrow, deserted street, just as they brought Grell down with a sandbag. It was no business of mine and ordinarily I should have walked away, but that I'd had a little difference with one of the gang earlier in the day, so I sailed in with a gun, broke 'em up, and helped Grell to his hotel. He came round before I left him, and I told him my name, and he gave me five hundred dollars, telling me to look to him if ever I was in trouble.

"Well, next day I was fired from my job. I could guess that the people whose game I'd spoilt were at the bottom of it, but that didn't worry me much. I had a bit of money and Paris, Vienna, Rome—everywhere but Russia. I lived sometimes by my wits, sometimes by any odd job I could turn my hand to. My father and mother had both died, an my only living relative was my sister, a girl of eighteen, living in St. Petersburg. From her I hear occasionally."

A spasm crossed his face as though some painful recollection had been brought to his mind, and he passed a handkerchief across his bow, which had suddenly become wet with perspiration.

"It was through her that I again met Grell," he resumed, speaking more slowly. "She was alone and practically unprotected. She wrote to me that a certain high official had been paying her unwelcome attentions, but I suspected nothing till I one day learned that she had been arrested for a political offence—she, who never knew the meaning of the word politics. I knew what that meant. . . . At the time I was in straits myself, for fortune had not been kind at the cards. This was in Vienna. I was staring out of my window in a kind of daze when I saw a man pass in a motor car. It was Grell—the man whom I had known as Johnson.

"In desperation I sought him out—it was easy enough to find where he was staying—and told him my story. I asked him to loan me money, because I knew that I might have to bribe officials. He offered to do more—to accompany me to St. Petersburg and use all his influence on behalf of my sister.

"It was at his suggestion that I travelled as his valet. My appearance had altered since I was last in Russia, but difficulties might have arisen. We travelled night and day, but we were too late. The girl who had never harmed a single person in her white life was dead—killed by the hardships to which she had been subjected. I [illegible]

He covered his face with his hands for a moment and Foyle waited patiently. Ivan controlled himself with an effort. "Grell advised me to come away, but I was determined to stay for a while. I had work to do. I told him nothing, but steadily I sought for the man who had killed her as surely as though he had plunged a dagger in her heart. I found him at last——"

"Wait a moment," interjected Foyle quickly. "I want to know nothing of that; that has nothing to do with me." He had guessed what work it was that the hot-blooded Russian had remained to do. No man is bound to incriminate himself.

"It was through Grell that I got away scot-free. No one suspected the valet of so well-known a man. He asked no questions, though I could tell that he knew what—what I knew. He risked much to shield me, although never a word passed between us. Could I do less when it came to my turn I came back to England with him, and I remained his personal servant. I kept my distance from the other servants."

"In fact, you pretended to have little acquaintance with English?" interrupted Foyle.

Ivan nodded. "That was so. On the nights when I was free, I wandered about London and picked up a few old acquaintances, among them being Charlie Condit. I shan't tell what I knew about him, but it was enough to keep him civil, and later on he did what I told him.

"On the night that the murder occurred, I happened to be in the hall about nine or a little after, when I saw a man and a woman through the shaded glass standing on the steps outside. I opened the door before they could ring. For the moment I thought the man was Mr. Grell, but a second later I recognized Goldenburg. He did not remember me. The woman, too, I knew at once. I had met her occasionally in different cities of Europe. It was the Princess Petrovska. Goldenburg spoke of an appointment and showed me a note from Mr. Grell directing that the bearer should be shown to the study to await his arrival.

"That was enough for me. I showed them up and left them. I did not hear Mr. Grell return, but about ten o'clock he rang for me and met me at the door of his study. He told me that he was expecting a lady, and if she called she was to be brought straight up; and he said the other people were just going. Almost immediately after he told me she came. Wills was going to the door, but I was in front, and I showed her up."

Foyle shifted his position a little. "Who was she?" he asked.

"I couldn't see her face; she wore a heavy veil."

"All right; go on."

"I knocked at the door of the study, but no one replied. She pushed by me and entered, closing the door after her. I went to my own room. Whatever was taking place was no business of mine. I must have dozed off in my chair, for when I was awakened by Mr. Grell shaking me by the shoulder; he was white and quite collected.

"'Ivan,' he said, 'there's been murder. Come with me. Don't speak, and tread softly.'

"I followed him into the study. All the lights were out, and before turning them up he locked the door. As he turned the switch I could see the body lying on the couch, and drew back. 'Who is it?' I asked.

"'Goldenburg,' he replied. And after a pause: 'He was a relative of mine. I have killed him. You must help me to get away, Ivan.'

"He seemed profoundly moved and yet held himself strongly in hand. One thing I noticed. Although he said he had done it, his hands and clothes were spotless. And yet there had been much blood about the room. I said nothing of that, and he quickly began to turn things out of his pockets. Both he and the dead man were in evening dress, and he hastily transferred all his property to the dead man's pockets, taking what Goldenburg possessed. He picked up the sheath of the dagger from the floor. It was one he had bought in South America.

"'It will give us a chance to get well clear if they think that this is my body,' he explained. 'Go and pack a bag, Ivan.'

"When I got back with the bag, he had finished. He put on a hat and over coat and we went out, walked to Victoria Station, and from there took a taxicab to Charing Cross. From there we walked to an all-night Turkish bath establishment, and that gave us an opportunity to change into some rough tweeds that I'd shoved in the bag. In the morning we went to the East End and fixed up rooms with some people I knew of. We had come away without any money, but Grell somehow managed to get in touch with the Princess Petrovska, with whom, apparently, he had some arrangement. She had, it seems, booked through to Paris from Charing Cross, but instead of getting on the boat at Folkestone had returned by the next train and taken quiet lodgings at Kennington. That was to put you on a false track in case of accidents."

Foyle smiled a little ruefully. "So that was how it was done," he remarked.

"We were determined to get out of the country, but the reward bill with a description of Goldenburg that pictured Grell stopped us trying ordinary methods. It was necessary to raise money, and I, recklessly enough I suppose, went out with the pearls which Mr. Grell had entrusted to me, in the hope of meeting a jeweller, with whom I had a casual acquaintance, at the restaurant, when you fell in with me. The jeweller's letter which you found on me was, by the way, a forgery.

"When you seized me I was taken by surprise. When I was allowed to go, after you had told me that the dead man was not Grell, I felt certain that you would have me followed. Your men were very clever, and I could not shake 'em off at first. I was determined to go to any length to protect Grell, so I went into an outfitter's where there was a public telephone, and put a call to a place where I was sure to find Condit. I fixed up with him to wait for the man who was shadowing me, and I led him down to Whitechapel. It was simple enough for Condit to drop on him from behind, and then the two of us knocked him senseless, got him into a cab, and carried him away to Smike Street—to the place which you raided.

"Mr. Grell knew nothing about that incident till it was over. He was staying in Grave Street at the time, and the idea occurred to me of holding your man as a hostage. We meanwhile contrived to send a note to Sir Ralph Fairfield. In case of accidents, I was to meet him in Grave Street and lead him round about till I was certain he was not followed."

"Then you were the black-bearded man who fired at me!" exclaimed Foyle. "I might have guessed it."

That Racking Persistent Cough
Can Be Quickly Cured By
DR. WOOD'S NORWAY PINE SYRUP

All obstinate coughs and colds yield quickly to the general action of "Dr. Wood's" for the simple reason that this valuable preparation combines all the lung healing virtues of the Norway pine tree with which is combined Wild Cherry Bark, and the soothing, healing and expectorant properties of other excellent herbs and barks. This makes it, without any chance of denial, the best cough medicine on the market to-day.

When you ask for "Dr. Wood's" see that it is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark, and that the name, The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont., appears on the wrapper. Price, 25c and 50c.

Mrs. H. C. Kingston, Moose Jaw, Sask., writes: "I wish to recommend Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup as being the best cough medicine on the market. A few months ago I took a severe cold which left me with a racking cough. After trying several cough remedies, with no result, I decided to get a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and after taking the first two doses it began to effect a cure, and after continuing its use for a short time, I was entirely cured. I cannot say too much in its praise."

Neither Death nor Foe Can Daunt British Airman

Invincible in the Battles in the Skies, He Never "Scoots for Safety," as Do His German Opponents.

By Ernest Townley.

[Copyright, 1915, by the New York Herald Company and the London Daily Express —All Rights Reserved.]

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

GENERAL HEADQUARTERS, BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE.

If the Germans could only destroy, or even daunt, the British airmen, what a hoard of German secrets they would preserve! But they cannot daunt such men as the Royal Flying Corps is made of. They fear them instead. You see many a British aeroplane flying toward the German lines. I have seen no German Taube during the week I have been with the British army in France.

The German airman who ventures above the British lines does not wait to argue the point when a British flier rises for the chase. He scoots for safety, for the British air force has shown that it is fearless of death, eager to destroy, and invincible in a battle in the skies.

Some areroplanes at the front are attached to various sections of the army, for an important part of their work is to discover enemy gun positions and report them to the British commanders over the way, so that the British batteries may pitch their shells in the right place. They report progress while the fight is going on.

But further back machines are refitted and tuned up to concert pitch. The machines that have been "ditched" by some unlucky descent or torn in the wing by shrapnel or rifle bullets come home to be overhauled and repaired. Sometimes a few patches and a dab of "varnish" (it is really some other mixture) are sufficient; sometimes the poor creature has to be stripped to the bone—it looks like the dissection of an unwinged hornet—and built up anew—new wings, new wires, new screws, new tail, new engine parts. They showed me one proud shell—the body of the aeroplane that fought and scattered about a dozen German rivals somewhere near Dunkirk a little while ago.

Talk Little of Death.

What eagle eyed lads they are, these British fighters in the skies! Continual watching from their ethereal eyries has given them a piercing vision. Cherubs might envy their cheeks, pink as coral from frequent contact with the cold, pure air through which they soar and dive and sail. They are as quiet and as undemonstrative in their ways as the crew of a herring smack.

I saw a couple of them, in goatskin coats and leather skull caps, come striding lightly across the heath from the sheds. Their little barque was ready for the voyage. They climbed aboard and took their seats, and one of them turned his head and gave a nod. The propeller whirled and roared, and, without a word or a thought for anything but the machine and duty, they rose from the heath and sailed away for the distant German lines.

They meet with the good luck they deserve, as a rule. Shrapnel comes up at them, but rarely hits the mark. Now and then wings are riddled, but the little bee holes make little difference and can easily be put right when they return. It is not often that a man is hit.

Now and then there happens the thing that men must expect in war. It is soon told and, for the time, forgotten, for men have to-morrow to look for and to provide against when they are in the midst of war.

"Hear about —— and ——?"

"No; what happened?"

"Machine took fire—came down in our lines—both burnt."

"Dead?"

"Yes. Probably got a bullet through the petrol tank."

The conversation turns to something else. When man is at war he does not want to chatter about so grisly a thing as death.

"When a man dies," said Jasper Petulengro, "he is cast into the earth, and his wife and children sorrow over him. If he has neither wife nor child, then his father and mother, I suppose; and if he is quite alone in the world, why, then, he is cast into the earth, and there is an end of the matter."

"And do you think that is the end of man?"

"There's an end of him, brother; more's the pity."

"Why do you say so?"

"Life is sweet, brother."

"Do you think so?"

"Think so! There's night and day, brother, both sweet things; sun, moon and stars, brother, all sweet things; there's likewise the wind on the heath. Life is very sweet, brother. Who would wish to die?"

Who would wish to die? Yet these men at the front, although life is very sweet, face death daily so that Great Britain may conquer and live.

The wind brings the sound of guns.

PRINCE PONIATOWSKI FOR POLISH THRONE

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

PETROGRAD, April 17.

Among Napoleon I.'s many valiant field marshals, Prince Joseph Poniatowski probably was the most popular. An evidence thereof still is to be found in many French peasants' cottages, where it is not uncommon to find a picture of the Polish noble. It has been stated by some students of the great Napoleon's career that it was at one time the Emperor's intention to make Joseph Poniatowski ruler of a re-established Polish kingdom.

The idea of raising a Poniatowski to the throne of Poland now has been revived by several Polish newspapers, and in a recent issue of the Swiat, one of the most widely circulated periodicals in Poland, a writer speaks expectantly of the return of the country's expatriated princely families at the end of the present war, from which Poland hopes to emerge united under an independent government.

"Two Poniatowskis, father and son," says the Swiat, "are fighting in the French army for the great cause of liberty and justice. When the horrible tempest has been stilled and peace is restored in Europe, Poland again will assemble its scattered parts and form a monarchy of its own. Then thousands of our nobles will return from their exile, and Warsaw will hail with joy the scions of the Radziwill family coming from Berlin, Vienna and Rome, the Czartoryskis from Paris and Vienna, the Poniatowskis from Paris and the United States, the Zamoyskis, &c.

"But it is chiefly Prince André Poniatowski and his four sons in whose repatriation the Poles will take the greatest pride and delight. They are deserving in the fullest measure of the country's admiration and love, and to them the Polish nation is looking for leadership in the accomplishment of its independence."

Another Polish publication recalls the fact that Catherine II of Russia recognized the hereditary rights of the house of Poniatowski to the crown of Poland, and states that Prince André Poniatowski, "with his royal ancestry and republican antecedents, ought to be an agreeable choice even to those Poles who insist that Poland has ever been an elective monarchy."

This Prince André Poniatowski, who is serving, together with his oldest son, Stanislas, in the French army, is a director of the Crédit Foncier. He is a descendant of a brother of Stanislas Poniatowski, who in 1761 became King of Poland. Prince André's father was an aide de camp of Napoleon III and his great-grandfather was the celebrated marshal, Joseph Poniatowski.

NORTH SEA VIGIL CAN'T STIFLE HUMOR IN FLEET'S NEWSPAPER

None of the Shattering Strain Which the Men of Great Britain's Navy Are Supposed To Be Under Is Seen in Bright Columns of the Natal Newsletter—Publication's Circulation Takes a Big Jump.

The stripped hulls, slinking through the gloom,
At gaze and gone again—
The Brides of Death that wait the groom—
The Choosers of the Slain!

—KIPLING.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

LONDON, April 17.

WHILE men that go down to the seven seas in ships, as well as men that don't, have remarked repeatedly upon the nerve shattering strain under which it would appear the officers and men of Great Britain's navy have been almost incessantly during their eight months old vigil in the North Sea, the warriors on board the vessels of the grand fleet tell a different tale. Notwithstanding the vague uncertainty, the memory of the fate of those who perished, stricken by the unseen subsurface enemy, the eternal buffeting of the elements, and the ghastly monotony of it all, "Jack afloat" has demonstrated that he still possesses the priceless quality of his sense of humor, nor does he seem to be in any danger of losing it.

On board the Natal, the second cruiser squadron of the Royal Navy, is published weekly a twelve page newspaper, entitled the Natal Newsletter. This remarkable periodical had its inception on board before the commencement of hostilities, and it was at first thought that the advent of war would mean a suspension of publication.

Circulation Increases.

Instead of such being the case, however, the Natal Newsletter, before little known outside of the service, has come to be regarded with the greatest interest in Great Britain, and the increase in circulation has taxed to the utmost the somewhat limited newspaper plant on board.

Through the quaint humor with which every column of the Natal Newsletter almost bubbles over there can be detected notes of hardships endured uncomplainingly. In spite of the fact that these are glossed over and cloaked in levity and jest, the men on board have suffered during these months of storm and watchful patrolling. Here is what the weather reporter on board had to say in the issue of March 20:—

"M'yes, it has been a bit changeable. There's not a drawer in the whole Meteorological Office that hasn't been opened this season, but the last week has been the limit. The weather clerk might have been a bit more reasonable—or should we say seasonable?—and have given us the failing flakes about three months ago. Winds of March, which with the aid of April showers bring forth the dandelions in the month of May, are here, as always, but little drops of Christmas ought to be kept in close confinement during these months. Tobogganing in R. N. Navy.' Nice, isn't it? This is spring, in case you don't know.'

On the cover of this interesting number is a picture, drawn by the "staff artist" of the Newsletter, entitled "Shooting the Moon." The illustration shows a man in the garb of the Ottoman leaving the vicinity of the Dardanelles. In the background, the Turkish flag, flying from a battlemented turret, is about to be pierced by a dangerous appearing shell of obviously heavy calibre. The caption in part follows:—"The Kaiser, apparently not satisfied with a place in the sun, wanted to cast some kultur seeds in the moon, or that crescent portion of it that Abdul lays claim to. But Abdul is bent upon leaving that lunar slice and several unpaid bills as well. Wives are liabilities, not assets, anyhow."

In an article entitled "The Sick Man of Europe" an anonymous writer refers to the late Virgin Queen of England, represented by the superdreadnought Queen Elizabeth, delivering a lecture on the sin of polygamy. Another refers to the shells of the vessel's mighty guns as "Aunt Lizzie's fifteen-inch pills.

Under the head of "Tit-Bits" this appears:—"Owing to the change of scenery football and kindred [illegible] are off the boards. Musings are now being exercised on such [illegible] as ludo and bridge. Nothing at all exciting about these, unless some thrower makes the dice show too many sixes in succession or finds an ace trump hanging about somewhere. Taking everything into consideration, however, we are still reasonably sane."

The editor of the Newsletter addresses his readers thus in the leading editorial:—"Nothing to reflect upon this week. Half speed everywhere, but space will be filled somehow. Possibility of some slight delay in issue some weeks is our only trouble, but we feel sure readers will be in entire accord with us in our efforts to 'keep locked up.' The navy will not cease from troubling on account of the necessity to publish Newsletters.

"Outside the Natal's little sphere everything appears to be going satisfactorily—the Dardanelles blockade and France's growing smile. The question which, like the mouth organ, is always with us, 'Will they come out?' is, as yet, unanswered. Forget it—and stand by."

After referring to sartorial repairs adroitly made by an amateur tailor on board as "patching the seats of the mighty," one of the writers tells of a new malady developed as a result of driving in the teeth of the bleak blasts of the North Sea. He calls it "pneumatics," remarking that it is a combination of pneumonia and rheumatics. It is said to have appeared only in very mild form, however.

Then Bun Tyng, the versatile editor, whose official title on board is Yeoman of Signals Wilson, relapses into rhyme under the laconic head "And War Came!"

"Then Mother made socks of violent hue
And Sister sent shirts—her name is Sue,
While Father contributed merely a few
Pipes, fags and boxes of matches.

"And Sweet Cousin Kate came in with a share;
Result—woolly helmet and mittens, a pair,
While Auntie Jane asked one day if she dare
Supply a good red chest protector.

"Body belts, comforters, gloves still arrive
From relatives who during war will contrive
To remember dear Jack—'Oh, is he alive?'
And make good their past sad omissions.

"Of all the good things that come by such post
The little fat parcel that pleases him most
Is that which contains a real welcome host
Of goods he can jolly well eat."

The poet also is author of an essay entitled "Strong Language," which, in spite of the choice of subject, might be considered a piece of typical seafaring humor.

"Strong drink is a mocker," quotes Bun Tyng. "Language of the same variety is a shocker, unless one happens to be related to a cabman or a politician. None of the really expressive terms are to be found in the average dictionary and professors of elocution refuse to coach their pupils in this side line. In spite of these drawbacks, however, like most other good things the cult of the lurid adjective flourishes.

Sea Fights and Local Color.

"It's curious that the person who lives on or by the sea has a natural mastery of the lingo technique. The ease with which a Billingsgate cod walloper can crumple up a special constable cannot be beaten even by a socialist orator with twice the lung power. A distinguished writer once said, 'Bad language is excusable in a sailor.' An amendment should be made, 'and proficiency in this study will make promotion easier than a Zeppelin descent.'

"Rhetoric and other £400 a year flourishes are the glad tidings when replying to a vote of thanks at a Sunday school picnic, but when endeavoring to convince a sceptic that the two bob (shillings) he inquires about have already been paid, the emphatic form of address is by far the most preferable—and popular. For driving home a point it's the pointed remark every time.

"Speechifiers have just about used up all the dry, matter-of-fact rigmarole. Stilted copy book stuff doesn't fit in with the announcement of a naval victory any more than mottoes and chocolate, but they pass very well. These sea fight accounts lack local color, as do the recruiting posters. The real sergeant-major would make the unrecruited one shrivel up if he had a free hand with the poster. The only fear is that the hoarding would catch alight.

"We've had futurist and cubist pictures; what about some metrical language? Ordinary talk is a matter of vulgar fractions. We want something with points to it; something brassely British, not Bernhardi Shawish."

Never Heard of "Billy" Sunday.

As far as could be ascertained, the author of this never even heard of the Rev. "Billy" Sunday.

Another editorial note refers to the Erin, one of the war ships launched since the beginning of the war, following the journalistic suit of the Natal, and carries a note of wistfulness besides:—"The latest move cannot be discussed. Just remember that there are a few people left in the fleet who have a great difficulty in realizing that real people go to real shops and buy real things. In short, somebody else is due for a spell.

"It is understood that the Erin is about to launch into the troublous waters of journalism. Here's a glad hand and the hope that our baby brother will become as healthy as the Xata Newsletter—but he's not baptised yet."

Needless Hardships Inflicted on the Population of Northern France, Many Non-Combatants Having Been Carried Into Captivity, Swiss Philanthropists and Press Say.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

BASLE, via LONDON, April 17, 1915.—Of the numberless and unnecessary acts of cruelty of which Germany has been accused in the present war, nothing can perhaps be more inexcusable than the condition to which the Huns have reduced the civilian population in the part of Northern France occupied by Germany. Thousands of French soldiers have here left their wives and families. Some of them have aged and infirm parents. When they were compelled to leave at the beginning of the war there was no time to make any provision for their sustenance. Many of the poorer classes had only enough to live on for a few weeks, but the state of war has now continued for months.

The small resources in money or food which these wretched families had at the beginning were quickly exhausted. The military authorities took whatever they had from them. Swiss philanthropists proposed measures of relief. The first step naturally was to find out what were the needs of these poor inhabitants. But here the very best intentions were frustrated by the iron rule of Prussian militarism. No letter was allowed to enter or leave the conquered districts. Not even printed postcards such as are supplied to soldiers in the field are admitted. A barrier of steel and iron surrounds the population in the north of France. Some 2,000,000 persons of every age are thus shut up for no palpable reason.

These unfortunate persons are treated as prisoners of war. Tons of letters addressed to them are lying in the Swiss post offices. None may be forwarded, and if they are they are simply torn up and thrown to the winds. It is immaterial to the Prussian military dictator whether the wife, daughter or baby of a French soldier or civilian is starving in Northern France. The husband or father shall know nothing of it. He may not inquire into the needs of his aged father or mother. No facility of any kind is given to him to communicate with those he left behind.

Needless Cruelties.

The Swiss Press, which calls attention to these facts, places them under the headline "Cruautés Inutiles." Needless cruelties they are. Those in authority in the conquered districts cannot allege, as an excuse, that they are not aware of the existing state of things. They themselves have created it, and they daily enforce it. They do so with callousness and an utter absence of humanitarian feeling. Now and then the news is spread that the military vigor has been relaxed. Immediately thousands of letters arrive at the Red Cross office in Switzerland, but before they can be forwarded a counter order is received to say that the facilities have again been withdrawn. A Swiss newspaper asks why it is that in a modern war, conducted by an alleged civilized people such as Germany claims to be, the civil inhabitants of a country should be treated as prisoners of war? Never before was such a principle applied.

There is another side to the question. Conquered peoples were, according to Roman and Greek custom, dragged away into captivity as slaves. Germany has not proclaimed the revival of this kind of military slavery, but in practice it often amounts to the same thing. She points to the fact that a certain number of her subjects have been interned in other belligerent countries. The case of the inhabitants dragged away from their homes in Northern France is quite different. These people were in their own country, in their own villages, and in their own homes. They had a perfect right to be there, having been born and brought up there, and the conqueror was there merely by right of conquest.

The German commander, when leaving Amiens, a French town, where, moreover, he was well treated during his stop, being fed and furnished with supplies, carried away from 1,200 to 1,500 men, including youths under eighteen and aged men over fifty. Near Lille it is not known exactly how many were seized and taken into captivity. I heard from some people who escaped that about October 10 there were between twelve thousand and fifteen thousand on the roads trying to escape toward Hazebrouck and St. Omer. They were overtaken, in small detachments, by Uhlans, and at least five thousand of them were carried into captivity. A similar number, if not a still larger one, was found in Lille itself and shipped away into Germany in trains that took five and six days to reach their destination. During that time the unfortunate prisoners, or rather war captives, depended for food on the charity of the inhabitants of the places through which they passed.

Hard Tasks in the Camps.

Germany has a number of camps where these prisoners are still kept. Those oftenest heard of are at Zwickau, Picham, Erfurt, Cassel, Gustrow, Chemnits and Altengrabenow. There they are made to break stones, to carry water and to build roads. At Wahn the civilian captives from the north of France may be seen driving steam rollers for crushing stones on the highway or dragging heavily loaded carts. I read in yesterday's papers printed here that the German authorities are reserving, certain military grounds near Mulhausen, and Colmar for the cultivating of potatoes, to be carried on by the military captives, under the supervision of landsturm men with rifles and bayonets.

Germany tries to excuse herself by pointing out that France also is using some of her prisoners of war to make roads in Morocco, and employing them in similar labors in the South of France. But these are real prisoners of war; that is to say, soldiers who were captured or surrendered with arms in their hands. They are not civilians dragged away from their villages and their homes, husbands separated from their wives, fathers and mothers torn from their children. Besides, the prisoners so used by the French fully realize their condition as prisoners of war.

They know that according to all the rules of modern warfare France has a right to treat them as prisoners of war, and in most cases they even ask to be allowed to work, and are happy when they get the permission, for the work assigned to them is only what they are accustomed to. It permits them, moreover, to earn trifling sums with which to improve their lot as prisoners, and also helps to make their captivity less tedious.

GERMAN PRIVATE TRIED TO "STIR UP" THE WAR

[SPECIAL DESPATCH.]

BERLIN, April 17.

German newspapers tell of an incident of the war contained in a report made recently by Colonel Karl Muller, who is with the German army in France.

Colonel Muller said a German officer, who is an opera singer in Frankfort in times of peace, quartered his company near an old French château in Northern France. While making a tour of inspection he discovered that one of the sentries on duty outside the château was missing. Upon inquiry he was told that this sentry had left his post to go on scout duty and learn if the village a few metres off was occupied by the French.

"The man must be crazy," said the officer, "to risk going across the open country under such a fire to which we are continually exposed."

He accordingly despatched a Uhlan who rode a very fast horse to bring the man back. The Uhlan soon returned with the sentry, who belonged to the Bavarian Landwehr troops.

"What made you do such a foolhardy thing?" asked the officer.

"Herr Lieutenant, I simply wanted to scout around and learn if X was occupied by the French and to see if something could be done to drive them out."

"But who gave you such an order?"

"An order? Nobody, Herr Lieutenant. I simply did so on my own responsibility."

"Don't you know that a soldier should only do what he is ordered?"

"Oh, yes, I know that, but pardon me, Herr Lieutenant, for saying so, in this war there is now nothing happening at all. In fact, it is no longer a war unless a man makes up his mind to stir up something on his own account."

HAVE YOU A CHILD?

Many women long for children, but because of some curable physical derangement are deprived of this greatest of all happiness.

The women whose names follow were restored to normal health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Write and ask them about it.

"I took your Compound and have a fine, strong baby."—Mrs. JOHN MITCHELL, Massena, N. Y.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a wonderful medicine for expectant mothers."—Mrs. A. M. MYERS, Gordonville, Mo.

"I highly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before child-birth, it has done so much for me."—Mrs. E. M. DORRA, R. R. 1, Conshohocken, Pa.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build up my system and have the dearest baby girl in the world."—Mrs. MOSS BLAKELEY, Imperial, Pa.

"I praise the Compound whenever I have a chance. It did so much for me before my little girl was born."—Mrs. E. W. SANDERS, Rowlesburg, W. Va.

"I took your Compound before baby was born and feel I owe my life to it."—Mrs. WINNIE TILLIS, Winter Haven, [illegible]

WESTERN BRONCOS ARE WAR'S VICTIMS

DENVER, April 17—The European war promises to mark the final passage of the wild horse of the range, the disappearance of the bucking broncho so long associated with the west.

Even now there are practically no wild horses such as once roamed the ranges and with the inroads being made upon the horses of the west by the war, his half-civilized brother, the bronco, promises to disappear. Thousands of horses have been taken from Colorado, Wyoming and other western states. Not only have British and French buyers invaded this section, but representatives of the Italian government have combed the country for mounts. During the last few weeks an Italian buyer purchased several hundred horses and so great was his haste to get them to his home country that they were sent by express from Denver to the east instead of by freight. There they were to be hurried aboard a steamer for Italy.

Severeal million dollars have been spent for these horses for war purposes. The greatest demand, of course, is for stout, sound horses, capable of work as cavalry mounts or for artillery. The entire country has been gone over two or three times by buyers for different countries and still the demand has not been filed.

This draining of the west of horses means that in the rehabilitation a better breed of horse will be produced. It is this that sounds the death knell of the bronco. The Government has been working for years encouraging the breeding of better horses. Stallions and mares of better breeds of draft and general purpose horses have been placed throughout the West. Their progney are already influincing the general trend for development of the horses in the sections in which the work of the government [illegible] As to horses to replace those sold for war service increases, it will be animals of better breeds which will take their places.

Another factor having a great influence is the fenching of ranches — something which was unknown in years gone by. This ended the day of the wild horse and the bronco, although given to bucking and pitching, has gradually become tamer and more domesticated.

There was a time when it was not so very difficult to find a horse in the West which no human being could ride. That day has now gone by. The last great horse of this type was "Steamboat," which died only this year. It is claimed that no man ever rode "Steamboat" legitimately. The greatest riders of the entire West tried and failed, all finally being thrown in some way or other.

When the British government was purchasing horses for use in the Boer war it was necessary to employ bronco busters, who spent weeks battling with the prospective mounts for British cavalrymen, before they were conquered and sufficiently subdued to the saddle to satisfy the government. This year there is little evidence that the British or French are in danger of suffering casualties through encountering the American horses.

Constant association with men through the years beween the Boer war and the present, instead of roaming over unfenced plains, has had its influence on the horse. The "never say die" fighting spirit of the old bronco in his struggle against the touch of leather and his intense hatred of man, because he was representative of enslavement to the saddle, has slowly flickered out. Breeding and association has brought about the inevitable. Within a few years it will probably be hard for even a "wild west" show manager to find a western horse which will buck though he meant it.

HOUSECLEANING

LINOLEUM

The old-fashioned method of scrubbing with soap and water is being abandoned for the better method of waxing and polishing, as water penetrates and softens the fabric and so causes it to wear out quickly.

RONUK

the English Wax Polish and Cleanser is a combined cleanser and polish. It removes the dirt without the help of soap and water and leaves your linoleum with a bright, polished surface, which will stand wear and tear. The wear will be on the RONUK, not on the Linoleum. 74

Police Magistrate Dead.

Mr. Horace Falconer Jell, Police Magistrate of St. Thomas, died at his home on Mitchell Street after a lengthy illness.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 17.—Predictions of a big decrease in the United States visible supply total on Monday helped today to bring about an advance in the price of wheat. The market closed nervous at 1c to 2⅛c above last night. Other leading staples all scored net gains, corn 1⅛c to 1½c, oats ⅜c to ⅝c, and provisions 2½c to 17½c.

TORONTO GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 17.—Wheat made a gain on the week of 3⅝c to 3⅞c, on oats 2⅛c to 2½c, and on flax 3⅝c to 4¼c. Opening prices today were ⅛c lower to ⅛c higher for wheat; oats unchanged for May, and flax ⅛c to ⅝c higher. Trading in futures on the Winnipeg market were confined principally to the speculative element but on the whole the volume of business was light.

The cash demand was good for all grades of wheat, barring No 1 northern, and offerings were about equal to the demand. Spot and for opening of navigation delivery were both in demand, and oats were also in good demand for the same delivery. An enquiry for cash barley also was in evidence today. In export circles no new business was reported.

Wheat futures closed ⅛c to 1⅝c up, cash 1⅝c to 1⅞c, oats ⅛c to ⅜c up, and flax ⅛c to ⅜c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 17.—There was a fairly good enquiry from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat for May-June shipment, but at the prices bid—from 3c to 6c per bushel below cost—no business resulted. The domestic trade in coarse grains continues very quiet, there being little or no demand either from local or outside buyers and the market in consequence is dull, but the feeling is firm in sympathy with the strength in the west. Offerings are well maintained. The trade in flour was slow for both export and local account. The demand for millfeed is quiet. The tone of the butter market is firm at prices from 9c to 10c per pound higher than a year ago. Cheese is quiet, but the market is firm. Demand for eggs is good and prices rule steady.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, April 17.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.62; No. 1 northern, $1.59⅛ to $1.61⅛; No. 2 northern, $1.53 to $1.55⅛; May, $1.55¼.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 72½c to 73c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 55c to 55⅝c.

Flour and bran unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, April 17.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.61⅛; No. 1 northern, $1.60⅛; May, $1.58¼.

CHEESE MARKETS.

LONDON, Ont., April 17.—Eight factories offered 320 boxes colored cheese. April make, at today's board. No sales. Bidding 15½c to 16c.

BELLEVILLE, April 17.—Eighty colored cheese and 35 white offered; 65 colored sold at 16 13-16c and 356 white sold at 16 13-16c. Balance refused at same price.

ST. HYACINTHE, Que., April 17.—At the opening meeting of the butter and cheese board held today ten factories offered one hundred packages of butter, sold at 35c, and 100 boxes cheese sold at 16½c.

COWANSVILLE, Que., April 17.—At the meeting of the Eastern Townships Dairymen's Association, held here this afternoon, twelve factories offered 411 boxes of butter. Seven buyers were present. All sold at 34 1-8c.

CATTLE MARKETS

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 4000; market steady. Beeves, $6 20 to $8.55; western steers, $5.65 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $3 to $8.25; calves, $5.75 to $9.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 6000; market strong; light, $7.25 to $7.65; mixed, $7.20 to $7.65; heavy, $6.90 to $7.50; rough, $6.90 to $7.10; pigs, $5.75 to $6.80; bulk of sales, $7.35 to $7.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 10,000; market steady; native, $7.50 to $8.65; lambs, native, $8.25 to $10.65.

Examining Kron Prinz's Hull.

NEWPORT NEWS, April 19.—The German auxiliary cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm now occupies the same berth at the Newport News shipyard, in which Prinz Eitel Friedrich was moored during her 30-days' stay. The big sea-raider heaved up anchor early yesterday and was towed to the yards. She will be drydocked Monday, when examination of her hull below the water line will be made by the same naval board which surveyed the Eitel, and recommend the time limit for her repairs.

Gouin Honors Laine.

QUEBEC, April 19.—Hon. John C. Laine, Minister without portfolio, and representative of the Irish Catholics in Sir Lomer Gouin's Cabinet, has been nominated legislative councillor for Stadacona.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

William Dunn, of Yarker, was seriously injured when his automobile turned turtle while he was driving from Yarker to Camden East. He was pinned under the car.

At a meeting of the license commissioners for West Durham, at Bowmanville, the license of the Newcastle Hotel was refused for 1915-16. This is the last license in West Durham.

Pte. Harry Nichol, a member of the 39th Battalion, C.E.F., mobilized in Belleville, died here at an early hour Saturday of spinal meningitis. This is the third fatal case since mobilization there.

The steamship St. George reached St. John, N.B., Saturday from Bermuda with 300 German prisoners of war. They are chiefly sailors from warships. They were taken to the detention camp at Amherst, N.S.

Dr. D. A. Coon has been appointed superintendent of the Kingston General Hospital, succeeding Dr. H. A. Boyce, resigned. Dr. Coon is a native of Elgin, and graduated at Queen's University twenty-five years ago.

Ludwig Paul Selbach, claiming to be an American citizen, was remanded to custody in London, Eng., yesterday on the charge of being an alien enemy, who had failed to register himself in accordance with the British regulations.

Another Evaporator Burned.

BELLEVILLE, April 19.—On Friday night at the Village of Frankfort, Sidney Township, an evaporator, owned by George Graham, and operated by R. J. Graham of this city, was, with its contents, destroyed by fire. There is no doubt in Mr. Graham's mind that the fire was incendiary. This is the third evaporator burned in this section this year, and all were operated by the Graham Company. The other buildings destroyed were located at Tweed and Shannonsville.

Not In Murder Plot.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., April 19.—Mrs. Wm. Leithenen was yesterday found not guilty of conspiracy in connection with the death of her husband, who was murdered last fall by Amelia Palma, a young Italian, who has been sentenced to be hanged for the crime.

Lt.-Col. Johnson Dead.

MONTREAL, April 19.—Lt.-Col. Lacey Johnson, who was recently appointed general welfare agent of the C. P. R., died on Saturday night of peritonitis, after three weeks illness. He was born at Abington, Berkshire, Eng., and was in his 60th year.

EL SIRR IS BOMBED.

Three Allied Aeroplanes Pay Visit to the Sinai Peninsula.

CAIRO, April 19.—(Via London.)—The following official communication was issued yesterday:

"On the 15th three aeroplanes made a flight from the canal to El Sirr, some 25 miles south of El Arish, on the Sinai peninsula, dropping bombs, which were effective. From 150 to 200 tents were seen. The distance flown was more than 170 miles.

"No other enemy troops were seen this side of El Sirr, though one or two small posts of about 20 men are known to exist.

"On the same date a French cruiser bombarded a camp near El Arish; a seaplane directing the fire. No large number of troops were seen, though enemy guns opened fire on both the cruiser and the seaplane. Neither was hit, however.

"On the 17th a French cruiser, again assisted by a seaplane, bombarded the enemy's camp well to the south of Ghazzah Town (some 40 miles southwest of Jerusalem). Considerable damage was done."

Cathedral for Target.

AMIENS, France, April 19.—Seven persons were killed and eight were wounded by bombs dropped by two German aeroplanes which flew over this city Friday, one in the morning and one in the evening. The cathedral apparently was the target of the missiles, but it was not damaged.

A Smooth, Hairless Skin for Every Woman

(The Modern Beauty)

With the aid of a plain delatone paste it is an easy matter to rid the skin of unsightly hairy growths. The paste is made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. This is applied to the hairs not wanted and after 2 or 3 minutes rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. When you go to your druggist for delatone, be sure you get the genuine article.

Successfully Posed as a Man For 30 Years

BOSTON, April 14 — This is the story of the strange career of "Mister" Albert Albert Beaudoin of the village of Willimansett in the city of Chicopee.

"Mister" Beaudoin went to Willamansett a year ago secured a mans job and did a man's work as a man. The other day "Mister" Beaudoin died suddenly, and with death came the revelation that "Mister" Beaudon, who was in reality Miss Florentine Beaudoin, who had successfully posed as a man for thirty years.

Inquiry yesterday among "his" friends brought to light these facts of 'his' life:—

'He' wooed a girl neighbour as 'his' sweetheart.

Returning after an absence of seventeen years, even 'his' sister did not know 'him'.

'He' smoked and chewed tobacco.

'His' masquerade began when 'he' was fifteen.

None suspected 'him' so well did 'he' play 'his' part'.

This, too, despite 'his' boast that 'he' never had to shave.

Did same at Arctic Centre, R. I.

Also at Berlin, N. H.

Worked as a farmhand.

Also as a grocer's clerk.

Drove a delivery waggon.

Lastly, worked as a millhand, and so successfully maintained her man's pose that none of 'his' male co-workers once suspected that 'Albert' was a woman.

Only 'his' sister knew the secret. She lives in Williamsnett and even she was deceived at first. And when she knew the truth, she kept the secret faithfully, and none but she and 'Albert' knew.

Why did 'he' do it?

The sister said yesterday that she hadn't the slightest idea.

Was it a disappointment in love?

The sister said she didn't know.

Was it because 'he' coveted the greater freedom of manhood?

"I do not know," said the sister.

'Albert' was born in Canada. At the age of fifteen the girl came to the States and soon was embarked upon her strange career as a woman-man.

'Albert' travelled through the West and Middle West, working at a dozen different kinds of employment. Ten years ago 'he' came east, worked in Rhode Island and later in New Hampsire, and then came to Massachusetts.

A year ago 'Mister' Beaudoin was introduced to Willimansett people, soon became 'his' friends.

'Albert' set 'himself' up in a modest cottage, and finally secured employment in one of the mills of the American Thread Company. At home 'he' kept a flock of hens, did some gardening and lived alone.

But, 'Albert' did not live the life of a recluse. Man spoke of 'him' as a good mixer and a 'hale fellow well met,' and 'he' was accepted as a man with a man's strength.

Before long 'Albert' had been introduced to the daughter of a neighbour. In time, because of 'his' attentions, she was referred to as "Albert's sweetheart."

"Albert" had not then made known 'his' identity to 'his' sister, Mrs. Joseph Lachapelle.

However 'he' was wont to call at the sister's home to secure food for 'his' hens. It was on one of these trips that the sister discovered "Albert" to be her sister Florentine, whom she had not seen for seventeen years.

In 'his' cottage "Albert" read a great deal, smoked or chewed, looked after the household, and always kept 'his' clothing neat and clean.

One day last week "Albert" was stricken ill, and fainted as a passing neighbour called at the door. A doctor was summoned, and arrived a few minutes before death came.

In the house were found no papers which would throw a light on "Mister" Beaudoin's strange career, and the motive for 'his' masquerade as a man will probably never be known.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

Says Backache is Sign You Have Been Eating Too Much Meat

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels; removing all the body's urinous waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about two ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Paderewski Says 10,000,000 Starve in Poland

NEW YORK, April 19.—Ten million Poles are starving, and Poland, a country seven times as large as Belgium, is in ruins. So Ignace Jan Paderewski, arrived Saturday night on the White Star liner Adriatic, not as Paderewski the famous pianist, but as Paderewski the Polish patriot, whose heart is too sad to permit him to play.

Asked if he intended to give piano recitals as a means of raising money for his starving countrymen Paderewski sadly replied:

"No, I cannot. I am unable to play the piano. I am in mourning for my country and I have not touched a piano for two months. I cannot go on a platform now and give my best to my hearers.

"Poland has been devastated to an extent where Belgium's plight might be forgotten. Towns and villages have been completely wiped out. Nothing remains but stones and ashes. Families who were wealthy a few months ago are as poor as the poorest. They do not need riches; their only cry is for bread.

"My friends ask me if I am for Russia or for Germany, and I have told them I am for neither. I am pro-Poland. We have established headquarters for the relief work in Lusanne, Switzerland, and while we have not as yet made a direct appeal to England, we have received generous help from many anonymous friends.

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap Dries Your Scalp, Causing Dandruff, Then Hair Falls Out.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine, and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong, and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

THE SPRING DRIVE NOW A REALITY

General Forward Movement All Along Line

BRITISH FORCING FOE'S ENTRENCHED LINES IN BELGIUM SLOWLY BACK

"General Fighting Has Commenced at Several Important Points Along the Battle Front" Announces the French Official Communique---Strict Censorship is Being Enforced---French Drive Towards Rhine Progressing.

HEAVY CASUALTIES MAY BE LOOKED FOR

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 20.---French official.---General fighting has commenced at several important points along the battle front. At present the exchanges are chiefly confined to artillery, and this is believed to be the prelude to the allies' general forward movement all along the line. The chief French activity is in the region of Soissons, in the main sector at Rheims, and at a number of points in the Argonne.

That the fighting is expected to be pushed with vigor is indicated by the enforcement of a strict censorship.

LONDON, April 20.--(Special Cable.)--The British "spring drive" in France and Belgium is now a reality.

From a point near the sea in Belgium to the vicinity of Lille, British troops are forcing the Germans' entrenched line back. The centre of the attack is to the east of Ypres, and the main strength of the British force is believed here to extend northward beyond Pilken. It is accepted here that the present movements, referred to in the official reports as "important," is the turning of the attempt to reclaim Beiglum from the Germans. There has been much criticism of the British war office for a failure to concentrate its efforts on Belgian territory, because of the large number of Belgian refugees now in England, and it is thought here that the general staff has finally decided to at least test out the strength of the German lines. Incidentally, should the movement succeed, the main German lines of communication will be threatened, which will be of great assistance to General Joffre in the movement begun by the French commander in chief.

While the British are forcing the fighting on the extreme north west of the long battle line the French are also very active at the other extremity in Alsace, where the drive towards the Rhine is gaining impetus every day. The weather conditions have materially improved and the highways and fields are again in such shape that movements of artillery are possible. The British losse are admitted heavy, because of the necessity of attacking heavily entrenched positions.

The Daily Mail's corespondent at Rotterdam telegraphs: "Accounts of fierce fighting southeast of Ypres reached me this morning. All yesterday the wounded were arriving at Bruges, and is stated the Germans are preparing to evacuate Menin, fourteen miles southeast of Ypres."

TURKISH FLEET MAROONED

SALONIKA, April 20.---The Turkish fleet is marooned in the Black Sea, where its coal is rapidly becoming exhausted, according to a report reaching here to-day. During its recent dash into the Black Sea, the Russian fleet successfully mined the entrance to the Bosphorus. The Turks' fleet in returning sent the destroyers in front. Two of them struck mines and were sunk. The fleet was without mine sweepers and has been unable to clear away the mines, with the result that its coal supply is now near exhausted.

SAYS CHILDREN WERE KILLED

BERLIN, via wireless, April 20.---Eight school children killed in the recent aerial raid over Frieburg, Germany, by French aviators, were buried in a common grave, with elaborate service, at the expense of the city. The entire population of the city followed the little caskets to the cemetery. Telegrams of sympathy were received from the school children of Berlin and other German centres.

GARLAND, M.P. IS GOING TO STAND AGAIN

Has No Intention of Retiring and Government May Have to Put a Candidate Against Him

MAY BE CROTHERS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 20.—W. F. Garland, M.P., for Carleton, who was reprimanded in the House by Premier Borden on the closing day of the session, for his part in the Powell drug contract, has no intention of allowing the incident to interfere with his again standing for nomination.

Mr. Garland considers that he vindicated his honour when he secured the rebate of $6,800. paid back by Powell.

He is liable to have a competitor for nomination, however, as it is felt that the Government will be compelled to put in a candidate if Mr. Garland runs. Hon. Mr. Crothers, Minister of Labour, may be that candidate.

To-day's List Of Casualties

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, April 20.— The casualty list to-day:

Fourteenth Battalion—Killed in action April 17, Private William James Keenan, Montreal. Killed in action April 17th, Private Lorenzo Lefebre, Montreal

Dangerously ill, Thirteenth Battalion, Lieut. Francis Chatton Stephens, of Wilts, England.

Coppers Are Used To Pay New Tax

One effect of the new war tax is to bring the despised copper back into use again. When a man found himself with a cent he usually put it away for a newspaper, the only real article it seemed able to purchase. It will be different from now on, for the general public are finding themselves loaded down with coppers, and from now on they will be found very useful in purchasing a stamp, paying the war tax on a bottle of medicine or a telegram.

Under the new act all refusals to pay the war tax have to be prosecuted in the name of the Minister of Inland Revenue. His representative here is His Worship Mayor Euller.

NO NEW LIQUOR LICENSE GRANTED BY COMMISSION

Mr. Geo. Lipsett's Request For An East City License Was Not Granted—New Proprietor of King George

THE LICENSES RENEWED

Probably the last meeting of the Peterborough License Commissioners was held last night with Dr. M. A. Morrison, chairman, and Jas. Kendry, Richard Sheehy and Inspector J. Stewart present. There may be other sessions of the Board for minor consedartions, but the annual issuance of licenses will in future be one of the duties of the recently appointed Provinaial License Commission.

It was moved by Mr. Kendry, seconded by Mr. Sheehy, that the application of Mr. D. Corkery for a transfer a transfer of his license for the King George Hotel to Mr. E. O. McCrohan of Toronto be granted.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Kendry, seconded by Mr. Sheehy, that the application for the transfer of the King George Hotel license from Mr. E. O. McCrohan to Mr. Wm. Hamilton of Guelph be granted, subject to the approval of the Inspector.—Carried.

Licenses Granted.

Moved by Mr. Jas. Kendry, seconded by Mr. R. Sheehy, that the following licenses be granted:

Hotels—
Fred Blastorah—Palace.
R. J. Munroe—Munro House.
R. P. Gollop—Snowden House.
A. J. Johnston—Windsor Hotel.
P. Hogan—Albion Hotel.
K. W. Schmuck—Grand Hotel.
Mrs. L. Mullhall—American Hotel.
E. O. McCrohan—King George.
James Bolger—White House.
G. N. Graham—Empress Hotel.
F. Montgomery — Montgomery House.

Shops—
P. J. Kenney.
J. C. Sullivan.
C. R. Nixon.
Peterborough Club.

Refused This Application.

In regard to George Lipsett's application for a license in East City it was moved and carried that in view of the change in the license Act, whereby a new Board will administer the Act for the whole Province, this Board does not feel disposed to increase the present licensed hotels in Peterborough.

Changes to King George.

From the above it will be observed that Mr. McCrohan, who recently leased the King George hotel on Simcoe Street, has turned it over to William Hamilton of Guelph, who has secured a five-year lease. Mr. Hamilton is highly recommended as a capable hotel man and one of his first acts is extensive renovation of the King George. The bar will be moved around to face the east, thus making the bar more isolated and, at the same time, increasing the privacy of the rotunda and the rest of the house. The floor of the rotunda and bar will be laid in hardwood or tile, the lavatory will be changed, and the upstairs will be given a thorough overhauling. It is Mr. Hamilton's intentions to make the King George as complete as possible. He has already taken possession and the proposed alterations will be undertaken at once.

Inspector Stewart stated to the Examiner to-day that he had no knowledge regarding the effect of the new Provincial Commission upon the local inspectorship.

Nine-year-old Boy Drowned in Scugog

LINDSAY, April 20.—A sad drowning accident occurred in the Scugog river last night at 5.30 o'clock, when Harry, the nine-year-old son of Mr. Neil Gray, contractor, went to his death. The little fellow, who was a pupil at Victoria school, East Ward, went to the river with a number of companions to fish from the crib work opposite Perrin's boathouse, when he lost his balance and fell into the water. His companions gave the alarm, but when help arrived the boy had disappeared from view. A search party was organized and about 7 o'clock the body was brought to the surface.

57TH REGIMENT SHOULD REACH THE 300 MARK

To-night's Attendance Should Come Up to That Figure—Recruits for the Fourth Contingent Coming in Daily.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

It is expected that the attendance at the weekly drill of the 57th Regiment will reach the 300 mark to-night. The turnout last week was 270, and a number of recruits will be on hand this evening. Officers, non-commissioned officers and men are most enthusiastic over the outlook, and all are united in the desire to keep the Regiment up to normal strength, and beyond that figure if possible. Training in the militia has taken on a new meaning and a new aspect since August 4th, 1914, and the splendid response of the 57th Regiment to the calls that have been made upon it for men for overseas service has made young men anxious to join, who up to a short time ago turned a deaf ear to any invitation they received to join the Regiment.

A new supply of rifles for drill purposes, as well as a consignment of serviceable arms for use on the ranges have been received.

Recruits Coming In.

Although definite orders have not yet been issued for the new infantry battalion to be raised in this division for what is popularly known as the "fourth contingent," recruits are coming in every day, in spite of the fact that no effort is at present being made to secure volunteers. The orders are at present to accept any recruits who may offer themselves, but until instructions come along there will be no special effort. Orders will probably be issued immediately after the departure of the 21st Bartalion, and when the call comes Lt.-Col. Walker, O.C., 57th Regiment, does not expect there wil be any difficulty in securing the necessary quota. Peterborough has been equal to every call made upon the city so far. On each case that a certain number of men was asked for they have always been forthcoming, and in most cases more than the asked for complement was sent out. There has been no seeking of recruits outside the city, nor will there be any need to do so for the fourth contingent, judging by the number of applicants now. Since Saturday morning ten new recruits have been sworn in, and there are now twenty-two men enrolled and ready. These men, of course, are on the pay-roll from the moment they enlist, and are now doing a certain amount of drilling at nights, although as yet there has been no work during the day.

It is expected that regular drill will start in a short time, and that the men will be issued with uniforms. The recruits who have already been accepted are a splendid type of men, worthy successors to the fine detachments send out in the first, second and third contingents. Peterborough has reason to be proud of the fine class of men that have and are offering themselves for King and country.

In connection with the picture of Sergt. Thos. Fairbrass, published in The Examiner yesterday, his Peterborough address was given as 56 Aylmer street, instead of 158 Park street, which is the correct address.

Stove in Barracks Exploded.

KINGSTON, Ont., April 19.—At three o'clock this morning a gas stove in the quarters of the left half of the section of the 21st Overseas Battalion at the cereal works, where five hundred men are quartered, exploded and caused a slight blaze. Soldiers turned out of their bunks in record time ready to fight the fire if necessary.

ULTIMATUM FROM ITALY EXPECTED AT ANY MOMENT

Nation is Ready for War and Even the Pro-Austrian Party Seems to Have Lost Hope—Government Marks Time Until Selected Hour Arrives.

FEVERISH PREPARATIONS

Special Cable to The Examiner:

ROME, April 20.—Italy's last word to Austria, which is expected to take the form of an ultimatum, is expected to come at any time. The nation is ready for war. Even the pro-Austrian party seems to have lost hope. It is accepted that the government is now marking time until the selected hour arrives. So certain is officialdom that the conflict cannot long be postponed, that the Austrian ambassador has wired his brother to prepare his Insbruch Villa for his occupancy. Reports to the general staff say that the frontier is the scene of the greatest activity. Military preparations are feverishly proceeding. Austria has massed enormous numbers of first line troops diverted from the northern battle front, in the Eisach valley, at Brunich and at Bolzenerg. Big aeroplane hangers for aeroplanes and dirigibles have been constructed in Ronchi valley in such manner that attacks from above will be be very hard. In addition the Austrian fleet is reported as displaying the greatest activity at the naval base at Pola. Meanwhile the Italian government is understood to have completed an arrangement with the allies regarding the action to be taken on the Adriatic coast and territorial limitations that may be expected when victory comes for the allies.

A CABLEGRAM RECEIVED FROM LIEUT. ACKERMAN

Canadians Have Evidently Been In Hot Battle But Local Officer Sends Word That Peterboro Boys Are All Well

A REASSURING MESSAGE

All reports from the front to-day seem to indicate that the long expected "spring drive" is actually under way. The intelligence from London and Paris both show that important moves are under way, and the Canadian troops will undoubtedly be in the thick of the fray. That indeed our forces have already been engaged in a big battle would seem to be indicated by a cablegram received this morning by Mrs. B. F. Ackerman from her son, Lieut. Chas. Ackerman, in the 2nd Battalion. After assuring her of the safety of his brother Arthur, Dr. Garnet Greer and himself, he says: "All Peterborough boys are very well and enjoying nice weather."

Mrs. Ackerman can only explain this cablegram by the theory that the Canadians have been in a hot fight in which the casualties have been heavy, and that Lieut. Ackerman has cabled home to reassure local friends before the news of the engagement could reach them.

Canadians Engaged.

OTTAWA, April 20.—It is believed here from unofficial intelligence received that the Canadians were engaged in the heavy fighting which figures in the British official reports in the vicinity of Ypres. It is hinted that the forces suffered some losses. Official confirmation is expected at any time.

Sentenced to Imprisonment For One Hour

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, April 20.—One hour's confinement was the unusual sentence imposed this afternoon by Mr. Justice Clute in the Criminal Assizes on Dr. F. G. Hughes, of Edmonton, found guilty of conspiracy in connection with the affairs of the Union Life Assurance Co. The Judge expressed the opinion that Dr. Hughes was not the chief offender in the matter, and with his family had lost thirty thousand dollars in the concern. Harry Symons, fromer K.C., is now serving five years in the penitentiary on this case. Pollman Evans, another defendant, is still at large.

Big C.P.R. Ice House At Havelock Destroyed To-day

Discovered in Flames at Noon To-day and Report Says Building Was Wiped Out—Had Been Filled With Ice.

Examiner Special:

HAVELOCK, April 20—The large C.P.R. ice house in the local yards was destroyed by fire at noon to-day. When discovered the immense frame structure—was a mass of flames, and every effort to subdue the blaze was unavailing. It is believed that the fire was started from a sawdust pile which was burning yesterday and which it is thought, was not put out. The ice house had been filled with ice during the winter and was a source of supply for refrigerator cars and similar service, by the C. P. R. The loss is not known.

"A MORE CONVENIENT SEASON."

We are informed by a despatch that Hon. Major-General Sam Hughes has been pleased to graciously accept from Harry Cockshutt, head of the Cockshutt Plough Company, Brantford, "the most modern ambulance possible" for the Canadian active service forces. Doesn't this, put this way, seem a little singular? Private individuals have to provide what the Government should provide with the taxes the people pay. We all know that work of the kind represented by ian point of view, more important than providing gun carriages, sharpnel, ammunition, machine guns, etc. While our soldiers have health, arms and ammunition are the chief thing; but when wounds and disease come, the ambulance and the Red Cross work gain an overshadowing importance. Soldiers on active service suffer only trifling inconveniences and discomfort, when they are in good health; but when wounds come the actual suffering begins. That is the time that money should be lavished by the Government to provide treatment and invalid comforts. But apart from the Army Medical Service Corps work, the Government does not appropriate money, and private enterprise, private feeling, private sacrifice, have to supplement the work of this corps, which excellent and effective as it may be, is necessarily not adequate. Hence the necessity of the Red Cross work, and the activities of thousands of private organizations all over the land, like those of the Kitchener Club, the Business Girls' Club, etc., etc. If it were not for these immensely important supplementary auxiliaries to the work of the Army Service Medical Corps there would be a great deal of suffering amongst our soldiers that would go unrelieved or unmitigated.

The Government not only does not appropriate money for these purposes, but is said to contemplate something that will put an end to these subordinate activities in the soldiers' interests, that will waste or divert from availability for such purposes something like two million dollars. If we have a general election, the accompanying bustle and interruption of the ordinary courses of our normal life, will put an end to these ameliorating activities or, if it does not, will make them ineffective. If the Government would take the money it will be necessary to spend on a premature and palpably unnecessary election, and avoid the immense party and individual expenditure of money that will be withdrawn from use, or availability in ameliorating the suffering of our soldiers, and devote its share of the expenditure to Red Cross and allied work, and leave private funds free for similar purposes, it would be doing something much more beneficial to our soldiers than in the crude and clumsy, and impracticable enterprise of trying to give soldiers blind votes in an unnecessary election.

The Government in this matter seems to show that it cares more for party advantage, for the puerilities of politics, than it does for the soldiers who are fighting, bleeding and suffering for us. it is provided by the Government that the bundles of ballots that will be sent to the Canadian soldiers in France to play at voting with, will go post free; but the letters from Canadian mothers, wives and sweethearts, to their friends in the trenches in France, will not only have to bear the ordinary postage, but also the "war tax" stamp. The Government may carry all this off by official swagger; but to the man who thinks, the conviction will come that governments in their ponderous official movement, do not feel the details of their responsibility in respect of their duty to the Canadian soldiers in the fighting lines. The soldiers ask for bread; the Government gives them a stone; they ask for bandages; the Government gives them ballots. No one better than the fighting soldiers deserve a vote; they should have votes by all means; a simple way to give them the power to vote is to postpone an election till they return home after the war is over. An election can legally be deferred for eighteen months. By that time the war will be over, and the soldiers who survive can vote at home; and more will survive, and more will come home if the Government abandons the idea of a premature general election, and devotes a generous equivalent of the money that would necessarily be spent, to mitigating the sufferings, and saving the lives of our wounded soldiers. It is charged that Liberals oppose a premature general election because they fear the results. The results they fear, and the results that many Conservatives and all good patriots fear, are the interruption and disorganiation of the work for which Liberals and Conservatives, and all patriotic citiens are uniting in doing—the work of helping on the war to the best of our ability; with undivided and concentrated effort; conditions that a general election will destroy. We shouldn't expect a community of farmers engaged in fighting a forest fire that threatened the destruction of their homes and other property, to drop the work to accept an invitation to a farmers' picnic. They would keep at their work till the upperhand was gained, and suggest that the picnic, like the trembling Felix's repentance, should be postponed to a more "convenient season."

TAXING MOTHERS' TEARS.

The Government of Canada are going to send, free of charge, ballots to the Canadian soldiers in the trenches, but they refuse to send a letter from home free of charge. Tax a mother to send her love and prayerful hope for her boy's safety, with all the t's crossed with kisses, and all the i's dotted with tears, but for his vote all charges prepaid!—Montreal Herald-Telegraph.

A MAN OF THE HOUR.

If a man from King's county, Nova Scotia, were to come along and defor war purposes a horse thirty years old, scarcely able to stand up, and received $375 for him, the Government is apparently in no position to deny the statement. The Government has no records and no receipts — only a book of stubs showing checks issued in bulk amounts.

The purchasing was done by two men introduced into the constituency by the Parliamentary representative thereof, Mr. Arthur de Witt Foster. These two men, chosen by him to buy horses for the Canadian Government simply "because they could pay their own expenses," are now in the United States, and although Mr. Foster says he saw them ten days ago and could have explained to them the nasty mess into which their transactions have culminated, he did not secure either of them to come to Ottawa and explain. They were too much occupied in private business to care a hang about the Dominion Government, Mr. de Witt Foster, or the $74,000 of the Canadian people's money with which they had been entrusted to spend.

When there is this slovelíness at the fountain head, will it be matter for surprise if the Canadian people give full credence to the shocking evidence that has been taken before the public accounts committee as to what occurred in King's County?

And what is the position of the member of Parliament, Mr. Arthur de Witt Foster?—Ottawa Free Press.

FEATURES OF THE LICENSE COMMISSION

Special to the Examiner.

TORONTO, April 20. — Although quite fairly enough there seems to be a general disposition to wait and see what the new License Commissioners will really do, yet there is considerable comment on the strong partisanship of all the appointees to the Commission with the exception of Mr. Ayerest, who is a Government official. The other four are not only Conservatives, but strong, often extreme Conservative workers. Mr. Flavelle, during the election of 1914, was particularly violant against Mr. Rowell, and Mr. Dingman and his paper, the Stratford Herald, was also one of the most outspoken opponents of Mr. Rowell and the Liberal party at that time. Mr. Dane, of course, is well known as an ultra-Conservative, and Mr. Smith of Haileybury, although an excellent gentleman, has no sympathy with the Liberal party.

Apart, therefore, from the question of these men's temperance sentiments it certainly cannot be claimed that the Commission is a non-partisan one in any sense.

The other striking feature is that four of the five appointees are Methodists. It looks as if the Government with a Methodist as Prime Minister, is continuing to make bids for the support of the Methodist vote, which as it knows, is strongly temperance. Mr. Hearst apparently realised that the Methodist Church was badly disappointed at his refusal to adopt advanced temperance reform this session and in an effort to placate them has given them four out of five seats on the Board.

It is significant that the Christian Guardian, the organ of the Methodist Church, in the current issue, openly expresses disappointment with Mr. Hearst. It said:

"The fact that the Premier was an active Methodist and was known to be opposed to the traffic in intoxicants, seemed to warrant the expectation that some radical steps would be taken towards minimizing the evils of the traffic. Under these circumstances we may be pardoned if we fully expected that something would be done and we may be excused if we voice our bitter disappoint-

Duty of Patriotic Canadians To Stand Shoulder to Shoulder

The Mail and Empire urges the Opposition to cooperate with the Government:

"The leading members of the Opposition ought to be strengthening the hands of the Government in the present overwhelming crisis. That is what the Opposition in the British Parliament is doing. Mr. Bonar Law is not thinking about party advantage, but about the safety and well-being of the nation. In many ways, as Mr. Asquith has gratefully acknowledged, the leading men of the Opposition have rendered most helpful service to the Government."

The suggestion is worthy of consideration. The methods adopted co encourage the cooperation of all parties in Great Britain ought to be examined carefully and adopted, so far as circumstances will permit, in Canada.

The first thing is to drop the idea of a premature election. This must have occurred to the statesmen of Great Britain at once. Not only is there no talk of a premature election, but it is agreed that it is better that there shall be no election during the war, even if it is necessary to change the law in order to postpone it. All the anxieties conected with an election, all the party strife and irritation it may cause, are to be put aside, while public men are working together for the common cause.

But how can the Mail and Empire expect that kind of cooperation if an election is to be hold this summer, and the men who ought to be working together are attacking each other on the hustings, circulating campaign literature, canvassing for votes, and occupied by the thousand and one anxieties and worries of a campaign, if the men who ought to be fighting for the life of the nation are fighting for their own political life? Why give the signal for the lesser conflict, and so weaken our hands for the greater conflict?

There has been a great deal of harmony and cooperation. The grants of a hundred and fifty million dollars which the Government asked for were given without a murmur of dissent and without a moment's delay. The Opposition did protest against the new tariff, but did not delay its enforcement for a moment, simply registering a protest against uncound principles. There were occasional outbursts of party feeling. There would not have been even these incidents if it had not been that that threat of early dissolution was constantly held over the heads of members of Parliament. They are warnings of what will happen if the election is announced.

But there may be perfect cooperation and unity if Sir Robert Borden will at once announce that there is to be no election until the war is over. There is a year and a half to spare, even if the time is not postponed by law. If that is done, it will not be necessary to arrange any formal truce. The moment it is announced that here is to be no election this year politics will be dismissed from the minds of the people, and unity and harmony will prevail. Let us keep our fighting spirit for the common evil, and our enthusiasm for the common cause.—The Star.

ment at the Government's inaction. If the Government had had to deal with an Opposition which was opposed to such legislation there might have been a little more excuse but in this case the leader of the Opposition had pledged himself and his party to support the Government in cur-

Voice of The People

Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—With much interest I have been reading for some time past your contributed articles on supervised playgrounds. Great praise is due to the Local Council of Women from the citizens for this most laudable enterprise on their part. I do not know how they propose to finance this movement, but may I suggest that some of our more wealthy citizens might be proud to help and might like to contribute one or more of the pieces of mechanism which are necessary to run a playground or might even care to contribute towards the salary of one or both supervisors of that ground. In whatever way the Local Council of Women may choose to raise funds, may they have the whole-hearted help and sympathy of the whole community, and may one playground be merely the stepping stone, leading to many more in our city.

Yours, etc.,

A Well-Wisher.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

FOUND A REAL HERO

He Was Only a Tramp but Proved Himself to Be a Genuine Man.

By SARAH ESTELLE SALCOM.

"I'm up a stump, Darce, and that's the truth of it. I'm treed, at sea, marooned. My publishers have ordered a tramp series. I've read you the first chapter, and you say it won't do."

"That's right—won't do at all," assented Alvin Dacre, poet, critic and magazine editor. "You don't get the right touch, you see. You make the tramp all beer and dirt—no human interest. Get back to your old forte—the simple villager. Look here, there's a big chance on Japan. Put in a year there and write something worth while."

"I'd do it only for little Paul," said Philip North, and his big bluff voice became gentle as that of a woman's. "He couldn't stand a trip like that."

Little Paul, the crippled brother, was the tender spot in the heart of Philip North. Even blase Alvin Dacre had seen something in the wonderful love between those two that made his own barren heart ache at times.

"Well," he said, "if you're bound to immortalize the tramp, do it right, that's all. Cultivate the genus. Study him. I've an idea. Come with me."

Dacre was erratic and wilful, and North never questioned his leadership. The former proceeded to the cheap lodging house district of the city and piloted the way up the stairs of one of its cheapest structures. He spoke to a man at a desk. The latter called an assistant, and a minute later the two friends were halted in front of the rooms with a wire netting over the top.

It Was Frowsy.

a tramp. He was only half dressed, and he stared with bleared eyes at his unexpected visitors.

"Remember me, don't you, Frowsy?" inquired Dacre.

"Why, sure," assented the tramp, after a long stare. "You're the gent that paid me to stand for a photograph and put me in the paper."

"That's right, Frowsy. Well, I've got you a longer and a better job."

"What doing?" challenged Frowsy, suspiciously.

"This friend of mine is writing a book on tramps. He wants you to hang around his place for a week or two. Just act natural, and let him study your fine points. See?"

A queer smile crossed the tramp's face. He blinked grimly. Then he said:

"Sorry, governor, but it can't be done."

"Why not?"

"Well, I'm in pawn. You see, my best partner, Slim Larry, was taken in yesterday on a ten dollar fine. I sent out most of my clothes to get enough to have a man see the alderman. It didn't work, and I reckon I wouldn't look very invitin' anywhere hangin' around in these togs."

"You needn't worry abo"* that," said Dacre. "Mr. North will t you out with a new suit of clothes—and a bath."

"It looks good," remarked Frowsy, "but I couldn't rest easy with Larry

PILES

If you suffer from this painful malady, apply Zam-Buk. It is purely herbal, quickly eases the dull, gnawing pain, stops bleeding, ends the irritation, and in a short time completely and permanently cures. Zam-Buk should be in every home.

Mrs. C. Hanson, Poplar, B.C., says: "I suffered for years with bleeding piles. The pain was often so bad I could hardly walk. I tried remedy after remedy, and finally underwent an operation, but only got temporary relief. At last I tried Zam-Buk. Perseverance with this completely cured me and there has been no return of the trouble."

in trouble. Tell you, gents," and Frowsy grew eloquent, "I've had partners, but none like him. He's been failin' lately, and it's the country air or the buryin' ground for him. He's got a poor relative on a farm, and we'd arranged to get him where he'd be safe and comfortable, when the police took him in. When I get him out, gents, I'm open for a proposition."

"Give us the details about your friend, Frowsy," directed Dacre, "and we'll fix that end of the case."

"You will?" questioned the tramp eagerly. "Then I'm your man."

It was a transition of splendor for Frowsy from the slum district to the apartments of the story writer. Little Paul took a great fancy to Frowsy. The tramp was full of fascinating stories of the wanderlust, and the poor little fellow valued his reminiscences of "hitting the road" because he himself was shut out physically from such peregrinations.

"Well, North, how are you getting along with your model?" Dacre asked or his friend one evening at their club.

The literary man shrugged his shoulders indifferently.

"Your plan is a failure, Dacre," he said. "I haven't so far traced any of the undersurface heroism you predicted as the occasional characteristic of the occasional tramp. Frowsy is prosaic and humdrum. His sole ambition in life is to shirk work. He will tell wonderful stories of the tricks of the trade performed by Slim Larry—nothing better than riding on the bumpers or raiding a farmer's kitchen, though."

"Well, there's his hero worship. His friendship for little Paul is something pathetic."

"Yes, that is true," acknowledged North, the old tender gleam coming into his fine eyes. "What's that!" he almost shouted, as a bell man hurried to his side and repeated into his ear a telephone message just received. "Dacre, my home is on fire!"

The apartment house where North lived was about six squares from the club. In a wild fever of suspense and excitement the two men ran all the way. A groan came from North's lips as they turned a corner. They came in sight of the building. It was a mass of flames.

"Paul!" shouted the frenzied North, and made a dash for the fire-fringed doorway.

Dacre and a policeman dragged him back and held him by main force.

"One man just rushed in there," said the officer. "He'll never come out alive."

As a burst of flame singed and drove them back, Dacre set up a great shout.

"Look, North, look!" he cried.

Three stories up, hanging from the sill of a window of the North apartments, was a man. The flames seemed to scorch his head and his clothing was on fire. It was Frowsy, and in one arm he bore a huddled form wrapped up in a drapery.

"Catch him!" rang out in anguished but imperative tones from the tramp, and just then four firemen ran up with the safety net.

"You brave fellow!" almost wept Philip North, as clasping the hand of the tramp he accompanied him to the hospital.

"You saved Slim Larry—I didn't forget," murmured the loyal Frowsy, and fainted away with pain.

Frowsy recovered from his burns and was sent to the farm to join his partner, a pensioner of North for life.

The tramp book was published and was a success. Its author sent a copy to Frowsy.

"Say," said the latter the next time North and little Paul visited the farm, "that tramp hero in your book does some big things, Mr. North."

"Nothing to equal what you did for little Paul," declared North gratefully. "You risked your life to save him. Do you think we can ever forget?"

Frowsy placed a loving hand on the little golden head.

"To think of it!" he said, huskily—"the city cut out, and Larry and me happy and honest and comfortable here. Say, the story book can't beat it. Every time I think of it I feel as if this battered old heart of mine was all clean again."

Cost of War In Men and Money

Huge Estimates Are Given By Different Experts—Arrive at Enormous Figures

As the great war continues to draw its weary way along with daily slaughter of hundreds, even thousands, of Europe's best manhood without any decisive results, an increasing impatience is noted in the perpetual question of "when will it end?" Various wise theorists have hazarded speculations on this subject, one of the latest being advanced by Edgar Crammond, a financial writer for an English newspaper, who, in an address before the Royal Statistical Society, of Great Britain, advanced the opinion that by July of this year the war must come to an end because some of the belligerents will then have exhausted their financial resources. He estimated the cost of the war at the end of July would be $16,990,000,000 and the total economics loss, from damage to property and in other direct and indirect ways, at $45,400,000,000. The London Times commenting on his estimates says they are probably somewhat exaggerated.

The statement credited some time ago to that most practical of men, Lord Kitchener, that the war would begin in May, has received a grim endorsement from General Joffre, who, in his laconic way, has requested the authorities of France to double the number of beds in the hospitals. That is Joffre's way of announcing that a forward movement of gigantic proportions is to be attempted shortly. It is officially announced that General French, commanding the British forces on the continent, had under him early in March at least 1,000,000 men. Further reinforcements were being sent across the channel at the estimated rate of 10,000 a day. The Belgian army, recruited from refugees who escaped to friendly or neutral countries before the German occupation was completed, from below 80,000 to, it is reported, officially, 140,000 men, undertook, about the middle of March, a series of advance movements which restored to King Albert some hundreds of meters of his domain.

In market contrast to the steadiness of the lines along the western battle front and the comparatively insignificant advances which either side has been able to make, are rapidly shifting fronts in the eastern theatre of war. The Russians and the Germans continue to seesaw backward and forward over the devastated war area. Fighting of an extremely sanguinary nature is in progress over a front almost 600 miles in length.

What the war has cost in men is variously estimated. According to the Vossihe Zeitung, a leading German newspaper, the loss of the allies in killed, wounded, disabled by sickness, and prisoners, reaches a total of 3,600,000 men, of which approximately 1,000,000 are prisoners. The Prussian losses alone are officially stated to be about 1,200,000 and it is entirely probable that the totals of the losses from other German states bring this number up to nearly 2,000,000. German War Department alleges that not more than 100,000 German soldiers are held as prisoners of war. Austrian losses have not been stated officially, but are probably not much short of 1,500,000. If these estimates are approximately correct, it will be seen that the losses on each side have been nearly equal, and that 7,000,000 men have been removed from the activities of war either temporarily or permanently. The proportion of killed, including those who die of wounds, to the wounded who recover may be roughly estimated as one in three. Deducting 1,200,000 as the total number of prisoners on both sides, we have approximately 1,930,000 killed in seven months of fighting. Of the 3,800,000 wounded, perhaps one half, or 1,900,000, have recovered and are again fit for duty. The percentage of wounded who die after reaching the hospitals is very small, but great numbers die through delay in being removed from the field and because of the inadequate facilities of field hospitals.

It seems to be generally admitted that all of the warring nations are according humane treatment to their prisoners, especially to those who are wounded. The exchange of permanently disabled prisoners recently inaugurated is a manifestation of humanity which cannot be too highly commended.—Martin Marshall in "Leslie's Weegly."

Minister Urges Long Courtship Ere Marriage

PORTLAND, Ore., April 19.—It pays to take time in the courting of a girl, according to the Rev. H. G. Hanson, pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church, in a sermon on "Courtship and Marriage."

"I believe in long court-ships," said the pastor. "I do not mean seven or eight years, but from six months to a year, at least. There are too many who marry before they get acquainted with one another."

"Because two can dance well together or sing well together," he said, "it does not follow that they can live together. Similarly, because two persons are Christians does not mean that they can live together. John Wesley said: 'There are a good many people that the Lord can get along with that you and I can't'."

The speaker deplored the sentiment that marriage is a huge joke.

"Marriage is no joke," he said, "nor is courtship, either. Too many look upon the taking of the marriage vow like starting a confectionery business. It is sweet, and while the sweetness lasts and there is prosperity all is well and good. However, when things go wrong, the partnership is dissolved."

Mr. Hanson said that most persons should marry.

"Marriage is a thing which is thrust upon us by our race characteristics," he said, "and we must accept it whether we like it or not."

Speaking of the importance of making a proper choice of a life partner, he said:

"Your choice will decide whether your home is to be really a home or a hell."

"Never Again,"

Said the housewife, will I waste money on cake soap when, by cutting up a bar of N.P. SOAP, I get more and better soap than by buying other kinds in cakes. One bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ contains more by weight than four or five 5¢ cakes of any other kind—It's Made in Canada too."

THE ANNUAL VESTRY MEETING ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

Was Held Last Evening—Financial Statement Showed a Slight Decrease in Ordinary Revenue

WARDEN ELECTED

The annual vestry meeting in connection with St. John's Church was held last evening. There was a good attendance. Rev. Canon J. C. Davidson presided. Seated at the table were Wardens J. J. Howden and H. Rush, also Vestry Clerk W. H. Walkey. The meeting opened with prayer and the reading of the minutes.

SLIGHT DECREASE.

The financial statement showed a slight decrease in ordinary revenue and an increase, larger than any previous year, for missions. Attention was directed to the imperative need for a new canvas in connection with the envelope system. A committee, with A. W. Turner as chairman, was appointed for this purpose. A report of the Rector's "fellowship fund" showed larger transactions by far of any previous year in its history. Two hundred and fifty dollars was given out in loans and gifts. Nearly $100 was received in repayments and a total of $79 contributed to the fund, in addition to the Christmas offertory. The fund is absolutely private in its operations, and is administered by the Rector.

REPAIRS TO FURNACE.

Warden Rush reported that the furnace of the church was in bad condition, and extensive improvements would have to be undertaken at considerable cost for next winter.

The organ and motor has been thoroughly repaired at a cost of $146. Mr. R. J. Devey, organist, reported it to be in a satisfactory condition, and there is no reason why it should not last for a considerable time.

The chancel had been re-shingled during the year and other repairs made at a total cost of $278.

During the year two freehold pews were given to the church by the late Mrs. Best and the Chamberlen Estate. Very few of these old pews now remain in private hands.

PORT PERRY MISSION.

The Rector reported that his work had steadily progressed during the year. The number of sick visits had been abnormally large. There had been a large increase in the number of communicants, there being over 400 on Easter Day, although the Rector had been unable to do any work in connection with this matter. His chief effort in Lent had been with the Mission in Port Perry, where he had represented the congregation in giving help to a smaller parish, as it should be the aim of St. John's always to do. He referred to the services of the church, which were absolutely simple of their kind, allowing all to join heartily in them, which was especially important. During the year three bishops and seventeen other clergymen had officiated in St. John's Church, giving a healthy variety and change to the congregation. The Bishop of Kingston had conducted a short teaching mission in the autumn. Bishop Reeve, of Toronto, had confirmed a class of 44 persons, and the Bishop of Toronto had visited the congregation. Canon Davidson also referred to the faithful and earnest workers who had laboured for many years in the Sunday School and other branches of the church, mentioning particularly Miss M. English and Mr. J. G. Browne for their exceptional services. He commended the Church Wardens on their excellent work, and extended congratulations to Warden H. Rush, it being his birthday. Canon Davidson urged that an enthusiastic effort be made to increase the regular givings through the envelopes for mission and parochial funds.

CHURCH WARDENS.

The election of Church Wardens was then proceeded with. The Rector announced the appointment of Lieut.-Col. A. Stevenson as his Warden. Messrs. H. Rush, J. A. Aylmer and J. J. Howden were each nominated as People's Warden. The two former withdrew and Mr. J. J. Howden was declared elected. It was determined to reduce the Advisory Board to seven members, with the two Church Wardens. Messrs. H. Rush, J. A. Aylmer and the two Church Wardens were appointed a committee to nominate the members of this board. The sidesmen and ushers were then appointed on motion of Mr. Howden.

Mr. R. J. Devey read the report of the choir, showing that while serious losses had been experienced during the past year, through departure for the war and other causes, the choir is in excellent shape.

Corporals Roberts and Harris, Pte. Eldred, Mr. Common, Mr. Exley, Mr. A. Flowers and Mr. Cyril Devey were some of the losses. The choir at present consisted of 48 members. The annual choir excursion given last summer by the Church Wardens was a great success. The loss of the late Mrs. Best as choir mother was greatly deplored, although her duties were being ably performed by Mrs. J. J. Howden.

VARIOUS REPORTS.

Reports of the Women's and Girls' Auxiliaries and the Sunday School treasurer, Mr. W. W. Dean, were then read. Mr. Dean is retiring after many years of efficient service.

The following lay delegates were appointed: Messrs. G. A. Smith, H. Rush, and A. Kingdon.

COLOURS OF 22nd BATTERY ARE PLACED IN HISTORIC ABBEY

Capt. C. P. Fee of Peterboro One of the Officers Present at Impressive Ceremony in London When Colours Were Deposited in Westminster Until the War is Over

The cablegram published below is of special interest to Peterborough people, inasmuch as a number of local boys are with the 22nd Battery, including Capt. Fee, formerly of the 24th Field Battery, and now second in command of the 22nd overseas Battery, Quartermaster Sergt. Fred Reid and Signaller Fred Cole. It will be remembered that Mayor Buller represented Peterborough at the ceremony at Kingston at which the colours mentioned in the following cablegram were presented:

London, April 19.— A little ceremony not without its moving element and of historic interest to Canada took place at Westminster Abbey to-day.

At mid-day as the organ was playing "O God our help in ages past," and a little company of the faithful who assembled daily to intercede for those fighting their country's battles were about to disperse a small party of Canadian soldiers marched through the grey cloisters particularly cool and pleasant even in the noonday sun at this early period of spring.

To Deposit Colours.

They were officers and men of the Twenty-Second Field Battery of the Canadian artillery from Kingston, Ontario, who had come to the Abbey to deposit with the Dean and Chapter for safe keeping until the war is over, the colours presented to them by "veterans and citizens of Kingston."

The officers present were Major W. R. Riordan, Capt. C. P. Fee, Lieutenant G. T. Cassells, and Lieut. N. H. MacAulay. The colours were under the charge of Sergt. Dixon and twelve men representative of the battery comprised the rest of the party.

On arrival at the nave of the Abbey the colours were unfurled and the procession reformed. The Dean of Westminster, Dr. Ryle, preceded by his mace bearer, was at the head followed by the officers and men and less than half a dozen others, all Canadians, including Major Ingraham of the 24th Battery, Captain L. W. Cameron, 6th Brigade, and Mrs. MacLeod.

The company afterwards made their way to the famous Henry the VII. chapel, rich in mediaevial associations and holding many banners of famous knight. Dean Ryle, standing by the holy table, offered prayers, whilst the officers, men and other bystanders united with him in the great prayer of christendom.

An Impressive Ceremony.

Kneeling on one knee an officer then handed colours to the Dean, who laid them reverently upon the holy table.

A few moments later the short but intensely impressive ceremony was over, and Dean Ryle, upon leaving the chapel, assured the officers and men that the colours would remain safe in dignified keeping until they returned to claim them.

A photograph of the participants was afterwards taken on the steps of the chorister's entrance, and subsequently the Dean conducted the party through parts of the Abbey, and it was particularly appropriate that he should point out in the Jerusalem chamber how Henry IV. died there as he was setting forth for the crusades.

To-day's ceremony on the instructions of the Dean will be duly related in the Abbey records now extending over tens of centuries.

REGIMENT OF WOMEN BEING FORMED IN PARIS

PARIS, April 19.—A regiment of French women is being formed in Paris under the supervision of the widow of an officer, Mme. Arnaud. The Queen of the Belgians is to be asked to accept the honourary presidency of the regiment.

One of Mme. Arnaud's feminine lieutenants states that women volunteers will be commanded by officers of the army until their instruction is so far advanced that they may find officers among themselves. They will wear khaki uniforms and will learn to handle the rifle. The regiment will be placed on a regular military footing.

Russia to Purify Polish Battlefields

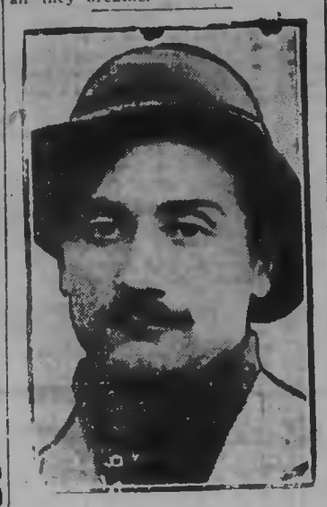
PETROGRAD,—A special sanitary commission has been appointed to disinfect and purify the battlefields of Western Poland, on which many thousands of dead lie either unburied or else buried in dangerously shallow graves and trenches.

Under the new sanitary commission fifteen detachments will operate, each consisting of two medical officers, a disinfector and ten grave diggers. The commission has directed the opening, so far as possible, of all the so-called "brotherly graves," in which friend and foe were buried together, and separating them one another. Graves which were dug near towns and villages also will be opened and the bodies removed to points more distant from the abodes of men. Before being re-interred all the bodies will be subjected to a thorough process of disinfection.

The diggers are equipped for their unpleasant work with rubber garments and masks which sterilize the air they breathe.



Lieut. R. B. Garros—Famous French aviator who is reported from Berlin to have been captured by the Germans. He is one of the most daring of French aviators.

Returned Nurses Tell of Suffering In War Hospitals

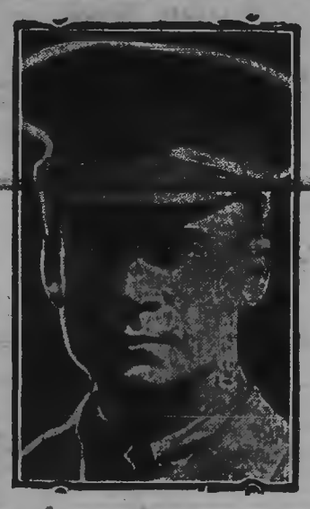
NEW YORK, April 19 — After six months' work in European war hospitals a party of American girl volunteer nurses has arrived in New York, full of praise and pity for soldiers of the belligerent nations.

They declared that for them the glory and honour of war had been removed. They saw only its sufferings and horrors. This was also the attitude of most of the wounded they treated in the hospitals, though all the soldiers expressed a grim willingness to return to the fray if they were able.

Miss J. Beatrice Bowman of Montclair, N.J., chief nurse of the United States naval hospital at Norfolk, Va. together with Miss Henrietta Koechlein, of Westfield, N.J., and Miss Mabel Welsh, of Cambridge, Mass., served in the hospital maintained at Paigton under the patronage of Lady Paget, Duchess of Marlborough and other American women who have married titled Englishmen.

"It was dreadful," said one of the party. 'When we got there the Belgian wounded were just coming in and the poor fellows were in frightful condition. Some of them sat up in their beds all night raving and raving. Then, later on, the British wounded began to come in. They were pretty bad, too, particularly after the battle of Neuve Chapelle. We had eighy-five cases from that battle alone and some of the poor chaps were horribly torn with cannister and shrapnel. Six months of that was all we could stand for a while."

Among the parachutes designed for an aviator is one consisting of wings and a balloon shaped canopy, worn folded against the body, and opening automatically if he falls.



Lieut. T. M. Papineau—One of the Princess Pats, who along with Lieut. G. Colquhoun, also of the Princess Pats, were the first Canadians to receive the new Military Cross for valour and resource at Neuve Chapelle.

REPORTS OF SOCIETIES PRESENTED

Adjourned Vestry Meeting of St. Luke's Was Held Last Evening—Progress Manifested in Various Organizations

The adjourned vestry meeting of St. Luke's Church was held last evening, when a large number of the congregation were present to hear reports from the various societies as to the year's work. The Rector, Rev. W. H. White, M.A., was in the chair, and after the opening prayer, the Vestry Clerk, Mr. R. B. Rogers, read the minutes of the Easter vestry, which were adopted. Mr. George Curtis, the retiring People's Warden, then presented a review of the church work during the year just closed, including a statement of the finances.

The reports of the various organizations were given as follows: Women's Auxiliary and Ladies Aid, by Mrs. J. Butcher; Girls' Auxiliary, by Misses Clara Adams and Elsie Dawson; Mission Band, by Miss Ada Norris; Chancel Guild, by Miss L. Stewart; Men's Club, by Mr. A. G. Knott; the Choir, by Mrs. W. A. Greenslade; the Sunday School, by Mr. J. J. Turner, Jr., and Mr. Merton Adams; the Rector's Bible Class, by Mr. Harold Adams and Miss Eva Crane, and St. Luke's Parish Magazine, by Mr. P. A. Crane.

Votes of thanks were tendered the officers of the church, the Sunday School and the workers in the several activities of the parish.

The Rector, in his address, referred to the pleasure he felt in assuming the Rectorship of St. Luke's Church. The work that had prospered and grown to such an extent under the leadership of Rev. Mr. Sawers he hoped would continue. He referred gratefully to the splendid reception that had been given Mrs. White and himself, and to the improvements made to the Rectory for their benefit. He urged an earnest, reverent and congregational worship in the services of the church, and an active part by all in the various enterprises of the parish.

The matter of building a kitchen underneath the primary department of the Sunday School was introduced by Mr. Turner, and was followed by a discussion. It is expected that this very desirable addition will be realized in the very near future. Repairs to the organ are needed, and will be looked into at once.

The meeting was concluded with prayer by the Rector.

3. The estimated liftime of the work is twenty years.

4. A Court of Revision will be held on the 6th day of May, 1915, at 8 o'clock p.m., at the City Council Chamber, for the purpose of hearing complaints against the proposed assessments, or the accuracy of the frontage measurements, or any other complaint which persons interested may desire to make and which is by law cognizable by the Court.

5. The special assessment, showing the special rate per foot frontage, the properties assessed, the names of the owners and other particulars is open for inspection at the office of the undersigned.

Dated at Peterborough the 19th day of April, 1915.

S. R. ARMSTRONG, Clerk.

FARMERS NEED HELP.

Many Boys Have Joined the Forces—Department to the Rescue.

BRANTFORD, April 19—John Farrell, Special Immigration Agent of the Province of Ontario, arrived in this city this morning to open a campaign of "back to the land." On account of British emigration being stopped owing to the war, and many of the boys engaged in agriculture joining the Canadian forces, leaving the farms, the Department of Agriculture has been obliged to secure help from other sources.

The Ernie Marks Company, with Kitty and Ernie Marks, and a first-class company will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House all this week, with matinee Wednesday and Saturday.

The plays are changed each night, and also for the matinees, so that you will be able to attend each night and see a different play; and also the vaudeville and specialties between acts are of the highest class, and something that will please all and make you feel happy.

The prices are very low and within the reach of all.

Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday, 10c. and 20c.

Night, 10c., 20c. and 30c.

Night seats are reserved, so 'phone the box office at any time for your seats and save the rush at the box office at night. Plans of the seats of the Grand Opera House can be had for the asking.

Reserve your seats early for to-night.

Play for to-night, "The Pride of the Army," a great military play. To-morrow matinee, "Two Jolly Tramps."

FOR A BAD COLD

The surest way to stop a cold is to liven the liver and cleanse the bowels, and the nicest cathartic to do this is a 10-cent box of Cascarets. Take one or two Cascarets to-night and your cold may be gone by morning.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE WAS MUCH ENJOYED

Mr. T. F. Matthews Spoke on "A Trip to Palestine" in Park Street Baptist Church.

Mr. T. F. Matthews gave a very interesting and instructive lecture entitled "A Visit to Palestine," in the Park Street Baptist Church, under the auspices of the Young People's Society. There were about 100 present and all listened with a great deal of interest to Mr. Matthews as he very ably described the various pictures that were shown on the screen. Nearly all of the pictures were taken by Mr. Matthews while on a visit to Palestine. The Rev. Mr. Brown, the new Pastor of Park Street was also present and took part in the opening part of the meeting. At the close of the lecture a vote of thanks was proposed by Mr. Haw and seconded by Mr. Goheen to Mr. Matthews for coming to Park Street and delivering his splendid lecture. Mr. Matthews, in a few appropriate words, thanked those present for their attention and appreciation, saying it was a pleasure for him to attend.

$200 Reward Has Been Offered

For the Capture of Notorious Hold-Up Men—Local Police Department Notified.

Chief of Police Thompson has received the following information from Chief Constable H. J. Grassett, of Toronto: "I am authorized to offer a reward of $200 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of any one of three men who entered the premises of the Sterling Actions & Keys Company this city on the afternoon of the 9th instant, held up employees with revolvers and stole a large some of money in bills on the Royal Bank."

They are described as follows:

Description.

1st—Age 22 years, 5 feet 11 inches tall, clean shaven, fair complexion, wore peak cap, long brown overcoat. 2nd—Age 25 years, 5 feet 7 inches tall, dark complexion, brown eyes, medium build, wore dark peak cap and dark overcoat. 3rd—Age 25 years, short and stout, wore brown fedora hat and brown overcoat.

The Toronto police look upon the fugitives as bad men and are supposed to be convicts from the Ontario reformatory. It is possible that they are accompanied by two women, but this is not definitely asserted.

Is Entering A New Field

Mr. H. K. Middleton Going Into the Accounting Business.

Mr. Hugh F. Middleton, accountant and auditor, who has been connected with the business office of The Daily Review Publishing Company, has relinquished his position in that capacity to enter the auditing and accounting field in Peterborough. Mr. Middleton is an experienced and highly capable accountant, holding indisputable credentials and testimonials, and during his residence in the city has demonstrated his qualifications. Mr. Middleton has kept pace with his profession and his services can be heartily recommended to business houses and firms in the city requiring aid, or who desire expert advice concerning the books of their business. Mr. Middleton's many warm friends, both on this publication and throughout the city extend their best wishes to him in his new field. He resides at 49 Robinson Street, East City.

Fined For Beating A Livery Horse

Ridges Were Raised on the Animal —Assessed $15.75.

If Gunner J. Airress uses as much energy in beating the Germans when he gets to the front, as he is elleged to have done whipping a livery horse on Sunday last, he will certainly make things hot for them. Working off his surplus energy on the horse cost him $15.15, when he was found guilty in Police Court this morning of wantonly and cruelly ill-treating a horse.

The defendant was to have left for Kingston last evening to rejoin his battery, but was arrested and spent the night in the cells.

Drove to Chemong Village.

On Sunday morning last at 8:30 o'clock, Gunner Airress left A. Fountaine's livery barn with a horse which he had hired for the day. He drove to Chemong Village and returning arrived at the barn at 3:30 p.m. When the horse got into the barn it appeared frightened. It was sidged with whip marks along both sides — so many marks that they could hardly be counted.

Mr. O. LaPlante was counsel for the defendant.

Mr. Fountaine, the owner of the horse, was the first witness called this morning. He testified to the condition of the horse, when it was returned to his stable on Sunday evening. It was a free driver, rather high-lifed and did not need the whip. He purchased it from Dr. Rogers, upon the latter receiving an appointment with the forces in France. The horse had never been out of the stable since Sunday, not being in condition to take out.

Jack Heffernan, stableman at the Fountaine livery corroborated the evidence of his employer as to the condition of the horse. He had driven it upon several occasions and found it very free.

Veterinary Called.

George Fortune, veterinary surgeon, was called to the barn on Sunday evening to look at the horse after Airress had left. He said it would take a hard blow of a whip to raise the ridges on its flesh that were raised. He would consider it cruel treatment. He knew the horse in question, having looked it over a short time ago with a view to making a purchase. It was not afraid of objects on the road and was a free driver.

Horse Stopped.

The defendant went into the box to tell his side of the story. He said he drove out and back at the rate of six miles an hour. He did not use the whip going out, but used it coming home. The horse, he claimed, stopped several times and he used the whip to make it go. He claimed the whip did not have much effect and the animal persisted in stopping. He only hit it hard a few times. Most of the time he flicked the whip at it as if knocking off a fly.

Dr. Fortune was recalled in connection with Airress' statement. He described it as an extraordinary case. If the horse stopped like that he would expect it to be sick, and if this were the case the beast would offer to lie down.

Detective Newhall also knew the horse and knew of no better roadster in the city. He was very anxious to own it.

Protection for Liverymen.

Mr. LaPlante submitted that the case was not proven, but he was overruled. His Worship said no decent man would beat a horse that way. With a free-driving horse he could not conceive of the need of the whip like that. Liverymen had to be protected. A fine of $5.00 was imposed, with costs of $10.75, to be paid forthwith.

Victoria Crosses Are Awarded Mostly For Exploits With Grenades

Pte. Edward Barber, Lc. Corp. Fuller and Lieut. Martin Are Rewarded For Daring in Hand to Hand Work in Enemy Trenches—Two Highlanders Carried Men Out of Danger

LONDON, April. 20. — The important part that hand grenades are playing in the western campaign is made evident by the fact that of five awards of the Victoria Cross announced last night, three were for "conspicuous bravery" displayed in the use of these missiles.

Pte. Edward Barber of the First Battalion of the Grenadier Guards, at Neuve Chapelle, "ran in front of his grenade company and threw bombs on the enemy with such effect that a very great number of them at once surrendered."

"When the grenade party reached Barber," the report making the awards says, "they found him quite alone and unsupported and with the enemy surrendering all about him."

"Seeing a party of the enemy endeavoring to escape along a communication trench," the report says, "Corpl. Fuller ran quite alone ... ward them and killed the leading man with a bomb. The remainder of the men, nearly 50, finding no means of evading his bombs, surrendered to him."

Lieut. Cyril Gordon Martin, who already possesses the Distinguished Service Order medal, was in command of a grenade-throwing party of six, and, "although wounded, led his party into the enemy's trenches and held back their reinforcements over two hours."

Pte. May of the Scottish Rifles and Pte. Tollerton of the Cameron Highlanders were awarded Crosses for rescuing wounded men under fire.

"Pte. Tollerton," according to the report, "carried a wounded officer, while under a heavy fire, to a place of greater safety, although wounded himself. He then struggled back into the firing-line and remained there until his battalion retired, when he returned to the wounded officer and lay beside him for three days until both were rescue."

Thirteen Building Permits Issued

PLANS ARE SHATTERED.

Anglo-Indian Victory Ends German Hopes In the East.

LONDON, April 20. — Germany's dream of conquest in the Far East has been completely crushed. In one of the remotest corners of the earth a handful of British Indian troops has won the most important victory for British arms since the war began.

A Turkish force that attempted to drive the British from the Tigris and Euphrates valleys in Mesopotamia has been disastrously routed. The Turks are in full flight and have abandoned their campaign to drive the British from the Persian Gulf region.

The British apparently are now in undisputed possession of the southern part of the ancient kingdom of Nebuchadnezzar. The Kaiser's plans for a new route to the east over a Bagdad-to-the-Gulf railway, have been shattered.

Germany To Stop Rescues

Trawler is Lost and Another Coming to Save Lives is Driven Off

LONDON, April 20.—The Admiralty has issued the following statement:

"Yesterday a German submarine torpedoed and sank the trawler Vanilla. The trawler Fermo endeavored [illegible] and driven off.

"All the crew of the Vanilla were lost. This killing of fisherfolk for no military purpose should not escape attention. It is the second murder of this character committed within a week. A careful record is kept of these events."

A despatch from Northern France gives another example of German war methods. It says:

"The fierce fighting of a week or so ago at Drei Grachten has inflamed Belgo-German hatred to the highest degree. A frightful example of German vengefulness has just been reported. The Belgians who crossed to the right bank of the Yser were surprised at night and one regiment of men were killed, wounded and made prisoners. A tremendous effort was thereupon made by King Albert's army and finally the Germans were driven back to the old lines, leaving six hundred dead on the field. Taught by experience, the Belgians are organizing a system of night patrols to guard against surprises. Four days ago one of these patrols fell upon them all, as indeed it was their duty to do, or otherwise the alarm would have been given to the enemy. The whole affair was a regular and characteristic episode of the nocturnal warfare that goes on every night along the whole line of trenches from Switzerland to the sea.

"The German commanders determined to make an example that might prevent the sentries from being dealt with in this fashion in the future. Using some incident or other as a pretext, they had a certain number of Belgian prisoners put to death who had been captured in the fighting at Drei Grachten. The number of those "executed" was far greater than that of the sentries who had been surprised by the Belgians, according to all the rules of war."

Embassy Is Ready to Go

Italian Diplomats at Trentino Prepare For Outbreak of War.

ROME, April 20.—The Giornale d'Italia yesterday published an interview with an unnamed neutral diplomat, who is quoted as having said:

"That Italy will participate in the war has been decided on. What now is necessary is clearly to agree on the delimitation and distribution of the eastern coast of the Adriatic between Italy and the Slavs. Italy cannot risk a war to drive out Austria from the Adriatic and have Austria replaced in a military sense by the Russian advance guards. Therefore Italy must have her strategic points completed by obtaining Avlona, Albania, across the Adriatic from [illegible] which she could close the sea. Some of the Slavs favor complete disarmament in the Adriatic."

The diplomat added that he thought that Russia and Great Britain would suffer less from the present war than from the antagonism between the two countries which would follow it.

A despatch from Copenhagen says:

"Special messages from Vienna state that great excitement prevails there owing to information received from Trentino.

"It is believed that war with Italy is imminent.

"The Italian embassy is said to be prepared for departure."

Logs Moving Down Eel's Creek

Sixty thousand logs began to move down Eel's Creek last Tuesday. They are the property of the Peterborough Lumber Company and represent the tail end of a drive of 125,000 pieces of timber which they attempted to bring down last summer. Through a combination of unfortunate circumstances half of them were stranded high and dry along the bed of the creek owing finally to the lowness of water. The last logs of the first or successful drive, reached Stoney Lake July 7th, the rest being left for this Spring's freshet.

In the meantime the Peterborough Lumber Company let the contract of bringing them down to the Stoney Lake Navigation Co., who started work last week. They sent a gang of men north on Monday and by the end of the week had moved the drive over two miles on its downward course, using the flood water for the purpose. Eel's lake is full of water, there being eight feet over the sill of the dam at the present time. This will be utilized as required to float the logs onward.

On reaching Stoney Lake they will be assembled in small booms to facilitate handling through the many narrow channels, between Grubb's Island and Young's Point. The Company will use two of their steamers to tow the logs all the way to Lakefield, where they will be turned over to the river to be floated in the ordinary way to Peterborough, which they are expected to reach about the middle of June.

Local Council of Women's Column

The Matter Published in this column will be supplied by the Local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

An Executive meeting of the Local Council of Women was held on April 16th. About twenty-five women were present, representing the various affiliated societies. After the routine business was ended different schemes for raising the necessary money for the establishment of play-grounds were discussed. It was decided to have a tag day and sell carnations on the Saturday before Mother's Day.

For the past few years it has been the beautiful custom to wear, in memory of our mothers, a white carnation. This year, those who live in Peterborough will have the double privilige of paying a tribute to the mother who is gone, and of helping the living mothers by doing this little thing to help the children spend a happy, healthy summer. All ye who were children, and all ye who have children buy a carnation on Saturday, May 8th.

Estimated cost for setting up and supervising play-grounds:

57th Regiment Should Reach the 300 Mark

57th Boys Praised.

Belleville, April 20—The Peterborough boys in quarantine expect to be released to-day. All are in excellent health and spirits. They were complimented yesterday on their excellent behaviour by their officer, who said: "You have played the game, boys, as soldiers, and as gentlemen. I am proud to have had command of you, and I thank you for the excellent way you have behaved.

Barrisfield on May 15.

Kingston, April 19—It was announced to-day that on May 15, the overseas men in the 38th Battalion, Ottawa;; 39th Battalion, Belleville; and the 8th Canadian Mounted Rifles, Ottawa, in the third contingent would go into camp at Barrisfield. It was also announced that there would be no cadet camps this season.

The Belleville Ontario says: "The machine gun section of the 39th battalion, under command of Lieut. Ross Cameron, Sergeants Arthur McGie and A. Ketcheson are qualified N.C.O's. They took a course at Kingston for this purpose.

The section consists of four guns and thirty-two men. The guns have not yet arrived and it is not definitely known when they will be ready for the men.

The four men in the hospital with meningitis are recovering to all appearance. If nothing unforseen happens they will be completely cured. Yesterday they sat on the hospital verandah and in the evening the medical officer was surprised to hear them all singing "Tipperary" in good word.

German Newspaper Censor Held Up Afternoon Issues Until Late in Evening

COPENHAGEN, April 17 — The newspaper here have obtained copies of the official report of the debate in the German Reichstag on the imperial budget, including the text of the speech made by the socialist Deputy, Herr Stadthagen, which the military censors refused to allow the German newspapers to publish. The speech deals entirely with the German press censorship. Herr Stadthagen said:

'From all parts of the country come strong protests against the severity, the inequality, the injustice, the inefficiency of the censorship. The Military censors have made the whole of the Socialist press a target for their malicious attacks, which are not intended to preserve military secrets, but to suppress the free discussion of questions in regard to which the people of Germany have the fullest right to express their opinion. The Volkszeitung, our local organ at Danzig, was suppressed for saying there was no danger of a famine in Germny, but that the price of many necessaries of life was too high for the working classes and imposed considerable hardships on them. At Konigsberg our local daily newspaper was suppressed for saying that the victories won by the German army were due to the fact that universal manhood suffrage exists in Germany and to the right possessed by German workmen to combine in trade unions or in political associations.

"At Kattowitz our newspaper, the Freie Presse, had always appeared at three o'clock in the afternoon, but the military censor there insisted on seeing all the proofs before publication, and then declared that he had no time to read them before 2 o'clock with the result that the publication of the newspaper had to be delayed until some hour of the evening, sometimes later, according to the whim of the august official who wielded despotic power in these matters.

"The Vorwaerts received a warning from the military authorities because it protested against wildly sensational reports of English atrocities on German prisoners on the grounds that such reports stimulated public enthusiasm for the war, and hence to discredit them meant diminishing enthusiasm for the war. When the Vorwaerts protested against the publication of a report that the German army had captured Belfort and seven French army corps (about 280,000 men) at one stroke, the military authorities in Berlin warned the editor that he was doing a public disservice and exposed his newspaper to the penalty of suppression. The Vorwaerts was not allowed to reply to attacks made on it by another Berlin newspaper, the Neueste Nachrichten, which is a conservative organ, although this journal had been permitted to libel the Vorwats in the greatest terms of abuse.

'On another occasion the Vorwaerts was not allowed to publish a speech made in the Berlin Town Council by Herr Wurum, in which the authorities were urged to prevent the prices of necessary commodities of everyday life from being raised above a certain level. The publication of the Vorwaerts was temporarily suspended for declaring that the hostility existing in other countries against Germany was due to the fact that the German method of government is based on autocracy and militarism, which, together had produced many undesirable features.

"We were even forbidden to reprint an attack on the English censors published by the London weekly newspaper Truth. The Vorwaerts was forbidden to publish an article saying that the destruction of the despotism of the Tzar would be a blessing to the Russian people; doubtless our astute censors thought this was an indirect hit at the German Emperor. The Vorwaerts was not allowed to publish a speech made by the English member of Parliament, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, in which Macdonald spoke against the war, and other anti-war utterances made in England were likewise suppressed. Why?

"These are only a few cases selected from many of which we know, but ship is badly administered, inefficiently conducted and unjustly balanced, so that energetic measures should be taken by the supreme authorities to remedy what is really a grave danger to the welfare of the German nation."

Old Resident Dies In Toronto

TORONTO, April 19.—The death of W. W. Owens occurred yesterday morning at his residence, 73 Shuter Street. The deceased had resided in the city for several years, having been a resident of Peterborough previously, where he was well and favorably known. Mr. Owens had been in ill health for the past two years, being a sufferer from asthma. He enjoyed the friendship of a large circle of friends in the section of Toronto where he resided. He leaves a widow and two sons, the eldest, Percy, of Indianapolis, Ind., the head of a college of music in that city and at one time organist of St. John's church, Peterborough, and Carlton Street Methodist church, here, and Chas. Leslie, of the Royal Shoe Co., Yonge Street. Two brothers and two sisters reside at Oshawa and a brother near Lindsay. The funeral will take place at 4 o'clock Wednesday to Mount Pleasant cemetery.

TALKED CROPS BUT WAS SILENT ON THE ELECTION

Special to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, April 20. — Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, who returned from the west this morning, said it would be unfair to his colleagues to express an opinion as to whether or not there is likely to be a general election.

Mr. Rogers spoke in enthusiastic terms of the crop prospects in the west. There would, he said, be an increase of thirty per cent. in the wheat acreage, and with a good yield, crops should be nearly three hundred million bushels.

PROPERTY SOLD

In last night's article in the Examiner on the real estate situation Mr. McCammon was credited with selling a house on Gilmour Street, and another on Monaghan Road. These two properties were not sold by Mr. McCammon, but by others. The balance of the list is correct, so far as Mr. McCannon is concerned, who has asked that we give the above information. The following is a list of what Mr. McCannan handled:

One house on Perry Street.
One house on Bolivar Street.
Two lots on Elias Avenue.
Two lots on Alfred Street.
One lot on Monaghan Road.

Poor People's Cake.

One and one-half cups of sour cream, small pinch salt, 1 teaspoon of soda, 1 teaspoon of baking powder. Flour for batter. Bake. No flavouring or eggs. Either layer or loaf. Very nice if made right.

Lettuce and Pimento Salad.

Separate the leaves from a head of lettuce. Wash, drain and chill. Use about ½ can of pimentoes. Drain the liquid off, wash in cold water, drain, cut in small strips. Arrange between the lettuce leaves and on top. Moisten all with French dressing.

MATERIAL GAINS

LONDON, April 20.---Sweeping claims of material gains in the Ypres region are made by General French in a report to-day. He denied the German allegations that the British troops have used asphyxiating gases in their assaults but charges that the Germans did.

"Improvement in the weather has resulted in an increase in the air activity which has resulted greatly to our advantage in the Ypres region," he said.

"During the last three days we have brought down two German aeroplanes to earth, and the French have downed two more."

GREAT BRAVERY SHOWN

LONDON, April 20.---The Admiralty to-day recorded a story of the heroism of the British sailors operating against the Dardanelles in preventing the disabled submarine E15 falling into the hands of the Turks in a serviceable condition. Two patrol boats, manned entirely by volunteer crews, succeeded in frustrating the objects of the Turks and in torpedoing and destroying the submarine. The official statement was as follows:

"The Turks made great efforts to capture the submarine E15 in serviceable condition. Attempts on our part to destroy her by long distance fire from the battleships failed. On Sunday night two British picket boats, manned by volunteer crews, attacked the submarine, which was under the guns of the Turkish forts. The picket boats were subjected to the fire of two hundred rounds of shot from the forts, nevertheless they were able to run within range and discharge a torpedo, which demolished the disabled submarine. One of the picket boats was struck and sunk, but the crew was saved by the other. In the operations one British seaman was killed."

GENERAL JOFFRE TO DECIDE

OTTAWA, April 20.---That General Joffre, commander in cheif of the allied forces in France and Belgium, is the man who will have the final say as to whether or not Canadian soldiers in the trenches will have votes, is the interesting statement made here. Lord Kitchener and Sir John French would have to confer with Joffre, whose decision as to the desirability of mander in chief of the allied forces in France and Bel-

RECRUITING SATISFACTORY

LONDON, April 20.---In the House of Commons this afternoon, Chancellor Lloyd-George said:

"War Secretary Kitchener is very gratified at the response of the nation to the recruiting appeals."

The speaker added that the Government did not believe the war could be more successfully prosecuted by means of conscription.

THE EMPIRE.

Edith Taliaferro, another of the Broadway theatrical stars, is seen during the first half of the week at the Empire in a romantic comedy, titled "Young Romance." It is a charming little story, with a special appeal to youth, and a piquant attraction for the older patrons. Miss Taliaferro easily upholds the standard of the Famous Players. In the extra films Baldwin Sloane and Miss Fields illustrate many of the new dances, and the entire programme is light and cheerful in relief to the heavier though excellent "Sign of the Cross."

RED MILL.

The first series of Manager Clayton's new Red Mill feature, "The Master Key," was shown last night. This is one of the newest photo-plays of which the story has been running in the Examiner. Those who have read the first instalment of the story will of course find the pictures particularly attractive. The bill also includes three other good films.

THE TIZ-IT.

Among the moving pictures based on war episodes, the present four-act feature at the "Tiz-It," entitled "Beneath the Czar," stands out as one of the foremost in its thrills and setting in costume and otherwise.

Mary Fuller is also seen in "My Lady High and Mighty," a delightful comedy in two acts. The two extra comedy films are reels of fun, and fill out a well balanced motion programme.

AT THE ROYAL.

A Vitagraph film showing John Bunny, Flora Finch and other 'movie' stars is one of the good things at the Royal. The feature is a three-act Kalem film, "The King of Chance." It is a western picture dealing with life on the fringe of the east. The main role is that of a gambler who turns honest through love of a girl. "Saved from the Vampire" is another good [illegible] and the rest are comedies. The vaudeville is a [illegible] and talking act.

Coneybeare Was Committed For Trial

LINDSAY, April 20—Yesterday afternoon, before a crowded court room Howard Coneybeare, the former Canadian Express Co. driver, was committed for trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction by Police Magistrate Jackson on three charges of theft. The accused was defended by Mr. L. V. O'Connor, while Mr. G. H. Hopkins, K.C., represented the Canadian Express Co. Mr. Allan, an official of the Express Co., was also present. County Crown Attorney Stinson looked after the interests of the Crown.

CURES BILIOUSNESS PREVENTS BRIGHT'S DISEASE

The Certified Statement of One Has Proven the Efficiency of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Mr. Colin M. Kiel, Craighurst, Simcoe county, Ontario, writes: "My mother and I have both used Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills with great satisfaction. We find that there is nothing to equal them as a prompt cure for torpid liver, biliousness and indigestion. Some years ago my mother came near to death from kidney trouble and has to be careful in preventing Bright's disease. By using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally she keeps the kidneys healthy and active. Another point favourable to Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills is that they do not gripe and yet accomplish good results. You are at liberty to use my letter."

This statement is endorsed by Mr. Marmaduke Caston, Justice of the Peace, who writes: "This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. Colin M. Kiel and believe his statement regarding Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to be true and correct."

If you are interested in this case, write to Mr. Kiel, enclosing stamp for reply, and he will verify his statement. We like to have people to do this, for we are very careful to only use statements from responsible persons.

Should this case not be similar to yours, write to us for the statement of some one whose trouble was along the same lines. We have thousands of letters to choose from. Or better still, put the Kidney-Liver Pills to the test right away. They will only cost you a quarter and a box lasts for some time.

As a means of awakening the action of liver, kidneys and bowels and thereby curing biliousnes, indigestion, backache and kidney troubles, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills hold a unique positions. By their combined action on these eliminating organs they prove effective in complicated ailments which defy ordinary treatment. ## BOSTON BRAVES WON A DOUBLE HEADER

Beat Brooklyn Twice—Yankees Handed Athletics Another Beating—Washington Won From Red Sox—Demaree Takes Decision Over His Former Team Mates.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Detroit, April 19.—Boland held Chicago to three hits to-day, and pitched Detroit to a 6 to 1 victory. John Collins scored Chicago's only run in the fourth inning. Cobb dropped his fly; he stole second, and came in on McKee's wild throw. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago | 1 | 3 | 2 |
| Detroit | 6 | 10 | 2 |

Batteries—Faber and Schalk; Boland and McKee.

New York Downed Athletics.

Philadelphia, April 19. — Splendid fielding gave New York the victory over Philadelphia to-day by 11 to 6. Caldwell, Pennock and Wilbur Davis were ineffective, and the local pitchers were given poor support. Caldwell, however, was backed up in grand style, Hartzel, Maisel, Boone and Peckinpaugh making sensational plays with bases occupied. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 11 | 14 | 1 |
| Philadelphia | 6 | 15 | 6 |

Batteries —Caldwell and Nunamaker; Pennock, Davis and Lapp.

Washington Trimmed Boston.

Washington, April 19.—Washington won from Boston four to two to-day by coupling timely batting with errors of the visitors. Williams batted in all of the locals' runs. Mays, a Boston recruit, pitched good ball, but he hurt his ankle sliding home in the fifth inning and was relieved after the sixth, in which a double, a single an error cost him two runs. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston | 4 | 6 | 4 |
| Washington | 4 | 7 | 2 |

Batteries—Mays, Collins and Thomas Carrigan; Johnson and Ainsmith.

St. Louis Outplayed Cleveland.

St. Louis, April 19. — Loudermilk yielded but one hit—a single by Jackson in the first inning— and would have scored a shut-out against Cleveland but for the errors of his teammates. St. Louis won 7 to 2. Timely hitting combined with brilliant baserunning gave the home club its runs. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland | 2 | 1 | 0 |
| St. Louis | 7 | 13 | 4 |

Batteries — Coumbe and O'Neill; Loudermilk and Severoid.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York, April 19.—The Philadelphia Nationals continued their string of spring successes by defeating New York to-day in a close, well-pitched game. The score was 3 to 0. Demaree, a cast-off of McGraw's, won a decision over Tesreau, holding his former teammates to four hits. Crayath's batting and fielding was a feature. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Philadelphia | 3 | 11 | 1 |
| New York | 0 | 4 | 1 |

Batteries — Demaree and Killifer; Tesreau, Fromme and Meyers and Smith.

Two Games For Boston.

Boston, April 19. —The Braves took both games of the Patriot Day programme from Brooklyn to-day, by 7 to 2 and 6 to 4. The afternoon game was won by bunching hits off two Brooklyn pitchers. Gowdy batted safely in each of four times at bat. Magee's centre-fielding was noteworthy, three of his four catches being difficult ones. The scores:

Morning Game—

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn | 2 | 9 | 0 |
| Boston | 7 | 9 | 2 |

Batteries — Dell, Coombs and McCarthy; Strand and Gowdy.

Afternoon Game—

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn | 4 | 9 | 3 |
| Boston | 6 | 12 | 2 |

Batteries—Smith, Appleton and Miller; Rudolph and Gowdy.

Chicago Beat Pittsburg.

Chicago, April 19.—William's double following Sacre's single and steal of second base, gave Chicago an 8-to-7 victory over Pittsburg to-day. The locals played a hard, uphill battle. Viox was ordered out of the game by Umpire Klem for arguing about a strike. Carey made five hits in five times at bat. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pittsburg | 7 | 15 | 1 |
| Chicago | 8 | 14 | 2 |

Batteries—Kantlehner, Harmon and Schang; Standridge, Adams and Bresnahan.

Drove Sallee From Mound.

Cincinnati, April 19. — Cincinnati knocked Sallee out of the box in the third inning, making enough runs to defeat St. Louis here to-day 4 to 1. Lear was master of the situation at all times. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis | 1 | 4 | 0 |
| Cincinnati | 4 | 8 | 0 |

Batteries—Sallee, Meadow and Snyder; Lear and Clarke.

Four Years More and Then Ty Cobb Will Be Ready to Retire

Ty Cobb says that he was married when the statement that he planned to quit baseball in four years was credited to him. The Georgian, however, admits that he would like to retire after another four seasons.

"I doubt if I do, though," says Tyrus. "A lot of fellows say they are going to voluntary retire in a certain number of years, but few of them ever do, and I presume that I will keep on like the rest. That is why I have never set any definite time for my retirement. As I feel now, I would really like to quit the game in the fall of 1918.

"I have been playing now for thirteen years, and another four seasons would make it seventeen. That should be enough baseball for anybody. I want to have a whole year to myself for travel and such things, and I really hope that things will break so I can climb out then. But this is not a promise, for if I set a definite time I would have to keep my word, and I probably won't want to quit when that time comes."

Cobb candidly admits that he does not report at training camps early, because he does not like training camps.

"If I had my way," said Ty, "I would stay in my house in Augusta, Ga., until about eight days before the season opened. That would give me plenty of time to get my batting eye and prepare me for the season. If a fellow does not take care of himself in the winter time or if he is a youngster who needs a lot of coaching, he should be in camp early. But if a player does keep in condition all winter there is no need for him to spend a month at the Southern camp.

"I can see why players who pass the winter in the North should be glad to report at once in the South, whether they need a lot of work or not. It is a pleasant change for them. But I spend the winter in Georgia, where there is all kinds of hunting, motoring, fishing and golfing the year around. My home is at Augusta and to expect me to gladly leave my Southern home town and live in a hotel and play ball long before the season opens, is foolish. I don't need the work. I spend the winter in a climate as balmy as that at any training camp and balmier than most and I don't like to play ball before the season opens. That's why I delay reporting at camp as long as possible."

Trout Will Be Carried by Torontos

Prospective Line-up.

The Toronto line-up to-day, a week before the championship opening, is as follows:

1st base—Jordan.
2nd base—Sheehan.
Shortstop—Roach.
3rd base—Hollander.
Right field—Graham.
Centre field—Brackett.
Left field—O'Hara.
Utility—Trout and Brown.
Catchers—Kelly, Konnick.
Pitchers—Herbert, Lake, Manning, Blancke.

Durham, N. C., April 19—Manager Clymer has made a final selection as far as possible of his team, except for the pitchers who have not yet shown sufficiently to make a choice. Fred Herbert is the only pitcher that shows form to date. This week will give them their chance to make good or at least give some indication of ability. Those who cannot will be let out.

Isaacs and Hunt left for Toronto to-day probably to join some Canadian League team. Manager Clymer is having great difficulty in placing the men he contemplates releasing. He hopes to place Priest in the New York State and Pepe will also be found a club if possible. It is the intention to carry Catcher Trout as utility man. Bert Wilson will work out this week and then go on to Toronto to try to get his bad foot in shape.

A big league pitcher is being negotiated for, and it is expected will be secured this week.

Jack Dunn's Richmond team lost three straight games to Durham. On the form shown they could not win in the Canadian League, but they hope to secure practically a new team from Connie Mack and others. To send the present team to Richmond would be suicidal to the game in that new city. Toronto has turned Catcher Kritchell over to Richmond.

A VALUED GUIDE.

"Well, William, have you heard from your son?"

"No, miss; but they'll send 'e to the front right away. 'E's just the man they be wantin' there."

"I'm sure he is. But why do you think he will go straight to the front?"

"Why, you see, miss, 'e'll be able to show 'em the way about. 'E was at the Boer war, an' knows all them parts."

Has $150,000 In Pitchers

Washington's Staff Cost Griffith About $3,600

JOHNSON IS BIG ASSET

Washington fans boast of the greatest slabbist of all times—Walter Perry Johnson, the Coleyville thunderbolt. Manager Griffith goes even further than this. He claims that he has the best equipped pitching staff in baseball and says that his kids, as he calls them, are going to demonstrate to other teams that such is the case.

Have you ever stopped to consider what the National's pitchers would bring if put under the hammer? Fuarthermore, have you ever given a thought as to the price these thirteen slabbists cost the Washington baseball club? If you haven't, then you will be interested to note the following:

Manager Griffith has set a price on Walter Johnson. "If I were to put Johnson on sale he would bring at least $60,000," said Grif. "Ayres is worth $10,000; Shaw, $20,000; Bentley, $10,000; Boehling, $15,000; Harper, $10,000; Engel, $5,000; Gallia, $5,000; Hopper, $3,000, and probably more to say nothing of my other promising youngsters who would bring a goodly sum." Despite the fact that Griffith has named these figures, he says that he would not sell one of them for this price.

A $150,000 Investment.

Summing it up, it is about a $150,000 investment, and it cost less than any staff in baseball. Johnson came here for his railroad fare. Think of that. Cliff Blankenship, former National, saw him working, and signed him. Shaw was a gift, having been signed while a member of the Pittsburg Collegian. Bentley was a green country lad and reported for a trial. Boehling was with the Richmond Battle Ax team. He pitched a game in Washington, and made such a favourable impression that Griffith secured his services.

Engel was a student at Mount St. Mary's College when he signed his contract, while Harper was picked up off the sand lots at Hackensack, N.J. Thormahlen, Clarke, Russell and Stevens are the youngsters who may make good and further increase the full value of the pitching staff.

Only Three Pitchers Costly.

There were three pitchers who cost real coin. They are Gallia, Ayres and Hopper. For Galia, Griffith traded Vaughn and Walker and he figures that it was a $12,000 transaction. Ayres was bought from the Richmond club for the surprisingly low price of $1,200. Tommy Long, the outfielder, was traded for Hopper, and $1,200 was spent in securing Long. Therefore it will be seen that the pitching staff of the Washington baseball club cost but $3,600, and you could not buy one who was on last year's team for this amount.

When Griffith said that he had the greatest pitching staff in the business he hit the nail squarely on the head. Griff has five left-handers, three of which are bound to win a lot of ball games this season. They are Bentley, Boehling and Harper. He has Thormahlen, who gives every promise of becoming a star, and young Clarke, who, although still green, may make a good slabbist when he gains more experience. It is the most promising southpaw quintet in major league baseball.

Shaw, Ayres, Harper, Engel and Gallia are all good pitchers and, above the average. Besides costing a mint less than any in the business and being worth more, these pitchers in the matter of age, average less than those on any other club. Several of them have not passed the minority mark, and Johnson, although considered a veteran, is still a young man. Other major league clubs are bound to have a whole lot of trouble beating this pitching staff this year. It is gradually rounding into shape, and will be ready when the gong rings.

To Play For the Basketball Championship

There should be a big crowd at the Y.M.C.A. to-morrow night when the Veterans meet the Excelsiors for the basketball championship of the city. The Veterans won the first league of the season, while the Excelsiors won the second one, which has just been finished. So when the two teams meet to-morrow night it will be a battle royal from start to finish. Don't miss this opportunity to see the game of the year.

Maisel Is An Arrow On Bases

PHILADELPHIA, April 17.— Frits Maisel of the New York Yankees, leading base runner of the American League last year, sighs for new worlds to conquer.

Not only does Frits intend to hold his laurels, but is out to establish a record which will live in the game long after he has passed.

He accomplished the rare feat of stealing second, third and home, in the game against the Athletics this afternoon.

In the ninth inning Maisel got on first base when he forced Marty McHale on an infield tap. Then he started running. He beat Lapp's throw to second by a city block, won a close decision at third, and, as Harper wound up, made a dash for the plate. Harper was so taken aback by the daring of the runner that he hesitated just a fraction of a second before throwing. That fraction was fatal for Maisel slid over safely.

NOT A COUGH CURE.

"A little girl sitting next me in church was coughing," said Mrs. Jones at the card club. "So I whispered to her mother for permission to slip her a cough drop. The child had it in her mouth a moment and then swallowed it."

"Would you kindly give her another?" the mother whispered.

"I'm sorry, but I had only the one,' I answered.

"Coming out of church I felt in my pocket and was horrified to find not the cough drop. You see, I had had a cough drop and a button in my pocket."

"And what did you do?" chorused the women at the table. "Did you tell her mother?"

"No, I didn't. I was mad. It was a very unusual button from my new suit."—Kansas City Star.

Joe Lally Will Arrive Here To-night or on Wednesday

Greatly Encouraged by Enthusiasm in Havelock-Marmora Territory

Examiner Special:

HAVELOCK, April 20. — Mr. Joe Lally visited the lacrosse clubs in Hastings, Norwood, Havelock and Marmora on Monday, and to-day went on to Tweed, Madoc and Stirling, and if possible will arrive in Peterborough to-night. Otherwise he will not arrive in Peterborough until Wednesday. In all the towns in this district he was enthusiastically received and found every evidence that the game will be more popular than ever this year. While in Havelock he visited Mr. Percy Lancaster. Mr. Lally is looking forward to a good reception in the new district, around Peterborough and will also visit Millbrook, Lindsay and Lakefield. If he is able to make train connections he will be in Peterborough to-night, and hopes to meet as many of the lacrosse fans as possible.

WEDDING BELLS

EANO—WELSH.

A quiet wedding was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral this morning, at 6 o'clock, when Miss Rose Ellen Welsh, Downie Street, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Eano of the Hunter Street firm of Lane and Eano. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Elizabeth Welsh and Mr. Herb. Dennis was best man. Rev. Father Phelan, Rector of the Cathedral, officiated. Mr. and Mrs. Eano left this morning on a wedding trip and on their return will reside on Hunter Street.

CONROY—HERR.

A pretty, but quiet wedding was solemnized this morning at 6 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception by Rev. Father McCarthy when Miss Josie Herr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Herr of Asphodel, and Mr. Will Conroy of this city, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

Miss Margart Herr, sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, while the duties of gromsman were ably performed by Mr. James Conroy, cousin of the groom.

After the ceremony the bridal party returned to the home of the bride's uncle, Mr. John Dwyre, Rubidge Street, where a dainty wedding break, fast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Conroy left for points west. On their return they will reside on Prince street, city.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the residence of Mr. J. Hope, Westwood, interment in Westwood cemetery. Rev. Mr. Goodwill will conduct service at the House.

Shower By The Business Girls' Club

Citizens Could Help Work of Young Ladies With Towels and Sheets on Thursday

The Business Girls' Club needs towels and sheets for a base hospital which they propose to assist. Many of the citizens have already responded generously, but opportunity is to be given all who would like to help in the work. With a view to getting as much material together as possible, a sheet and towel shower will be held on Thursday evening next at 8 o'clock in the green parlour of the Y.W.C.A. This is not for the Business Girls alone, but for every one who would be willing to help.

Many of the business men of the city are assisting the girls to make their undertaking a success. Mr. J. M. Greene has kindly offered to hem the sheets in his store, demonstrating the Davis sewing machine. Mr. P. Hetherington will launder them free of charge. Mr. Reg. Turner has also offered to prepare a sign which will be placed in front of the Y.W.C.A.

Each of the members of the Business Girls' Club will purchase whatever towels and sheets they feel in a position to purchase and take them to headquarters at the Y.W.C.A. on Thursday evening. Any others who intend helping may either take their conaribution on Thursday evening or send it. A musical programme is being prepared for the meeting at the Y.W.C.A., and anyone who proposes attending is assured of a pleasant evening's entertainment.

John Gillespie Won Empress Silver Cup

At the Allies' Shooting Gallery Which Moves to Toronto About May 1st

Mr. John Gillespie has won the silver cup presented by the Empress Hotel for Home Guard members at the Allies' Ranges on Water street. Hundreds of the members of the Guard have competed in this contest, and the best shots were tied at one stage, Percy Blade, Ernest Symes and J. Gillespie each scoring 65 out of 70. While it looked like a tie and shoot-off, Mr. Gillespie came through with 69 out of 70, and captured the cup. This score speaks for itself.

Among the large number of men who have been shooting at the Water Street gallery none has shown greater improvement than Mr. Gillespie. It is hoped that the Cup will be annually competed for by the members of the guards, and as a remembrance of their establishment during the past winter. Ernie Symes won a five-dollar pair of boots Saturday night, scoring 13 out of 15 on the top row birds.

Manager Paxman stated that the gallery will be moved to Toronto for May 1st, where the local owner will open what will likely be the best shooting gallery in the city. While in Peterborough they have not only developed good shots among the men, but also among the ladies, quite a number shooting twice weekly.

MILLION-SHARE DAYS OF FREQUENT OCCURRENCE

There are no longer signs of gloom in the brokerage offices, says a New York authority. Everybody is busy. In three and a half months this year more than half as much business in stocks has been transacted as in the whole of 1914. Allowance must be made, of course, for the fact that the Exchange was closed for more than four months after the war began, but the commission men are especially cheered by the knowledge that April has supplied a substantial portion of this year's total trading, and the market appears to be still going strong. Million share days had been scarce until this month since since 1912, when the entire twelve months produced the same number as the past week.

Wheat Quotations

NEW YORK, April 20.—With the exception of Road Island, gains were shown all along the line in to-day's market. Public interest has to some extent switched to rail issues. Rock Island was a bear feature. It opened at 32 and closed at 24 1-8. Both steel opened at 132 and closed at 143 7-8. The high water mark was reached at 147 7-8. Mexican petroleum recorded a net gain of two points.

The rise in Mexican petroleum was said to be due to the announcement of the formation of an English subsidiary to handle the big foreign contracts particularly for the supply of oil to steamship companies.

Belgian Takes Iron Cross in Duel, But Dies

Kills Prussian Officer in Hand-to-Hand Combat for Trophy.

LONDON—Occupied as they are with their stories of battles and the greater military movements in the war, correspondents have little time to deal with what they call "minor events." But fewer more dramatic little stories have come to light than one of a duel for possession of an iron cross told by a correspondent who came with a number of wounded from the Belgian battlefield to a hospital.

"One of the most sadly wounded," he writes, "is a Belgian officer. He is in rags and tatters, smeared with blood, hacked about the shoulders and head, but still conscious. He is carried from the car to the clearing hospital, and laid upon a bed, where his rags are tenderly removed from his limbs.

Little Packet in Shirt.

"Wrapped in his shirt is a little packet. That, too, is removed, and the folds are undone. He stretches out a trembling hand.

"'Mademoiselle,' he says, in the weakest possible whisper. 'Mademoiselle, I pray you do not take that away from me.'

"'What is it?' asked the nurse.

"'Undo the wrapping and you shall see,' replied the officer.

"The girl obeys. The last fold is unwrapped, and there falls from it a black cross, edged with silver and attached to a striped ribbon.

"'Ma foi!' mutters the French doctor who is standing by. 'That is the iron cross.'

"'Indeed, yes," whispers the wounded man. 'It is a souvenir—' He smiles feebly. 'A souvenir of a great fight.

"'We met in the moonlight, the Prussian officer and myself. We fought hand to hand. I saw the shine of the cross on his breast and I cried to him as we fought in the mud, "You wear that cross!" "Yes," replied my enemy. "Take it from me if you can." "You received it for gallantry?" "I did, monsieur." "In my country—in Belgium?" "Even so," replied the Prussian. "Then," said I, "I will have it," and I rushed at him. Madly we fought and scrambled in the slime.

Tears Cross from Breast.

"'At last he fell, bathed in blood. I also fell, but I tore the cross from his breast before unconsciousness overcame me. . . . and when I awoke in the dawn I was lying upon him. He was dead and stark. Hours passed, and at last they came and found me and carried me away."

"He struggled to say more. He only sighed heavily as his head fell back, but there was a smile upon his face.

"'He is dead,' said the doctor.

"The nurse laid the cross over the still heart. 'It should be buried with him,' she said gravely."

ATTEMPTED TO PENETRATE THE DARDANELLES

Six Hostile Torpedo Boats Were Unsuccessful in Their Endeavours—All Withdrew Hurriedly

FIGHTING AT HAFIZKOR

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 21. — It was officially announced to-day that during Sunday night, six hostile torpedo boats attempted to penetrate the Dardanelles. They were picked up by Turkish forts and two were hit by shells. All then withdrew hurriedly.

SIMLA, April 21.—An official report of the fighting at Hafizkor, northwest of Shabkadz, says that the attacking Moslems were defeated with a loss of 150 killed and wounded. The most significant factor was the success of the Afghan officials in restraining Afghan Mahommedans from participating.

The statement says that the enemy, numbering four thousand men, attacked British patrols and that the latter were able to maintain all of their positions until the end of the fighting.

GREAT ACTIVITY AMONG TROOPS AT LEMNOS

Important Operations Believed to Have Commenced in the Dardanelles

STRICT CENSORSHIP

BERLIN, via wireless, April 21. — With a strong censorship again in effect it is believed certain that important operations have commenced against the Dardanelles.

Special despatches indicate great activity among the British troops at Lemnos, and transports with additional men and munitions are arriving daily from Alexandria.

A special despatch to the Tages Zeitung says that twenty thousand English and French troops have landed near Enos, and also says that land batteries are again being engaged by the Allied warships at a number of points.

First Canadian to get Military Cross —Lieut. W. G. Colquhoun of Hamilton, with the Princess Patricias, who was given the Military Cross, along with Lieut. Papineau, by the King, for gallantry and resource.

AUSTRIANS FAIL IN SIX DAY BATTLE TO RETAKE POSITIONS IN HUNGARY

Russians Repulse Sixteen Attacks in One Day in Desperate Fighting for the Heights of the Mezolaborcz District of Hungary---The Attacks Exceeded in Violence Any Previous Ones.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, via London, April 21.—Austrian attacks on the heights of Mezolaborcz, district of Hungary, where the Austrians for six days have been attacking furiously to regain positions recently taken by the Russians, appear to have subsided definitely.

The attacks, which exceeded in violence any action on this front reached their greatest intensity on April 17, when sixteen assaults are reported to have been made on that one day. The encounters ended in the evening in a desperate bayonet charge and sustained hand to hand encounters which left the Russians, according to reports received by the Russian officials, firmly ensconced on the height of Telepotch. After this the Austrian attack appeared to have spent itself and there are no indications of a resumption of activity.

Austrian assaults upon the other important height in the East Beskids, namely Zelos, were repulsed chiefly by the fire of rifles and machine guns. After three sharp counter attacks the Austrians here, too, gave up the attempt to regain the summit.

On the northern front the swampy condition of the thawing ground prevents operations on a large scale. Military activity in this region is limited to long range artillery duels and aeroplane reconnaissances.

Petrograd butchers refused to sell meat to-day, in protest against a recent government order warning all retailers that prices must not be raised above rates fixed by the government. Customers who went to the shops for their usual purchases found them empty. They received little encouragement from the butchers, who said that there was no prospect that a supply of meat would be available.

This action led to disorders and in some shops excited customers broke into the meat cellars and on finding them well stocked insisted that they be served. Incipient riots, which resulted in the damaging of several shops, were ended by the police, who made an investigation as a basis for court procedure against the butchers.

Shops in which no meat was found were closed by the police and will not be permitted to reopen until special permission has been obtained. Butchers who concealed meat will be fined or imprisoned. The government order which caused the butchers to protest, reads in part:

"Certain merchants, using the war as a pretext, are raising artificially the prices of various commodities. I beg them to remember that in Russia there is a plentiful supply of products and that the law of supply and demand cannot operate in fixing prices if prices exceed the rates established by the government. The present difficulty in regard to the transportation of goods should not be used by merchants.

"Observe this warning, and do not force an application of my authority Consumers should unite in informing me of any abuse of the government regulations."

THE FIGHTING IS VIOLENT IN ALSACE

Two German Attacks Have Been Repulsed.—French Progress Between the Meuse and Moselle

THE "SPRING DRIVE"

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 21.— The French War Office announced two German attacks during the last 24 hours, and some artillery duels at various points of the battle front. Otherwise all news of fighting has been most carefully guarded.

The German attacks, one of which was in Le Pretre wood and the other at Hartmanns-Weilerkopf were repulsed. Slight progress on the part of the French arms is reported between the Meuse and the Moselle.

German aviators have dropped fifty incendiary bombs on Rheims.

There has been rather violent bombarding and fighting between the advanced posts on the borders of Parroy forests. Two German counter-attacks at Hartmanns-Weilerkopf Monday evening were repulsed.

The afternoon communique said there was no news to report outside of artillery exchanges near Soissons and near Rheims in the Argonne.

Further details were published today of the British capture of Hill 60, near Ypres. Very severe fighting, in which both sides suffered heavy losses, took place at this point. The British success is declared by Field Marshal France to be an important one, as it gives the British guns command of a considerable area occupied by the Germans and paves the way for an attack on the passages of the Lys, by means of which the towns of Lille, Roubaix, and Turcoing can be approached.

Joffre's "Nibbling."

Early in the war there was attributed to General Joffre a statement which caught the fancy of the world, but at the time carried very little enlightenment. Asked if the French offensive had begun seriously he had replied—"No, I am just nibbling." But in March and April the word came to have a far more serious and sinister connotation than at first.

An examination of the actions in the Champagne, at Neuve Chapelle, has satisfied Hilaire Belloc, the most eminent of British War critics, that allied strategy in the West is now undertaking a policy of attrition, which every American must necessarily associate with the methods of the greatest of the generals of the North.

To be successful a policy of attrition presupposes a superiority of numbers with the general taking the offensive. This the French, with their British and Belgian allies, have. French official reports continue to place the German strength in the West at forty-seven corps, or substantially 2,820,000 men. But the strength of the French, Belgian and British, with the reserve formations and troops in the depots, cannot be less than 4,000,000, and is bound to grow as the Russian contingents arrive.

Earl Grey Says Sin to Pray For Peace Yet

LONDON, April 20.—"I agree that it would be a sin to pray for peace until the barbarous, world-enslaving pretensions of Germany have been killed," declared Earl Grey at a Royal Colonial Institute meeting to-day. "No peace will be acceptable to us which is not also acceptable to the overseas dominions which rallied so gallantly to the flag. If we are true to ourselves we shall at the conclusion of the war be more powerful than ever. Let us see that we give the wide world reason for its confidence."

Soldiers Are on Honour Not to Write Secrets

LONDON, April 20.—In order to relieve the hard worked censor, soldiers writing home letters from the front are now being put in their honour as to the contents of their letters. A special envelope has been issued to the troops in the fighting line for this purpose. It is green in colour and headed "On active service." On the flap is this declaration, which must be signed by the writer:

"I certify on my honour that the contents of this letter refer to nothing but private and family matters."

Bigger Zeppelins And Bigger Bombs

GENEVA, April 21.—German and Swiss newspapers published in towns around Lake Constance, where the Zeppelin works are situated, say that Emperor William seems displeased at the results obtained by Zeppelin airships in recent raids, and has ordered much larger dirigibles constructed. Two of the new aircraft, the newspapers assert, are to be finished each month. Formerly one airship was built every three weeks. The number of workmen at the Zeppelin plan has been nearly doubled, and the machinery has been greatly augmented.

Count Zeppelin has arrived at Friedrichshafen to supervise the execution of the new order, the object of which, according to the newspapers, is organized raids against Paris and London. The new Zeppelins will cost over $800,000 each, while the bombs they will carry will be double the size of those now in use.

Buttons controlling a new combination lock are set in the perimiter of the knob so that the lock can be operated without the combination being seen by an unauthorized person.

The Swiss government decided to favour the single phase system for electrifying its railways in preference to the third rail because it cost ten per cent. less to make the change.

To save fuel and keep a kitchen cooler there has been invented a false bottom for a range fire-box to hold just enough coal to cook a meal.

ITALY'S ARMY AND NAVY IS ALL READY

Troops Are Concentrated at Strategic Positions Prepared to Strike First Blow Against Austria

EXCITEMENT INTENSE

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

ROME, April 21.—It is now up to the Italian Government. So far as army and navy are concerned, they are ready to strike at a moment's notice.

Troops are concentrated at strategic positions from which the first hostile movement against Austria must be made.

The navy is in rendezvous in readiness to protect the Italian coast cities from any raid by the Austrian fleet, which is still at Pola.

Excitement is intense in official circles because of the belief that war is inevitable. Despite this, however, Prince Von Buelow, the German Ambassador, continues to assure the government that Austria will make concessions that will satisfy Italy.

Curious rumours of negotiations that might end the war continue to be voiced in certain quarters. But there does not seem to be anything tangible to hang them on.

Rather, they seem to be public expressions on the part of those officials who have fought hard to keep Italy out of the war.

Advices from every section of the Austrian frontier tells of preparations for war on both sides.

Rome is quiet, people seemingly having accepted the belief that war is certain to come, with the result that agitation generally has been abandoned.

The Vatican is still working for peace, but with little hope of success.

Secretly Wed on Top of Mountain

Weds Cotton Broker Despite Pleas of Poet, Soldier and Writer.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.—Wooed in vain by a poet, a soldier and a writer, Mrs. Estelle Darneal, beautiful society woman of the Transbay section is to-day the bride of Charles Edward Dupee, cotton broker and member of the Union League Club. Left to mourn the fact are George Sterling, a soldier; Lieutenant Louis Soleliac, and a newspaper reporter.

A few years ago, Mrs. Darneal, one of the most gifted women of the transbay section, secured a divorce from Harvey Darneal, then a member of the American consulate at China. After living for a time in San Francisco, Mrs. Darneal went to storied Monterey for seclusion. There she met and was wooed by George Sterling, the prevailing genius of American verse.

Sterling was an ardent worshipper He was a frequent caller at a little chocolate-coloured cottage on "army hill" leased by Mrs. Darneal. He wrote sonnets, dedicated to the charming woman whom he designated as "the beautiful and pure." He entertained her at his bungalow in Carmel-by-the-Sea with delightful parties. Always he referred to her as the "wonder woman."

Lieutenant Louis Soleliac, Twelfth Infantry, U. S. A., also was an admirer. The army man pressed his suit vigorously, with the result that in July, 1913, at a dinner given at the home of Miss Betty McQuaide, in Monterey, announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Darneal to Lieutenant Soleliac was made, but a few months later it was broken.

The newspaper man, who met her while "covering the story" of her divorce, also tried to win her heart.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment, Money Back If It Fails

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatment, we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Pills.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Pills are unexcelled, and that they will do all we claim, that we sell them with our own personal guarantee that they shall not cost the user a cent if they should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Pills, for kidney ailments that resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time, they will positively remove all symptoms and effect permanent relief.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Pils, and our generous guarantee should convince the most sceptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Pills at our risk. Price 50c. Sold in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

"And so you were the navvy!" said Ivan. "I didn't know that, but I at once made up my mind it was dangerous to meddle with Fairfield if he was watched. I gave him the slip, went back to Mr. Grell, and typed out a note to you. You got it?"

"Yes I got it. Where did the paper you used come from?"

Ivan's brow contracted into a frown of deep thought. "I forgot—no—I got it from Mr. Grell. He tore off a half sheet from a letter."

Foyle was thinking of the finger-prints he had found on that notepaper. Ivan plunged again into his narrative. "After that the Princess came, and Condit. She had fixed up an arrangement with the people living in the house that they were to declare her their daughter if inquiries were made. I don't know if she slept there after, but she did that night. We worked out a cipher in order to attempt to communicate secretly with either Sir Ralph Fairfield or Lady Eileen Meredith. As I have said, the lack of money was our trouble, and we had to get some—somehow. Condit went away, and I persuaded Mr. Grell to go with him and spend the night at a gambling-joint in Smike Street. I remained. You see, we guessed you might want to examine the house, but we weren't certain. We were right. As you know, I only got away over the roofs in just in time, and the Princess slipped away while you were engaged.

"After that it was a game of hide-and-seek. We decided that it was too dangerous to keep our detective a prisoner, and sent him back in a motor car we hired. It was easy enough to make a false number to slip over the real one, so that it couldn't be traced.

"It was my idea after that that Mr. rell should become a watchman on the river until we could get away by embarking before the mast. We tried the advertisement method of communication and failed.

"The Princess undertook to see Lady Eileen—with what result you know. You know all that has happened since. I do not regret what I have done. If the killing of you or any other man would have saved Grell, I would not have hesitated."

"Thanks," said Foyle dryly. "You had a good try more than once. Now, are you willing to have your statement taken down by a shorthand writer—so far as it refers to events in London?"

"I'll repeat it when you like," answered Ivan, squaring his shoulders. "Now you say that you want to prove Mr. Grell's innocent I have nothing to hide, for I am certain that he is innocent."

"Tell me one other thing," said the superintendent. "What is the association between Petrovska and Grell? Why should she have taken part in this business"

Ivan spread out his white hands. "That you must find out either from Mr. Grell or her. I don't know."

Foyle drew out his watch. "All right, Ivan. I'll see you again shortly. Meanwhile, I'll send some one along to get your statement. I don't think you'll regret having decided to speak. Good-bye."

CHAPTER LI.

Both Sir Hilary Thornton and Chief Inspector Green were waiting for Heldon Foyle when he returned to his office. The superintendent darted a question at the chief inspector as he flung off his overcoat.

"Yes, all," answered Green. "She's at Malchester Row now. There was no trouble at all. She came up to the Grange at half-past three, in a car, and asked the maid who answered the door for Mrs. Ellis. The girl showed her into the sitting-room, acting on my instructions, and I walked in on her and told her I should detain her. She was angry at first, but in a moment or two she laughed, and asked if Mr. Grell was taken. That was all there was to it. I brought her back straight away by train. She seemed to treat it as a joke, but never a word about the case did she utter."

"And how did you get on, Foyle?" demanded the Assistant Commissioner.

The superintendent plumped into a chair. "I am sending a man up to get a statement from Ivan," he said. "There's much to be said for that Russian if his story is true—and I couldn't see any holes in it."

He related particulars of the interview that had taken place in the cell. Neither Thornton nor Green spoke till he had finished. The Assistant Commissioner smoothed his moustache, Green rubbed his head.

"Then Grell admitted the murder to Ivan?" said the latter, turning a puzzled face to Foyle. "You told me he was not the murderer."

"Nor was he," answered the superintendent. "According to Ivan, there was no blood on his clothes or on his hands a few minutes after Goldenburg was killed."

"Well, this beats all,' 'exclaimed Green. "I'm hanged if I understand."

Foyle lowered his voice to a whisper, and Green's saturnine face became a study as he listened. He gave a little gasp. "It lies between the three of them," said Foyle. "I am inclined to believe that we have been rather wrong in our first impressions of the finger-prints. But it never does to take chances. Suppose you go and take charge at Berkeley Square. There are four men there already. Lady Eileen has certainly had something to do with this, and we don't want to lose sight of her."

Green went off, his lips puckered into a whistle. Thorntton gave a shrug. "And now" he said. "It seems to me rather a deadlock of Mr. Grell and the Princess remain obstinate."

"Yes," agreed Foyle. "It's one of those cases in which it is a pity we're not allowed to adopt the French method of confrontation. Still, there's a shot in the locker yet. Perhaps you might care to come along with me and see Grell now. These disclosures of Ivan's make a difference, and rather bear out a suspicion I've had since I talked with Grell."

The Assistant Commissioner agreed and in a little they were walking to Malchester Row police station. The office of Bolt, the divisional detective-inspector, was empty, and with an order that they were not to be disturbed, Foyle and his chief entered the room. Under the escort of a uniformed inspector, Grell was brought in. The superintendent closed and locked the door, Grell moving stiffly aside to allow him to do so.

"Do you know Sir Hilary Thornton?" asked Foyle suavely.

Grell bowed. The Assistant Commissioner extended his hand. "How do you do, Mr. Grell? I should have been glad to have met you under happier circumstances, but I assure you that the respect in which I have always held you is not lessened by this unfortunate business."

The prisoner shook hands doubtfully and his eyes flashed a questioning look upon Foyle. The superintendent's face was blandly unconscious of the effect of the Assistant Commissioner's remark, although the words had been rehearsed and revised a dozen times during their walk to the police station. But he had to do with a man as astute and ready as himself.

"That's very good of you, I'm sure," said Grell, and a smile illumined his face as he added: "Though I don't know why this matter should increase your respect."

"Don't you?" said Foyle, laying stress on his words and eyeing the other meaningly. "Suppose it is because since I left you this morning, Ivan Abrimovitch has made a full statement to me?"

A little apprehensive shudder swept through Grell's frame. His lips opened to say something, but he checked himself suddenly. "What's that to do with me?" he demanded quietly.

"A great deal, if it's true, as I know it to be. Now, Mr. Grell, you are not obliged to answer any questions unless you like—you know that—but I warn you that your failing to do so cannot prevent us arresting the guilty person. We know you are innocent—though whether you may be charged as an accessory after the fact or not is another question. What do you say?"

The prisoner had leaned his arm on the table. His fists were clenched until the finger-nails bit into the flesh.

"If you've made up your minds, so much the better for me," he said with a half laugh. "Who have you fixed your suspicions on?"

It was clear that he had doggedly set himself to avoid affording them any help. His chin was as fixed as that of Foyle himself. The strong wills of the two men had crossed. The superintendent felt all his fighting qualities rise. He was determined to break down the other's wall of imperturbability. He accepted Grell's silence as a challenge.

Thornton's gentle, cultured voice broke in. 'We are only anxious to spare you as much as possible. You are a prominent man, and though you must be brought in, it will serve no purpose to increase what will create enough scandal."

"I fear you are wasting your time, gentlemen," said Grell, stretching himself wearily. "Won't it cut this short if I admit that I killed Goldenburg? I will sign a confession if it will please you."

The eyes of Thornton and Foyle met for a second. There was a meaning look in the superintendent's, as who should say, "I told you so." Then he took from his breast-pocket a piece of paper, which he unfolded as he smiled amiably at Grell.

"That is childlike. Your finger-prints prove it is false. Perhaps you will tell us what underlies this note that you sent to Lady Eileen Meredith the day you left London."

He read:

"We are both in imminent danger unless I can procure sufficient money to help me evade the search that is being made for me. If I am arrested, I feel ultimately exposure must come. If you have no other way of obtaining money, will you try to get an open cheque from your father? You could cash it yourself for notes and gold and bring it to me. For God's sake do what you can. I am desperate."

He read it swiftly, as though certain of the accuracy of the words. As a matter of fact, he was not. He had pieced together the broken words and phrases that he had taken from the burning paper in Eileen Meredith's room as well as he could. In filling up some of the gaps he might have been preposterously wrong.

"Where did you get that?" demanded Grell. "Eileen told me she had burnt it."

His words were an admission that the note was practically correct. Foyle placed it carefully back in his pocket, while Grell stared at the opal shade of the electric light.

"She did burn it," he answered. "I chanced to be able to retrieve the message. I feel certain that, however dire your necessity, you would not have written to her in taht strain unless you had some strong reason. Who did you mean when you said 'both in imminent danger'?"

"Ivan and myself, of course.'"

"Ivan was under arrest at the time. Nothing could avert the danger from him. And you say that you feared exposure if you were arrested. That, of course, meant that you would be unable to keep shielding the person you are shielding?"

German Officers In Turkey Killed In Battle By Turkish Troops.

PARIS, April 20.—German officers have arrived at Constantinople within the past fortnight to take the places of others who have been killed, says The Temps correspondent at Dedeagatch.

The Germans have induced the Ottoman Government to pass a special law authorising superior officers to shoot at sight any officer of inferior grade or private disobeying orders, "but," the despatch continues, "the Turks have succeeded in killing a number of their German masters during battle."

Blacker Piracy Promised.

BERLIN, April 20.—(Via London)—Referring to the appointment of the captain of the British steamer Thordis as a lieutenant of the naval reserve and the award of a medal to him for ramming a German submarine, an official statement issued yesterday says:

"It is therefore shown that the British Government approves of rewards to its commercial vessels which make attacks on armed vessels contrary to international law. Such vessels may now expect less than ever warning or consideration."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA
If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally Nobody Can Tell

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good ,even colour, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadys, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use-product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

Austrian Capitals Fortified

LONDON, April 20.—"A reliable person, who has just arrived from Austria and Hungary," says The Times' Bucharest correspondent, declares that Vienna and Budapest are strongly fortified. On the left bank of the Danube Vienna is protected by long lines of trenches, barricades and barbed wire entanglements. Fourteen million dollars have been spent on fortifications."

Prussian Losses Grow.

COPENHAGEN, April 20.—The total Prussian casualties in the war are now 1,196,969, according to six fresh lists of losses published in Berlin yesterday. The six lists contained 32,524 names.

HAD INDIGESTION FOR OVER 10 YEARS.
ALMOST DESPAIRED OF EVER GETTING WELL.

Indigestion is one of the worst forms of stomach trouble. The stomach becomes upset and you have a raw, debilitating feeling in it. After a meal you feel that you must get rid of that nasty, bilious, burning sensation. It is not necessary for you to be troubled with indigestion if you will only try that old and well-known remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, which is a combination of nature's best known roots, herbs and barks for the cure of all stomach and blood troubles.

Mrs. Mary MacKay, Hunter's Mountain, N.S., writes: "I was troubled with indigestion for more than ten years. I tried several doctors' medicines claiming the power to cure, but all without success. Having heard of the many cures effected by Burdock Blood Bitters, I decided to give it a trial. After taking two bottles I was completely cured. My appetite which was very poor is now good, and I can eat most everything without any disagreeable feelings.

B.B.B. is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

ROUTING THE ENEMY

How a Swarm of Busy Little Bees Put Train Robbers to Flight.

By ALVAH JORDON GARTH.

Spick and span as a polished toy, newly lacquered and metal trimmed, old 98, coach locomotive of the Overland Special, tooted to a stop at Beachville. There it took one passenger aboard, and then clanged on its way again, a miracle of life and beauty.

The engineer handled the lever with the dignity of a man ruling the destinies of a world. His foreman, the envy of all short run operators along the line, fired the coal into the blazing box like an expert tossing a ball and enjoying it. It was a big thing to run the handsome twenty-four-wheeler. The proudest man among the train crew, however, was Jack Danby, and the most delighted passenger was the one just taken aboard—Jack's father. Gray, grim and very much set in his old-fashioned farmer ways, he was considerably excited over taking his first ride of consequence behind the iron horse.

Jack had started in at railroad work four years before the present time. He had worked his way up to a very good salary, and was now assistant express messenger on the Mountain run. His father was anxious to visit his brother, who lived two hundred miles away. At first, stubborn in his ideas as to time-honored usages, he was bent on making the journey on horseback. The prospect of a free ride influenced him, however, and here he was, an honored guest of his son in the express car.

"There's a cushioned chair for you, father," said Jack, opening the side door the six inches permitted by the protection chain. "Just view the scenery and make yourself comfortable."

"Hands Up!"

"You must be a great favorite, Jack, to get a job in the very first car of the train. What's that iron box in the corner?" asked the old man.

"That's the express company's safe," explained Jack. "We're carrying the pay roll of two sections tonight. I presume there's a quarter of a million dollars in that safe."

"And something else, Jack!" laughed his mate, Dave Hardy. "Your son has locked up his first engagement ring for safe keeping, Mr. Danby."

"Eh, who's it for?" inquired the old farmer pricking up his ears.

"Why, who could it be for but pretty Nance Burdick?" asked Jack, flushing furiously. "I hope you don't find any objections, father?"

"Yes, I do," declared the farmer. "I object to your not having married her long ago. I would, if I'd been in your shoes. Ha, ha!"

The old man sat at the breezy opening in the doorway, watching the fast flying landscape with manifest contentment and delight. He had come aboard with an old-fashioned satchel and what seemed like a cardboard box about two feet square. It was done up in manila paper and this with his satchel he kept close beside him.

"What you got in that box, father?" asked Jack finally.

"Nothing to attract you, son. You've been so long away from the farm it wouldn't interest you."

As it began to grow dusk the landscape ceased to interest Mr. Danby. They had lunch. The old man began to yawn.

"See here, father," said Jack, "in the head end of the car yonder there's a cot. Dave and I spell each other on it on the long runs sometimes. Rest a bit, won't you?"

"I believe I will," assented the farmer.

The dead-end of the car was partitioned off with a door in the middle. This had once contained a pane of glass to admit light, but it was missing now. Jack soon heard his father snoring. He and his mate were sorting some second-class express matter about an hour later when a crash aroused them.

In went the panel of the platform door. Then end of a crowbar intruded. Then, before the startled express messengers could advance or retreat, a quick hand reached in, snapped the catch, and as the shattered door swung inwards two men sprang into view.

"Hands up!" ordered one of them, and the trainmen found themselves threatened with two glittering revolvers.

Resistance meant sure death, and Jack and Dave were forced to succumb to being bound hand and foot. The men carried them to the doorway of the dead end, threw them upon the floor, and proceeded to assault the steel safe. One of them faced the prison place of their captives, weapon leveled.

His companion must have been working some fifteen minutes on the stubborn strong box, when the old farmer awoke.

"Father," spoke Jack quickly, "don't stir, don't raise your voice above a whisper."

"Why not?" inquired the old man.

"Train robbers!" announced Dave in a cautious voice.

"You don't say so—where?" demanded the farmer.

"Opt in the other part of the car. We are bound hand and foot. They'll put you in the same fix if they discover you."

Jack proceeded to explain the situation in detail.

"H'm," muttered the old man. "Two against us three. What's the matter with me setting you free and pitching into the critters?"

"Because they are armed and ready to shoot," warned Jack.

The old man ventured cautiously to the door window and peered through. Then he retreated into the darkness. Jack heard him chuckle and approach the door again, his mysterious box in his hand.

"For goodness' sake, father, don't do anything rash!" he pleaded.

"Oh, no. I'll only give those fellows a rash," said the old man, with a suppressed laugh.

There was the sound of ripping paper and breaking wood. Then one end of the box lid was slid gently across the window space.

"Hi! what's that?" sharply yelled the man at the safe, dropping his burglarious tools in a hurry.

"I should say so! Bees!" yelled his partner. "Ouch! Murder! There's a dozen of them! A thousand! A swarm!"

The captives heard a weapon clang to the floor of the car and the sound of hurrying footsteps. Suddenly old Danby dashed into the other part of the car. There was a yell, the sounds of a scuffle. Glancing out, the amazed Jack saw his father cornering one of the train robbers with his own revolver.

"Into that other part, double quick," ordered the staunch old hero. "Untie those boys, or I'll pepper ye!"

The Overland Special arrived at its next stop with its treasure chest intact and with a bound prisoner. His comrade, amid the agony of the bee bites, had leaped from the train.

Old Danby knew so much about the little honey makers that he soon had them out of the car and back in the box destined for his brother.

"There's a history to that ring," explained Jack, as he slipped the engagement circlet on the finger of blushing Nance Burdick back at their home town a few evenings later.

"Yes," chuckled his father seriously, "a history with a life pass over the road for yours truly, and a check from the railroad company big enough to spare something for a wedding present."

Sprains, Bruises Stiff Muscles

Sloan's Liniment will save hours of suffering. For bruise or sprain it gives instant relief. It arrests inflammation and thus prevents more serious troubles developing. No need to rub it in—it acts at once, instantly relieving the pain, however severe it may be.

Here's Proof

Charles Johnson, P. O. Box 108, Lansdown Station, N. Y., writes: "I sprained my ankle and dislocated my left hip by falling out of a third story window six months ago. I went on crutches for four months, then I started to use some of your Liniment, according to your directions, and I must say that it is helping me wonderfully. I threw my crutches away. Only used two bottles of your Liniment and now I am walking quite well with one cane. I never will be without Sloan's Liniment."

INDIGESTION, GAS OR SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Time "Pape's Diapepsin" in five Minutes all Stomach Misery is Gone.

"Really does" put bad stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heartburn and sourness in five minutes—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments into stubborn lumps, you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food and acid; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated; your insides filled with bile and indigestible waste, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvellous, and the joy is its harmlessness.

A large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin will give you a hundred dollars' worth of satisfaction or your druggist hands you your money back.

It's worth its weight in gold to men and women who cannot get their stomachs regulated. It belongs in your home—should always be kept handy in case of a sick, sour, upset stomach during the day or at night. It's the quickest, surest and most harmless stomach doctor in the world.

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

Three more Dutch trawlers have been seized by German warships and taken to Hamburg, according to news received from Ymuiden yesterday.

Sessions designed to bring about a settlement of the strike of 16,000 union carpenters were begun in Chicago yesterday by the State Board of Arbitration.

Plunging into the Hudson river at Rondout, N.Y., Everett Morris, a "down-and-outer," saved two boys from drowning and earned the price of a meal from an onlooker.

Pte. Edward S. Jennings, of the Princess Patricias, reported killed in action, was a merchant at Bethune, Sask., before enlisting at the opening of the war. He was a prominent Orangeman.

The auxiliary German cruiser Kron Prinz Wilhelm was placed in drydock yesterday. Official survey of her condition was begun at once. The vessel is guarded by forty soldiers from Fort Monroe.

Peter McL. Forin, aged 47, barrister of Belleville, died yesterday of pneumonia. He was a son of the late John Forin of that city. A brother, Dr. Forin, lives in Edmonton, and another brother is a judge at Nelson, B.C.

Downbound vessels at Mackinaw City, Mich., report the steamer Palhi aground on Simmons Reef in Lake Superior and blowing signals of distress. The Palhi was bound from the Canadian Soo to Chicago with steel rails.

John Westlake, of Winnipeg, sentenced to two years' imprisonment for complicity with Percy Hagel in releasing from custody of Kratchenko, the murderer, has been released from prison on parole after serving about half his term.

TROOPS LANDED.

Thirty-Five Thousand Allied Soldiers Are Near Dardanelles.

LONDON, April 20.—It is again unofficially announced that operations are under way in the Dardanelles, where the Turks are reported to be bulking defences with all speed against landing parties, but the news of the breaking up of the ice at Archangel, the only large seaport on the north coast of Russia, may induce the entente allies to be more deliberate in their attempts to unlock the gate to the Black Sea.

Berlin publishes a report from Athens that unusual activity prevails at the port of Mudros, on Lemnos Island, in the Aegean Sea, off the entrance to the Dardanelles Straits. All the French troops on the island, with the exception of some few battalions, have been sent away on transports. A total of 35,000 British and French soldiers were landed at Mudros during Wednesday and Thursday of last week.

BARON DE REUTER DEAD.

Managing Director of Great Agency Commits Suicide.

LONDON, April 20. — Baron Herbert De Reuter, managing director of Reuter's Telegram Co., was found dead Sunday at his home near Reigate, Surrey. A discharged revolver was found near his body and the authorities declare there is little doubt he committed suicide. Baron De Reuter was prostrated by the death of his wife last Thursday. Her body is still in the home awaiting interment. Their only son is in the army.

Baron Auguste Julius Clemens Herbert De Reuter was born March 10, 1852. He was educated at Harrow, Oxford and Paris. His wife, whom he married in 1876, was a daughter of the late Robt. Campbell of Buscot Park, Berkshire. Besides the son and heir, who is in the British army, they are survived by a daughter, who is the wife of J. W. E. J. Douglas.

The first baron was the founder of Reuter's Telegram Co., now one of the leading news-gathering organizations in the world.

ANGRY WITH U. S.

Austrian Press Does Not Like Attitude Shown By Republic.

VENICE, April 20.—(Via London) —The discussion aroused by the memorandum recently presented by the German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, to the State Department at Washington respecting American neutrality, is being followed with the keenest interest in Austria-Hungary. The tone of the press generally is hostile to the United States.

The Vienna Fremdenblatt says: "It will be difficult to answer such a justifiable remonstrance as that of Germany, nor does anybody expect an actual reply, but only what the United States has heretofore answered German admonitions with, namely, phrases. The feeling of disappointment which the attitude of the United States has produced in Austria will not disappear for a long time."

Negro Hanged for Murder.

SYDNEY, N.S., April 20. — John West, colored, was hanged yesterday morning for the murder of Miss Cassie Dunn, of North Sydney, last December. He was executed at the county jail at 6.15 o'clock. Death was instantaneous. Holmes was executioner.

West walked to the scaffold unassisted. He protested his innocence to the last. He did not sleep during the night, and refused breakfast.

VON DER GOLTZ IN CHARGE.

German is Given Command of the First Turkish Army.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 20. — Field Marshal Baron Kolmar Von Der Goltz has been appointed Commander-in-chief of the First Turkish army.

Field Marshal Von Der Goltz recently returned to Constantinople from a trip to Berlin, the object of which is reported to have been to urge the German Government to send an army to attack Serbia. In the early part of the war heserved as military Governor of Belgium, and in January was sent by Germany to Constantinople to assist in directing the Turkish army, which he had reconstructed in earlier years.

Flesh eating animals have the sense of smell better developed than vegetable eaters.

Honor Accorded to Bulldog.

One day when he was in Constantinople, Herr von Kiderlen Waechter, says the Hamburger Nachrichten, went to call by appointment on the Austro-Hungarian ambassador, Count von Pallavicini. He was accompanied, of course, by his bulldog, and when an acquaintance detained him for a minute in the ambassador's ante-chamber, the bulldog walked on and entered the count's room. The count, being almost blind and a little deaf, heard a noise in the room, and, thinking the German minister had entered, called out: "Good day, my dear Kiderlen! Have you good news from Berlin?"

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th, 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

BUSY ELSEWHERE.

Germany Is Likely to Abandon Hope of Invading France.

LONDON, April 20.—Various rumors are current regarding the central powers. Austria, through the medium of Venice, is credited with receiving with consternation the news of the extension of the Landsturm service to all classes between the ages of 18 and 50 years, while Rome is sponsor for the statement, attributed to a high German authority, that the German general staff has discarded all plans for an advance on the French front, deciding simply to remain on the defensive.

A despatch from Rome says the report has caused a deep impression because it is believed to signify that Germany has no hope of penetrating further into French territory.

Blackmailer Pleaded Guilty.

NEW YORK, April 20.—John Mericlla, a youth of 19, pleaded guilty yesterday to a charge of attempted extortion in having written two letters to Vincent Astor demanding $500 upon penalty of death. Mericlla pleaded guilty also to a charge of carrying concealed weapons, a revolver, which he attempted to use, having been found in his pocket when he was arrested Friday night. He was held in $2,500 bail on each charge for grand jury action.

WHAT DYSPEPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are, nine times out of ten, due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is acid in its nature, or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and lacking in that vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starchy, sweet or fatty food, and are trying to keep up a miserable existence on gluten products, I would suggest that you should try a meal of any food or foods which you may like, in moderate amount, taking immediately afterwards a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present, or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will find that your food agrees with you perfectly. Bisurated magnesia is doubtless the best food corrective and antacid known. It has no direct action on the stomach; but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of of the acid irritation which inflames the delicate stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the sense of dosing an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the acid—the cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisurated magnesia from your druggist, eat what you want at your next meal, take some of the bisurated magnesia as directed above, and see if I'm not right."

Want Premiers in London.

LONDON, April 20. — The Manchester Despatch discussing yesterday the participation of the dominions in peace problems says: "It is the very hour when for the first time complete unity in Imperial policy is not only possible but certain if the natural means of securing it are not thrown away. The excuse given that everybody is too busy will not do. It is the Empire's war, but the Colonial Office has not yet realized that fact that the presence of the dominions' Premiers in London now would be of inestimable value."

Constable's Close Call.

VANCOUVER, B.C., April 20.—Police Constable R. B. Newington, was shot and then clubbed into insensibility by two burglars, surprised by him early yesterday morning robbing a store. They drew guns and he opened fire, but was struck by a bullet above the heart, the bullet being deflected by a tobacco pouch. One burglar at least was struck, as bloodstains were traced for two blocks. Newington will recover.

Japan Recalls Cruisers.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—Japan has ordered all her warships in the Pacific waters near the American coasts, except those saiving the wrecked cruiser Asama in Turtle Bay to return to their home stations. Advices to that effect were received yesterday from Tokio at the Japanese embassy.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

DIVORCE TO BE GRANTED IN NOTED CASE

NEW YORK, April 19. — Mrs. Caroline Giddings Rogers has made application before Justice Giegerich in the Supreme Court for a divorce and by her testimony against Lorlys Elton Rogers, the dual-lived lawyer, added the final chapter to her tragic matrimonial career. The initial chapter was recorded last October, when Mrs. Ida Sniffen Walters, posing as the wife of the lawyer, killed her two infant children with bichloride of mercury.

Friends of Mrs. Rogers had predicted that she would not stand the ordeal of testifying without collapse, as she had frequently announced after her husband's duplicity was brought to her attention, that she still loved him. She did not collapse. She was in a highly nervous state, and throughout the proceedings sat near her brother, Prof. Franklin Giddings, of Columbia University.

Rogers did not appear. He was represented by Lawyer M. L. Jacobs.

Mrs. Rogers was dressed plainly in a blue serge suit trimmed with silver silk. She wore a black straw sailor hat and her features were partially hidden by a light veil. When Justice Giegerich called her to the stand she was assisted to her feet by her brother. She walked to the stand unsteadily, clinging to a brass railing.

"When were you married?" asked Emory R. Buckner.

"October 9, 1909, in Chicago," she answered.

"Have yon any children by Lorlys Elton Rogers?"

"No," she responded and lifted her veil. Tears were falling and Mr. Buckner waited until she regained her composure.

Justice Giegerich asked if she wanted alimony.

"None, whatsoever," she replied.

Edward Meckert, owner of the apartment house at No. 1431 University avenue, where Rogers and the Walters woman first lived, identified a photograph of Rogers as that of the man who lived with a Mrs. Rogers in a three-room apartment in his house.

Dr. William Grant Hague, of No. 1029 Ogden avenue, said that he had known the lawyer and his wife for several years, but when Mrs. Rogers was directed to stand up for identification again the physician said he had never seen her before in his life.

"I was called to the Rogers apartment to attend Mrs. Rogers in confinement," said the physician. "She was introduced to me by Mr. Rogers as his wife. When the child was born I attended her, and Mr. Rogers was overjoyed about the event."

After this visit the Rogers moved to No. 224 West One Hundred and Sixty-seventh street, and it was to this house that Dr. Hague was called to attend the two Rogers children when bichloride of mercury was administered to them.

"At that visit did you learn that the woman who called herself Mrs. Rogers was not the wife of the defendant?" asked Mr. Buckner.

"I did," he replied. "I learned that she was Ida Sniffen Walters."

Justice Giegerich announced that the proof was sufficient. He asked for all the papers in the case and promised a decision in two weeks.

M. L. Jacobs, counsel for Rogers, was asked if the lawyer intended to marry the Walters woman. He said he believed that was his client's intention. The divorce decree to be handed down by Justice Giegerich will, as all decrees provide, forbid Rogers from remarrying in this State.

A Gilbert Story.

Sir W. S. Gilbert, who was one of the few playwrights who defended the stage censor, was noted for his caustic criticisms on anything which did not meet with his approval.

While dining out once some one happened to ask him his opinion of Burne Jones' women. "Too long in the neck," remarked the author of "The Mikado." "When I look at one of them I always feel that she ought to have a joint in it and wear a stocking."—London Tit-Bits.

The Poppy.

The poppy throughout the east is an emblem of death. In many parts of India this flower is planted upon graves and in cemeteries. Whether or not the idea was suggested by the poisonous character of the juice is uncertain. It is believed that the poppy was known as a funeral plant to the ancient Egyptians, for upon the tombs opened of late on Mount Thebes appeared representations of plants which were evidently intended for poppies.—Pittsburgh Press.

What Thin Folks Should Do To Gain Weight

Physician's Advice for Thin, Undeveloped Men and Women

Thousands of people suffer from excessive thinness, weak nerves and feeble stomachs who, having tried advertised flesh-makers, food-fads, physical culture stunts and rub-on creams, resign themselves to life-long skinniness and think nothing will make them fat. Yet their case is not hopeless. A recently discovered regenerative force makes fat grow after years of thinness, and is also unequalled for repairing the waste of sickness or faulty digestion and for strengthening the nerves. This remarkable discovery is called Sargol. Six strength-giving, fat-producing elements of acknowledged merit have been combined in this peerless preparation, which is endorsed by eminent physicians and used by prominent people everywhere. It is absolutely harmless, inexpensive and efficient.

A month's systematic use of Sargol should produce flesh and strength by correcting faults of digestion and by supplying highly concentrated fats to the blood. Increased nourishment is obtained from the food eaten, and the additional fats that thin people need are provided. All leading druggists supply Sargol and say there is a large demand again and projecting point.

While this new preparation has given splendid results as a nerve-tonic and vitaliser, it should not be used by nervous people unless they wish to gain at least ten pounds of flesh.

Romance of a Highlander and Wealthy American Girl

Nothing Was Ever Swifter or More Unpremeditated—Has Just Taken Place at Rouen

PARIS, France, April 19.—The end of the prettiest little war romance has just taken place at Rouen. Nothing was ever swifter or more unpremeditated. It began at Nice, and the young soldier who had survived the German bullet fell a hopeless victim to Cupid's shafts. There is a little Paradise for wounded officers at Nice. It is called the Queen Mary Convalescent Home for British officers, and is installed in the hotel formerly used by Queen Victoria during her sojourn to the Riviera. It is a charming spot, and the wounded recover here as by miracle. One sees them pallid, feeble, moving slowly, often with the assistance of canes. A week or ten days of sunshine and balmy air, and the figure is erect, the eyes brighten, the cane is abandoned or carried with a little flourish. They are allowed a month, but often in a fortnight the invalid is ready for the front again.

Here came recently a young officer belonging to one of the Highland regiments. He was really a splendid fellow, over six feet high, and not too badly wounded. His name fairly reeked of the heather and bagpipes, but we will call him Duncan Macdonald. It was Nice's first experience of a Highlander, and he simply went to her head. No British soldier is more popular in France than the Scot with the little petticoat, or "Tommy Ecossais," as his French comrades affectionately call him. He is so undeniably a fine soldier that the dress is looked upon as rather a charming little national eccentricity. Why, the short pleated skirt in this year's fashions is due I am told to the spell of the kilt. So Nice followed her Highlander about, and admired him hugely, sidling up to him on every occasion to feel what the kilt was really made of.

In Ten Days.

There was also in Nice at that time a young American girl with her mother. She was charmingly pretty, the girl—the best little dancer at the exclusive country club. Many hearts had been laid at her feet, but she danced indifferently over them all, and was supposed to be waiting for a title. Fate led her one day into a tea-room where the young Highlander chanced to be. A mutual acquaintance introduced them. The match was set to the fuel. He received an invitation ot call at their hotel. They were seen strolling on the beach together. Day after day an irresistible magnetism drew him to her side. Nice whispered, smiled, and watched with the southern avidity for romance. Could it be the difficult one was caught at last? Caught she was and in the most hopeless fashion. Within ten days they were engaged. Then, as an afterthought the respective fathers were cabled to, her's in America, his where he chanced to be, in some distant part of the British possessions. The girl was wealthy; the young officer had only his profession, but circumstances were thistledown, to be blown out of the way of two such ardent lovers. All except one that loomed nearer and nearer. Convalescent was over, and the soldier was called to the front. No one saw them part, but one day she appeared on the street alone, and Nice was bereft of her Highlander.

But Fate went on modelling her little romance. Young Macdonald was found to be not quite strong enough for the trenches. He was sent to Rouen to do lighter temporary work. At once a message flashed down to Nice. "Can you come?" Could she come! She came so precipitately with her mother, that luggage had to be left behind to follow with the maid.

Bare Knees Did It.

After that only one thing remained to be done. They were married very quietly a few days ago at Rouen. And now where is Destiny leading them—to happiness after the war or to the grief of the woman who pays? But when a curious friend asked the girl how it was that after resisting so many, she succumbed so quickly in the end, she laughed and said, "Oh, it was those beautiful bare knees that did it." They were quite irresistible."

Just as I was writing about Sunday's Zeppelin raid, the alarm sounded again on the streets, the weird fire horn rising and falling mixed with the bugle call. That means the Zeppelins are coming back. One by one the lights have gone out in the houses round, the city is dark and quiet, not a motor is tooting, though it is barely midnight, and Paris is waiting for what night and the Zeppelins may bring her. It is raining slightly, not as favourable weather as on Sunday when the night was clear and magnificently starlit. Then it was a sleeping city that was roused up at half-past one in the morning. Some people took refuge in the cellars, others ran into the streets in spite of police warnings, or mounted the roof to be able to see. A friend who lives on the 4th floor, boasted of his front row in the gallery. But the majority of people remained quietly at their windows like ourselves. It was curious to hear the voices talking in the dark all round.

Could See the Bullets.

At a quarter to two the first Zeppelin appeared. Outside the city it was not illuminated, but over Paris it carried a light, probably to try and find its bearings. It looked exactly like a luminous cigar floating against the sky, and the throb throb of its engines seemed to fill the air. Whenever it appeared, powerful searchlights were thrown on it, and firing commenced from the Eiffel Tower and Trocadero; The bullets were distinctly visible, like little fireballs racing across the sky. One mistook them at first for shooting stars. They fell short, however, for the Zeppelin was moving at a great height. It zig-zagged very cleverly, to avoid the bullets and lights. When the latter caught it full, it was seen so distinctly, that even the yellowish colour was visible. Then it dodged, and the searchlight went careering around the sky looking for it. A little fleet of aeroplanes was also out. Each carried a light in front, and they moved with great swiftness, trying to drive the enemy back.

Altogether, what with the Zeppelins, for one followed the other at an interval of about 20 minutes, the aeroplanes, the boom, boom, or crackle of the guns, as a volley was fired, the moving searchlights, and fiery bullets, all in that setting of wonderful night, it made a sight never to be forgotten. And so little damage was done. The north-west section of the city was traversed, a few bombs thrown on unimportant streets, several people in the suburbs slightly wounded, and that was all. One could not help thinking that perhaps it was done to divert the mind of the German public from the fall of Przemysl.

A Bar To Progress

Truths That Genuine Christian Scientists as Well as All Sincere Followers of Christ Should Remember

For the guidance of members of Christian Science, their Manual teaches that—

"They should daily watch and pray to be delivered from all evil, from prophesying, judging, condemning, counselling, influencing or being influenced erroneously."

Unreasonable criticism and complaint darken one's dawning sense of spirituality and stunt one's own growth in Christian advancement. The children of Israel were brought through the water on dry ground, but up to that time, although Moses proved to the people that God was leading them, they were afraid to take the next step because they could not see how God could lead them over that expanse of water. And when Moses would have cried unto the Lord because of all the doubt and fear, God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto me? speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." To stand still with a sense of lack and limitation does not give one a sense of progress, but rather just the opposite sense, and the complaint will be voiced that he is not making a demonstration over the false claims arising from lack of understanding.

Miriam and Aaron criticised Moses, who had risen to a higher plane of thought than they themselves had gone, and they were punished for their sin and foolishness, but the whole congregation were at a standstill until this thought was healed, and no progress was made until the error was eliminated from the camp. This should teach us to avoid the mistake of criticizing and condemning others, who may possibly have risen to a higher plane of thought than that which we ourselves have attained. It is the complaining and limited thought which leads one to criticise and thus bring himself and others into darkness.

There is no error that can withstand "the universal solvent of Love" (Science and Health, p. 242), and there can be no truly Christian Science service which has not this Love as the dominant theme.

We read in Science and Health (p. 455) that "God selects for the highest service one who has grown into such a fitness for it as renders any abuse of the mission an impossibility. The All-wise does not bestow His highest trusts upon the unworthy. When he commissions a messenger, it is one who is spiritually near Himself." — Communicated.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 19.—Despite a late setback, caused by reports that negotiations between Italy and Austria had been broken off, the wheat market today finished 1⅝c to 2c above Saturday night. Fulfilment of predictions of a big falling off in the domestic supply had much to do with the strong upward movement of prices the greater part of the session. Corn closed ⅝c to ¾c net higher, oats ⅛c to ⅛c down and provisions up 7½c to 25c.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 19.—May wheat was sold this forenoon at $1.61⅝, which exceeds all previous records for 1914 crops. July wheat was bid at $1.61⅝, which is only ⅛c under the previous record of $1.62 for this month on Feb. 3. Later higher figures were touched for May. Trading in futures was light and chiefly in the speculative element. There was little or no cash demand for wheat on the local market, while for oats there was a fair enquiry, and a few cars changed hands. Flax was dull, practically nothing being offered on the cash market. No new business in export was reported.

Total inspections on Saturday were 297 cars, as against 391 cars last year, and in sight today were 345 cars.

Wheat futures closed 2⅜c to 3⅝c higher, cash 2¼c to 2⅜c higher for contract grades, oats ⅝c to ⅞c higher, and flax ⅝c to 1c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 19.—There was some demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat today and sales of a few odd loads were made for nearby shipment, but the prices bid for future shipment continue to be out of line. The tone of the local market for coarse grains is firm, but there is no improvement in the volume of business, the demand being still limited from both local and outside buyers. In flour the feeling is strong with a better business doing for export account, but the local trade is quiet. The trade in millfeed is rather slow.

Butter is fairly active and firm. Cheese is quiet. Demand for eggs good. Dressed hogs have advanced 25c per cwt.

MINNEAPOLIS GRAIN MARKET.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 19.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.64; No. 1 northern, $1.63½ to $1.63¼; No. 2 northern, $1.61 to $1.60½; May, $1.67¼.

Corn—No. 3 yellow, 72¾c to 73¼c.

Oats—No. 3 white, 54½c to 55c.

Flour—Fancy patents, $7.00; first clears, $6.50; second clears, $4.90.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, Minn., April 19.—Close—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.63⅛; No. 1 northern, $1.62⅛; May, $1.61⅛ bid; July, $1.69⅛; Sept., $1.25⅛.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, April 19.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 1910 cattle, 340 hogs, 34 sheep and lambs and 34 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy export steers, $6.50 to $6.75, and one load at $7.05; choice butchers' steers and heifers, $7.25 to $7.50; good steers and heifers, $6.90 to $7.15; medium steers and heifers, $6.60 to $6.90; common at $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; good cows at $6 to $6.25; medium cows at $5.50 to $5.75; common cows at $5 to $5.50; canners and cutters at $3.75 to $4.75; bulls at $5.50 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $6.25 to $6.65; feeders, 600 to 800 lbs., sold at $6 to $6.50; stockers, 500 to 600 lbs., at $5.50 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Choice fresh cows and forward springers sold at $50 to $91 each, and medium to good at $50 to $65; common at $40 to $50.

Veal Calves.

The market for veal calves was a little stronger. Choice calves, $9 to $10; good calves, $7 to $8; medium calves, $5 to $6; common calves at $4 to $5; bob calves, $3 to $3.50 each.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, light ewes, $7 to $7.50; heavy sheep, ewes, $6.50 to $6.50; rams, $4 to $7; spring lambs, $8 to $9; yearling lambs, 90 lbs., at $11; heavyweight yearlings, $9 to $10.

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $9 for the bulk of sales, but $9.25 was also paid in one or two instances.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 19.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, altho receipts were light, they were ample to fill all requirements. Demand from packers for supplies was fair, and sales of full loads of choice steers were made at $7.75, good at $7.25, while choice cows brought $6.25 per 100 pounds, but the demand from butchers for small lots was limited, as most of them now are buying dressed beef, owing to the falling off in the consumption.

The feature of the small-meat trade was the good demand for calves, of which supplies were ample, and sales were made at from $3.50 to $13 each, as to size and quality. The trade in sheep and lambs was very quiet, owing to the limited number available on the market, and prices ruled firm. Hogs were unchanged, but firm, with a good demand from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60, sows at $7.50 to $7.60, and stags at $4.75 to $5.50 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

CHILDREN HATE OIL, CALOMEL AND PILLS

"California Syrup of Figs" Best For Tender Stomach, Liver, Bowels.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful give to-day saves a sick child to-morrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

TREAT EVERY CHILD'S COLD EXTERNALLY RUB ON "NERVILINE"—A SAFE CURE

A Miracle of Healing Power in Every Bottle.

Little children can't be expected to romp, day in and day out, without sometime coming to grief. Some of their games and rough and tumble, cause undue fatigue, and not infrequently the kiddies are bruised, have strains, swellings and aches just like their elders.

When children come in tired and sore, see they are well rubbed with Nerviline. It does wonders in breaking up a cold—has an amazing effect on any sort of muscular pain.

The wise mother always keeps trusty old Nerviline on hand. It has a wonderful list of uses, and a bottle handy on the bedroom shelf often saves calling in the doctor.

Young and old alike can safely use Nerviline—there's no harm in it—just a heap of curative power when you rub it on.

When ever there is a pain or sickness, Nerviline should be close by. It is a true specific for rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica or neuralgia.

As for earache, toothache, sore back, sprains or strains, nothing else will cure so fast as good old Nerviline. In use about fifty years—sold by dealers everywhere. The large 50c. family size bottle is the most economical; trial size 25c., all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

TROUBLE IN COLLIERIES.

Welsh Miners Decide To Give Notice Of a Strike.

LONDON, April 20.—A critical situation has arisen among the coal miners. Representatives of the Welsh miners have unanimously decided in favor of tendering a fortnight's notice of a proposed strike to the mine-owners in order to enforce their demands for a 2c per cent. increase in wages. The Miners' Federation of Great Britain will meet to-morrow to decide what action they will take to compel the mine-owners to accede to their demand for a similar increase.

That the result of the trouble will be anything like a national strike of the miners is considered improbable, but it may necessitate Government intervention in a very drastic manner.

Transports Sunk Says Letter.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., April 20.—Unpublished information said to have been received from a British naval officer at home at Dundee, Scotland, on leave is contained in a letter written to a woman residing in Russell avenue, St. Catharines, by her daughter, who states that the officer informed her that the German cruiser which was sunk by Admiral Sir David Beatty's squadron in the North Sea were escorting two transports which had 5,000 German troops aboard. The letter states on the authority of the officer that the two transports were also sunk and all on board perished.

Cotton Being Barred.

LONDON, April 20.—That cotton is being kept out of Germany and Austria just as effectively as if it were declared absolute contraband, is the tenor of a reply addressed by Attorney-General Simon to a conference of chemists and engineers who raised the question whether the action taken by the Government was sufficient to make it certain that no cotton reaches those countries.

GERMANS FAIL TO RE-TAKE THE TRENCHES THEY LOST

Desperate Efforts to Capture Positions Taken by the Allies Have Failed and the Enemy Have Been Repulsed With Heavy Losses.

BELGIAN AVIATORS DO GOOD WORK

Special Cable to The Examiner:

PARIS, April 21.—French official communique.—The fighting to-day is chiefly confined to the Forest of Montmarc, where the Germans have been making desperate efforts to take the trenches recently captured. Two counter attacks by the Germans against these positions were repulsed to-day with heavy losses.

The Belgian aviators have successfully bombarded the German positions at Bruges Arsenal, and the Lissevegh aviation grounds..

GERMANS BEATEN IN CAMEROONS

PARIS, April 21.—Further successes for the French arms in the Cameroons, West Central Africa, were announced in the official communique issued by the Minister for the Colonies this afternoon. It says: "After severe fighting for a month in the Cameroons the Germans have been compelled to retreat to the high plateaus in the centre of the colony. The capital has been moved to Jaunden."

NO INFORMATION GIVEN

LONDON, April 21.—An attempt was made in the House of Commons this afternoon to satisfy the keen public interest regarding the official figures of Great Britain's land forces, and the result of the recruiting, but it met with a definite refusal from the war office. Harold J. Tennant, the Parliamentary Under Secretary for War, stated that the government had no intention of disclosing the strength of the British army in the field or in training, as it considered that such disclosures would be detrimental to the public interest.

THE BERLIN STATEMENT

BERLIN, via wireless, April 21.—In retaliation for the dropping of bombs on Insterberg, and Gumbinnen, by the Russian airmen, the German aerial corps has dropped 150 bombs on the railway junction at Bialistok, causing material damage.

It is charged that the French have again mounted cannon near the Cathedral of Rheims. Because of this the Germans have again been compelled to bombard Rheims, although no shots have been directed at the Cathedral.

French attacks at Flirey, Metzerat and Sondernachen have been repulsed with heavy losses. Airmen yesterday bombarded Loerrach, injuring several civilians, damaging a Swiss owned factory and two houses.

ATTACKS ARE REPULSED

PETROGRAD, April 21.—The Russian war office to-day officially announced that all the attacks of the Germans and Austrian on the eastern front had been repulsed with terrific losses to the enemy. German aeroplanes bombarded Binilystok, in Russia, killing civilians, and Russian aircraft destroyed a railway station at Soldau, Germany.

ROME, April 21.—The Cabinet will meet to-morrow, and at that time it is said some definite action will be taken regarding the war. Meanwhile all steamers are held at their docks, except where special permission to sail is granted by the Minister of Marine.

This was the 2668th anniversary of the founding of Rome, and was made the occasion for the spreading of war propaganda, various meetings of patriotic organizations being held throughout the city.

NEGOTIATIONS AT A STANDSTILL

ROME, April 21.—Senator Carafa declared to-day that the negotiations between Italy and Austria were at a complete standstill, and that he regared a complete rupture between the two countries as imminent. Prince Von Buelow, it is stated, is all ready to leave Italy.

LOCAL MAN IS BEREAVED

There died at the Guelph General Hospital, April 9th, Alicamood Hutchinson, wife of David Evans, aged 41 years, 1 month and three weeks. The deceased leaves to mourn her loss a sorrowing husband and family of four small children; also her father and mother and three brothers, Thomas, of Cleveland; Walter, of Peterborough; William, of Toronto, and four sisters, Mrs. Pretsell, and Mrs. Dodds, of Guelph; Mrs. Buchener and Miss Margaret, of Toronto.

A Bad Fire At Swan Lake

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., April 21.—The town of Swan Lake, Southern Manitoba, was visited by a bad fire early this morning, which did seventy thousand dollars' damage before it was controlled, destroying a newspaper plant, government elevator, post office and several stores.

THREE CANUCK OFFICERS HAVE BEEN WOUNDED

No Casualty Lists of Non-Commissioned Officers or Men in Connection With Fighting South of Ypres has Been Received

TWO WESTERN OFFICERS

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21.—At least three commissioned officers belonging to different Canadian battalions have suffered in recent heavy fighting south of Ypres, which figures in the recent official despatches.

They are: Lieut. J. M. Gibson, 15th Battalion, son of Sir John Gibson; Liept. H. G. Anderson, of the 7th B.C. Battalion, and Lieut. A. T. Thomson, of the 10th Winnipeg Battalian. All of these are reported wounded. No casualty lists of non-commissioned officers or men have yet been received of this action.

Prospects For June Election Grow Stronger

Government Bureau Working Night and Day on the Voters' Lists.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21. — The Printing Bureau is working day and night upon the voters' list.

The prospect for a June election is growing stronger every day. The Government is meeting to-day and announcement of dissolution is expected by many.

A flood of campaign literature has been started out from the Government Bureau.

Only a miracle or the exercise of supreme authority will prevent a June election.

Go On The Pension List

Soldiers Back From the Front Are to be Taken Care of.

Special to the Examiner.

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21. — The Department of Militia has received offers of splendid accommodation at summer resorts for Canadian convalescent soldiers whose injuries preclude the possibility of further service at the front. The first batch reached Canada on the Missanabie some days ago. All convalescent soldiers whose wounds preclude them from further active service will at once go on the pension list.

Receptacle For Storing Garbage

Has Been Erected on Water Street

A more improved means of storing garbage at the rear of the restaurants that blot out the landscape on the west side of the market, has been devised. It consists of a large rain-proof and will be located at the rear of the New York cafe. This matter was brought up at a recent meeting of the Property Committee. An improvement has also been effected in the lane at the rear of Middleton and Blewett's livery, on Water street.

A new fuse plug for electric circuits, contains nine fuses and is so arranged that when one blows out another can be turned into its place.

TWO PETERBORO' BOYS ON THE FIRING LINE

With the 57th detachment in the 2nd Battalion. Pte. Levoir has just rejoined his regiment at the front after having been held at Salisbury with a broken ankle for some months.

BROWNTON MAN GOES UP FOR TRIAL AT JUNE SESSIONS

Alexander Lillico Committed by Magistrate Langley This Morning on a Charge of Entering Home of Frederick Collett With the Intention of Committing an Assault

Alexander Lillico, who was up for preliminary hearing before Magistrate Langley, this morning, on a charge of having entered the residence of Mr. Frederick Collett of Brown Street, with intent to commit an assault, was committed for trial at the sessions. Bail is being arranged.

The Evidence.

Miss Florrie Collett, at whose instigation the information was laid, went into the witness box at 10 a.m. to tell her story. She resided with her husband and two children, on Brown Street, for the past twelve months.

The witness only knew the prisoner about six weeks. He boarded, up to the time he was arrested, across the street from her home. Her husband and prisoner both worked in the Canadian General Electric Company's works.

On Thursday last, the day the prisoner is alleged to have entered her house, her husband was working at night, leaving in the evening and returning about 6 a.m. the following day.

On the evening before the offence is alleged to have been committed the outside doors of the house were locked. The only other door locked was the bedroom door where she slept with her two children, the oldest of which was six years of age. The door was also barricaded with a chair, which was her usual custom when her husband was absent. There were no fastenings on the windows, but they were closed.

Early Visitor.

About 3.30 a.m., Thursday, she heard a noise outside, downstairs. Someone opened the front door, shut it and locked it again. She heard the key being turned both outside and inside. The party proceeded upstairs and looked in the two empty rooms, and banged on her bedroom door. She knew the footsteps were not those of Mr. Collett, and she screamed out, "Who is it?" The only answer was "Me." She asked what do you want here at this time of the morning?" The answer was 'Open the door, I want to speak to you." She ordered him out of the house and screamed for a neighbour, Mr. Thomas, saying she would have the neighbour telephone for the police. The intruder then went downstairs and outside.

Saw Prisoner Outside.

She was not on familiar terms with the prisoner, though she knew him to speak to him, as he had been to her house one Sunday evening, to visit Mr. Collett. She was able to recognize Lillico by his voice, on Thursday morning. She also saw him on the verandah after he went outside and knew him.

To Mr. Widdifield, in cross examination, she said there had not been any strong drink in her house since Christmas. The prisoner never was offered any drink in her house.

Witness did not see the prisoner's face. She saw him leaving her gate by the light and crossing the street, and could recognize him without seeing his face.

Husband of Complainant.

Frederick Collett, husband of the complainant, was the next witness for the prosecution. He knew Lillico only by working in the same department with him at the Canadian General works about three months. They often went to work together.

He remembered last Thursday when he left the works at about 5.05 a.m. He saw the prisoner Wednesday night, when he went to work. Prisoner knew he was working nights.

Upon his return home on Thursday morning he went in the front door, and did not see anything unusual about the house until he went into the kitchen where a door was open, leading to the verandah and garden. He proceeded upstairs and called his wife. The door of her room was locked and barricaded and when he got into the room his wife was dressed and the children awake and all very much agitated.

Upon returning downstairs he found the pantry window open and milk bottles, grease tin, jam tin, etc., which usually reposed on the window sill, out in the yard.

Found Him on Verandah.

Lillico had only been in his house once to his knowledge, and that was on the Sunday evening spoken of by the previous witness. One Saturday night when he came home at 11.15 o'clock from work, having booked off sick, when they were short of metal, he found the prisoner on the verandah of his home. The prisoner said he had come to see him. Prisoner was the worse of drink and offered him a drink and, later, a cigar. He refused, telling him that all he wanted was that the prisoner should keep away from there. When he went upstairs on this occasion he found his wife crying and frightened.

Cross Examined.

On Thursday morning he went to Lillico's boarding house to look for him and was informed he was in bed drunk. If he had found him that mornig Lillico would not have been able to come to court to-day. He was pretty angry. He was suspicious of Lillico after he had found him on the verandah once before. He was suspects that time that Lillico had not been there with any good intentions.

Defence Witness.

The case for the prosecution closed with these two witnesses and the prisoner, not having any statement to make, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Collet was called by Counsel for the defence.

The child was too young to be sworn, but the Magistrate decided to hear his statement. The boy knew the prisoner. He was over there once when Mrs. Collett was away. He had never seen him there any other time.

On the evidence Lillico was committd for trial at the sessions.

PETERBORO' TO FURNISH BASE HOSPITAL UNIT

Local Medical Society Arranging Details of Plan by Which a Complete Complement of Physicians, Nurses, Orderlies, etc. Will Go to the Front From This City.

A SPLENDID PROPOSAL

The physicians of Peterborough are this afternoon deciding the details of a magnificent contribution [illegible] pose to offer to the Government in the shape of a complete base hospital unit for service wherever it is decided it is most needed.

It is proposed to furnish an entire base hospital unit of 200 beds, the entire complement of officers, nurses, orderlies and all other required members to be composed of Peterborough people. This is a splendid undertaking and on top of Peterborough's fine showing in furnishing for the firing line, a striking indication of the city's anxiety to do everything possible for the Empire.

That there will be no difficulty in obtaining the necessary staff in Peterborough is certain. Already more than enough local physicians for the unit have offered their services. It is necessary that the hospital be officered at least as far as the senior officers are concerned, by physicians who are members of the Army Medical Corps, and in this respect Peterborough doctors are well qualified. Drs. Cameron, Eastwood, McPherson, Frederick, Sutton and Kelly being members of the Army Medical Corps. Trained nurses will not be lacking, and as for the other necessary members of the strength of the hospital, the splendid response to all calls for men from Peterborough, leaves no uncertainty as to the result, when the enrollment for the unit commences. Altogether some seventy-five or eighty Peterborough people will be required for the hospital which will be known as the Peterborough Base Hospital.

The Medical Society went into the details of the scheme at meetings held on Monday and Tuesday afternoon and another session is being held this afternoon, at which the question of financing the proposition will be thoroughly gone into. In regard to equipment, this matter would be undertaken by the Government, who would also pay the wages of all members of the personal but for expenses in connection with the unit it is estimated that about $300 a month would be required.

BIG TURNOUT OF 57TH REGIMENT AT THE ARMOURIES

Over Three Hundred Men Drilled Last Night—Rifles Will be Available at Next Parade—21st's Long Hike

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Over three hundred men were on hand for the weekly drill at the 57th Regiment, last night, the best showing yet and the Armouries presented a busy scene as the different companies carried out their dril. In addition the recruits for the fourth contingent were drilled by Sergt. Major Sucosse and there was scarcely floor space enough for the different companies carried out their drill. In addition the recruits for the fourth contingent were drilled by Sergt. Major Sucosse and there was scarcely floor space enough for the different companies carried out their drill. In addening but Lt. Col. Walker announced that at the next drill night one-half of the battalion will be furnished with rifles for drill purposes, a fresh supply having been received. On Friday night there will be a voluntary church parade to the St. George's Day service at St. John's Church.

Most of the Mounted Rifles, who have been home on leave, will return to Ottawa to-night.

Pte. Mowry and Muir of the 21st Battalion are home from Kingston for a few days.

Kingston Standard: Arrangements are being made to take the 21st Battalion to Brockville. The battalion will probbaly go down on Thursday, and will go by boat. They will march back to the city with a stop over at Gananoque. The Brockville City Council had the matter of entertainment under consideration on Monday evening, and they decided to take care of the battalion if it visits their city. It is said here that $1,000 was voted by the Brockville Council for this purpose and that they are prepared to do even better if they can get a visit from Kingston's crack battalion. If the battalion goes on Thursday it will probably be Monday before it returns to the city.

Kingston Standard: Lieut. Ross of No. 3 Company, A.S.C., will leave with the men of the remount depot to-morrow and will take them to St. John. The corps will complete its strength at St. John.

Belleville Intelligencer: A movement is on foot to provide a regimental fund for the 39th Battalion of a sum of not less than $10,000, to cover the cost of purchase of field kitchens, musical instruments and other necessary articles of equipment, not provided by the Government. It has been decided to appeal to the different cities, county townships and other municipal bodies throughout Eastern Ontario, as well as to the generosity of private citizens and societies. The Battalion is now at full strength, number over 1,000 men of all ranks, and has representatives from practically every city, village and municipany in its ranks.

The improvement in the march discipline of the 39th is very marked, the men exhibiting a thorough soldierly spirit as they march through the streets on their way to the drill ground. The officers claim that within the next few weeks the Battalion will be second to none in the point of efficiency.

Lt.-Col. Smart was the recipient of warm congratulations on his discharge from the hospital, where he has been for the last week, and the Battalion hope soon to see him on parade again.

The musical instruments for the Band have now arrived, and soon Belleville will hear the enlivening music of a full military brass band. Practice has already commenced, and in a few days the band will be ready for duty.

A circular letter is being issued by Major G. H. Gillespie, O. and I. Cadet Corps for this division, to the effect that owing to the war and the resulting heavy expenses the vote of money for cadet services for this year and next year would be cut one quarter of the amount that has previously been voted. Therefore the uniform grant of $1.00 for each cadet has been cancelled. No funds have been voted for cadet camps nor for cadet instructors' courses. No money will be paid either to school teachers taking the thirty hours physical training course. Sufficient funds have been provided for paying for the instructional allowance to cadet corps of $1.00 for each cadet passing a satisfactory inspection.

The many friends of Sergt. D. J. Moore of the 21st Battalion, Kingston, will regret to learn he is confined to Nicholls Hospital with an attack of pleurisy.

School Board Investigation

Is Still in the Embryo State—Date Has Not Been Set

No date has been set as yet for the commencement of the investigation concerning two members of the Board of Education. In the meantime public interest is waning and unless something is done to revive it, there will be a small house when the big show comes off. The parties concerned in the issue have agreed to accept the decision of the County Judge as final, even if it results in disqualification. Mr. G. N. Gordon questions the right of Mr. W. H. Hill to sit on the School Board and at the same time represent a company that is in the market for insurance offered by the Board. On the other hand, Mr. Hill questions the right of Mr. Gordon to occupy a position on the Board while employed as solicitor for the city.

A NEW SCREW APPLIED.

The blessings of Conservative Government do not brighten as they continue to shower upon us. One of these blessings is direct municipal taxation, which bleeds Peterborough to the amount of $10,000, which would have paid five times over for keeping down the dust, that is throttling us every hour in the day. Another new blessing is the tax on theatres devised by Provincial-Treasurer McGarry. The Dominion Government taxes theatre tickets, and now the Provincial Government taxes the privilege of taxing theatre tickets. Mr. McGarry estimates that this tax will [illegible] bring in $10,000 or $15,000 revenue. The blessing involved in these new forms of taxation are luxuries — superfilities. They are unnecessary; for the new taxes are a tyrannical compensation for waste of the public money by extravagant administration. The new theatre tax, if Hon. Mr. McGarry's larger estimate of the revenue to be received — $15,000 — is realized, won't half pay the interest at 3 per cent. on the cost of the costly monument of Government folly the new million dollar, brickwords-backyard residence for the lieutenant-governer. That and other forms of extravagance, have so wasted the substance of the province that extraordinary means of extorting money have to be adopted. One can't imagine a new form of taxation the Provincial Government can hit upon unless it revives the window tax which was imposed in the dark ages and abandoned when the light of civilization brightened.

THE BRITISH SPIRIT.

"Be British" is an injunction that we can easily live up to and be proud of—British means so much. It covers the highest form and involves the highest spirit of human liberty, and therefore of human good; it represents the highest form and spirit of popular government in accord with popular will. It has substituted and substitutes freedom for force; and national cooperation for national ends is voluntary and effective. While other nations depend upon force—upon conscription—to make armies, the armies of the Empire are freewill offerings. Great Britain went into a tremendous war unprepared; not for advantage, but to vindicate the principle of freedom upon which her greatness is founded. The quarrel was not her own, or of her seeking, but in her magnanimity she made it her own. She called upon her people to respond to the call that came to every lover of British freedom and fair play, and they nobly responded. Kitchener is delighted at the voluntary response to recruiting appeals, and says that the Government does not believe that the war could be more successfully prosecuted by means of conscription —fores. It is the same all over the Empire; the British spirit prevails. In Canada we have had satisfactory voluntary recruiting equal to the demand and capacity for equipment. In all the other self-governing Dominions it is the same. The Empire is one in spirit, and spirit means strength—force. It is a great thing to be British; it means so much, and does so much.

THE CONCEALED FACTS.

The election of 1911 was conducted in the interest of the "big interests" and the manufacturers, with the result that they were given a seat on the crupper of the Government—a controlling influence in the Government. It is a question whether the manufacturers have shown a due sense of gratitude for the favour thus given them. Have they made a fair return to the country for the confidence unthinkingly placed in them and the reckless favour shown them? Many manufacturers have done so. It is to the credit of the manufacturers of materials, for, and the makers of, army clothing that they have made good clothing, and put good cloth together well. There has been no complaint of the body clothing of our soldiers. Tunics of habit that have had six-months' wear are, many of them, in wearable condition yet. But in the case of boots, there has not been the same care in the matter of material and workmanship. Some of the manufacturers have forgotten what they owe to the people for the privilege of making money at the expense of the people, the consumer. This may apply, and does apply, to individual manufacturers; but it appears—if we could only get the Government to disgorge the truth, we should know certainly—that the Manufacturers' Association wanted to protect the good name of the craft, and the interests of the country, in the matter of furnishing war supplies.

It is stated that when orders for supplies began to be placed, with the favourites of the Government, the members of the "patronage lists," the Manufacturers' Association, protested against the methods employed by the Government, which have resulted in so much spoliation and waste. We know that correspondence on the subject passed between the Manufacturers' Association and the Government, with facts, names, dates, amounts and other details given. Why did not Sir Robert Borden respond to the demand to place this correspondence before Parliament, which, as the trustees of the public, had a right to the information it contained? The correspondence was not confidential because, weeks ago the executive of the Manufacturers' Association gave the Government permission to publish it if it wished. Why was it not given to Parliament, and through Parliament to the public? Why was it suppressed? If it were favourable to the Government one would have thought that the Government, charged according to appearances, with responsibility for the disgraceful scandals disclosed by the investigation of the Public Accounts Committee, would have been glad to reveal evidence that would remove or lighten the shadow under which it rested. That the correspondence was suppressed, the facts in connection with it hidden, warrants the inference that the Manufacturers' Association warned the Government that the course it was pursuing in the employment of the methods it was employing, were not in the interests of the work, or of the country, or of the war, or of the Empire; and were bound to bring the disastrous scandals that have resulted. If the Government got such warning, and ignored such warning, and gave partizanship, through the patronage list, a free hand, one can understand the desire and decision to keep the incriminating correspondence from the public. The Government seems to prefer to remain under a grave suspicion rather than disclose the facts. When there is concealment of facts the public have a right to know; there must be wrong-doing or mistakes to cover up.

300 Yards of Gravel And Broken Stone On Chemong Road

BRIDGENORTH, April 20.—When the ice went out of Chemong Lake on April 14 it was seven days earlier than in 1914.

The ice damaged the bridge to some extent, but Caretaker James O'Leary had it reopened for traffic in four days. He has been sent up to the Pidgeon Lake bridge to repair it, as it is damaged to some extent.

Adam McWilliams, the commissioner on the Communication Road, has put out about 300 yards of gravel, and has a number of men breaking stones. In a few weeks the road should be in first-class shape for travel.

Chemong Park is beginning to look fine. The grass is green and quite a number of people drive out around to see how the cottages are looking. The boats have not been damaged by the ice.

MR. VENIZELOS TO LEAVE GREECE FOREVER, HE HAS ASSERTED

PARIS, April 20.—The Athens correspondent of the Petit Journal states that Mr. Venizelos, recently Premier of Greece, told him that he would remain on the Island of Samos for a fortnight, after which he would leave for America. Mr. Venizelos said that he would not return to Greece even if his party were successful in the coming election, as he considered it certain to be.

Mr. Venizelos, continues the correspondent, said that he considered as an insult the recent denial by the King of Greece of certain statements which Mr. Venizelos had made, and that he would remain unreconciled until he received satisfaction.

THOSE TWINS LEFT UPON THE NATIONAL DOORSTEP

Having failed to convince anybody that the war taxation which they have imposed on the country is the result of war, the Borden Government are now blaming the Liberals for the financial difficulties into which they have plunged the country. They say that the Liberals left twins on the doorstep of the Conservatives—the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern—and that these twins are the cause of the Borden Government enormously increasing the annual spending for purposes other than war at a time when the annual income was falling.

This claim is utterly false. The National Transcontinental Railway was almost completed when the Liberals left office, and a great part of its cost had already been paid out of annual surpluses of the Laurier-Fielding times. Since the present Government have come into office they have done their best to represent the railway as a crushing burden on the country, and as a project that will always be a burden. The chief commissioner which they themselves appointed to continue the construction of the road after the Liberal Government were defeated, gives them the lie on this point, for he declares that "The National Transcontinental Railway is an asset, not a burden, to the people of Canada."

As to the Canadian Northern, it is true that the Laurier Government did assist it to build in the fertile prairie sections, to help in the settlement of that country. And wonderfully successful was this policy. Later on the Laurier Government encouraged the company to connect the western and eastern ends of the system, in return requiring the company to submit to the supervision of the Railway Commission of Canada. What the Liberal Government did not do was to encourage the company to embark on the vastly expensive scheme of building through the Rocky Mountains to the coast. It was Sir Richard McBride and the Conservative Government of British Columbia who fathered this costly adventure—an adventure with which began the difficulties which later brought the company to Parliament seeking huge measures of financial relief for their whole system.

Not very long before the elections of 1911 the Canadian Northern made a demand on the Laurier Government for the usual grants in aid, but the Hon. George P. Graham absolutely declined to advance anything as long as the contract with the McBride Government, under which the company was obligated to resist control by the Dominion Railway Commission in British Columbia, was allowed to stand. A result of this was that the whole influence of the powerful Canadian Northern group was thrown against the Liberals in the 1911 elections. When the Borden Government came into power, the Canadian Northern easily got what the Laurier Government refused to give. And that was not all. This preliminary subsidy was but the prelude to other and vaster demands—demands which the obedient Cabinet, which the Company had helped to create obeyed and forced Parliament to ratify.

And they blame the Liberals! The Liberals in reality left twin blessings on the doorstep for the Conservatives, but the Conservatives are doing their best to spoil the character of both. The Canadian Northern they are encouraging in costly adventures, and the National Transcontinental they are doing their best to make useless east of Cochrane, at which point the Grand Trunk is able to tap it, via the T. & N. O. line, over which it has running rights to the Grand Trunk System proper at North Bay. Surely, it is time that these degrading political tactics gave way to real statesmanship.—Montreal Herald Telegraph.

Boys at Front Want Sox, Gum and Chocolates

The Calgary News Telegram publishes a letter from a Canadian soldier on the firing line:

"We have already been in the trenches which form the firing line, and expect to enter them again shortly. Everything is dear here, and there are a lot of articles we cannot buy at all. I would greatly appreciate some milk chocolates and some Spearmint gum. It would surely go fine. I would also like some of those extra heavy sox. We have some enjoyable times once in a while. There is a lot of [illegible] warfare."

Soldiers ask for chewing gum because it quenches thirst, helps to steady the nerves.

New Public School Needed

Present Accommodation at Hastings is Overtaxed—News From the Village

HASTINGS, April 20.—So large has become the attendance at the Public School that it is felt it may be necessary to build a larger building. A meeting was held here on Thursday last to strive to enlarge the school territory, but as the ratepayers out of the section were not in favour of this, nothing could be done. The meeting was attended by Squire Brackenridge, of Westwood; Inspector Lees, of Peterborough; Mr. Weatherson, of Percy, and other interested parties.

A special meeting of the Ladies' Aid in connection with the Methodist Church was held on Tuesday last, to consult with the Trustee Board as to what steps should be undertaken to clean and decorate the church walls. Mr. J. Prest's estimates and plans were considered, and it is expected will shortly be adopted. The board appointed one of their number to look after the lawn and whatever was necessary in connection therewith.

The Epworth League is making preparations for a "rubber social," to be held next week. A good programme is in progress, while ice cream and home-made candy will be on sale.

A new butcher shop has been opened up on Front Street, next to Mr. F. Runnel's harness shop. Mr. Wm. Scriver is the proprietor, and is prepared to serve the public along this line.

Mr. Hall, horse buyer, of Peterborough, has been making a tour of this district in search of some suitable animals to purchase.

"Baker Bros." have purchased a new auto for egg-buying, etc.

Mr. Stewart Wright, of Burford, spent a few days with his aunt, Mrs. N. Beavis.

Messrs. Wm. Warner and Wm. Baker were in Cobourg for a few days last week, attending as jurors at the Court sittings.

Mr. B. Squire, of Norwood, was in town on Monday.

We are sorry to learn that Mr. Ed. Lynch is confined to his bed, suffering from a very bad attack of pneumonia. His many friends are hoping that he will soon be around once more.

Miss B. Moore, of Warkworth, has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Wm. Baker.

Miss Edna Tate took a trip to Campbellford during the week.

We noticed Mr. John Carter, of Norwood, in town on Tuesday.

Mr. W. McKay, of Havelock, gave us a call on Thursday.

Mrs. J. Carter and family, of Havelock, were in town on Saturday, visiting his mother.

Miss Honey, of Percy, has been visiting her sister, Miss Phyllis Honey.

Miss Beryl Montgomery, of Roseneath, has been holidaying at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. Baker.

Seeding operations have begun in real earnest, and the farmers are smiling when they view the beautiful showing of the fall grains.

Miss M. Hore, of Percy, spent the week-end with friends in Asphodel.

Mr. Temple, of Campbellford, was in Hastings on Tuesday of last week.

Everybody is house-cleaning and tired out.

The water in the river, which was much below normal, has started to rise, but no floods are anticipated.

Farmers are daily to be seen around the G. T. R. Station, loading machinery for the farm work.

Sewerage Facilities For Suburban and Extra-Urban Districts

Below is an illustrated description of a sewage disposal plant adapted to suburban and extra-urban, or country, districts, not served by sewers. This permits householders to have the comforts and conveniences and the sanitary advantages of the effective disposal of house sewage, with, perhaps, less expense, counting interest on the investment, than would be represented by a thirty year annual payment of taxation on a frontage line of sewers. The article is taken from "Conservation," issued by the commission of that name:

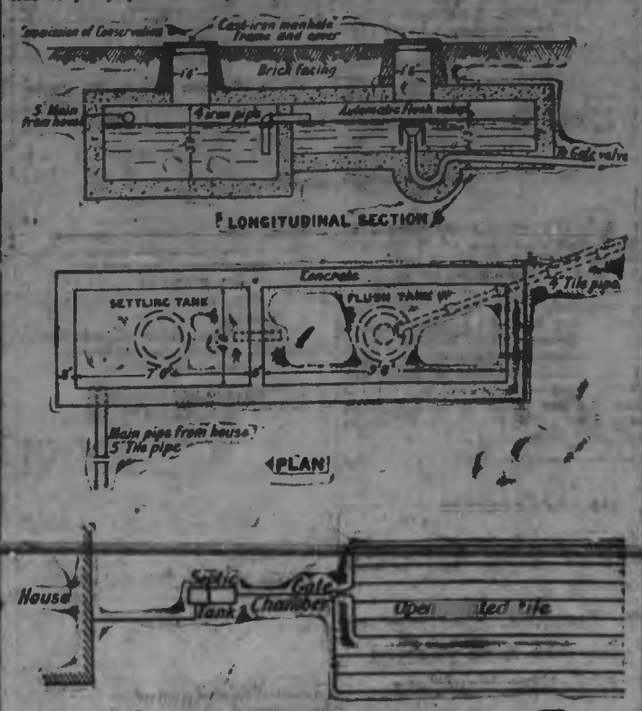
In small towns and on the farm, the common system of sewage disposal is that of privy pits or cesspools. This method fouls the ground and air, holds the waste in a state of putrefaction which gives off foul gases, and the liquid leachings are liable to injure the quality of wells and springs.

During recent years, many investigations of sanitary methods for the disposal of sewage of isolated houses have been made. The principle upon which the successful treatment of sewage depends is briefly as follows: When the air contained in the soil is brought into contact with dead organic matter in a finely divided state, a complete transformation takes place by the natural processes of oxidation and nitrification. As air is necessary for this purpose, it is essential that the waste be deposited on or near the surface. If the ground is saturated for a long time, purification of the liquid ceases; consequently the principle of intermittent operation of the disposal plant is necessary. The process of applying this principle involves the collection of the material away from the house, the settling out of as much of the solids as possible aided by anaerobic action, and the intermittent application of the effluent to the natural soil by surface or sub-surface irrigation, or to a specially prepared soil, as a filter bed.

A water supply is necessary for the collection of the material and this can be obtained and piped into the house by means of a hydraulic ram operated by a small stream of potable water or by means of a deep well fitted with windmill or pump force.

It will usually be necessary to dispose of the effluent from the settling chamber or septic tank by means of sub-surface drainage.

Illustration No. 1 shows a good type of tank for handling the sewage for a family of five and having a capacity of 350 gallons per day.



Subsurface irrigation for level ground.

Design for Concrete Septic Tank.

All sewage coming from the house passes into the settling chamber, where the solid matter to a greater or less extent is deposited. Owing to the character of the sewage, the decomposition of the solids is so active as to prevent any serious accumulation in the bottom of the settling chamber. It is necessary to inspect the chamber from time to time, and, if undissolved solids accumulate, to have them removed, probably about once a year. This accumulation should then be carried to the field and spaded into the soil at once.

The cost of a tank built of concrete, such as the one shown, will depend on cost of cement, wood for forms, etc., but the cost of all the material, including siphon and cast-iron manhole covers will be, approximately, $60.00.

To secure subsurface disposal, 3-inch agricultural drain-tile are laid with open joints, the bottom of the tile coming within 12 inches of the surface of the ground. These drains should be laid with a slight fall, say two inches per 100 feet. The ground should be naturally or artificially so well drained that water will descend through it readily.

In a country with a severe a climate as parts of Canada, where frost will affect the ground to a depth of four or five feet, it would be necessary to cover the surface of the ground above the tile with straw, leaves, or other kinds of mulch in order to prevent the frost affecting it. The superficial area of the disposal plant outlined above would not be greater than 40 feet by 100 feet.

Illustration No. 2 shows a subsurface system adapted to level ground. The tile lines are divided into three series leading from the gate chamber, so that the ground utilized by two lines is given a complete rest while the other is in use. The length of tile required will depend upon the porosity of the soil. For a porous soil, one foot of tile for each gallon of sewage should dispose of the liquid; for clay there should be at least three feet of tile per gallon.—W. J. D.

Young Wife of Jesse James, Jr. Seeks Divorce

LOS ANGELES, April 19. — The shade of Jesse James was projected into the Divorce Court through the appearance of a pretty young woman who claimed to be the daughter-in-law of the notorious outlaw, and who sought a decree of divorce from Jesse James, Jr. The shade vanished almost as quickly as it came, for Judge Monroe told the young wife that while he was sorry for her, law is law, and she will have to get witnesses to corroborate her charges of desertion.

Mrs. James must either find some one who knows that Jesse James, Jr., deserted her or wait seven years to see if he turns up. If he does not then the law says the knot can be severed.

The wife does not know whether her husband is alive or dead. The last word she had from him was in an endearing letter from Wichita Falls, Texas. It was dated April 8, 1913, and he mentioned to her the train on which he would arrive in Los Angeles. She waited hours at the station here, but he did not come, and now he has been swallowed in as mysterious a trail as ever hid the tracks of his father.

Elsie Lindley was a seventeen-year-old, unsophisticated girl when she met a handsome, dashing man of thirty-four. That was in 1910. An ardent courtship followed. The man said he was a bookkeeper, and one evening she said he told her he was the son of a famous outlaw.

Each evening after that he used to entertain her with stories of the life of his father up to the time James senior was shot in the back by his supposed friend. It was the stories of adventure, she claims, that won his hand. They were married and started forth on a honeymoon unique and romantic.

Fitting out a camping waggon, the couple set out across the continent for Philadelphia. They arrived there months later and spent some time with friends. Coming back to Los Angeles they stopped at St. Louis, where a little girl was born.

Then the husband, the wife asserts, gave her money to return to Los Angeles and promised to follow immediately. That was the last she saw of him, though later she received several letters from him.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—As I have been out of Peterborough and am not home yet, perhaps Speaker will pardon my tardy appearance on the scene. Apparently the trouble with the Russell-Johnston affair is that Mr. Bebee, "Eye-Witness" and others have a different thought from L. S. Ward concerning the word "quote." When one quotes another, though he may give no words except the ones found in the paragraphs quoted from, yet he may not give a correct quotation. When one is quoting, one has no right to change punctuation marks, leave out or add words, without giving marks to show there has been an ommission, or lump two paragraphs together and give them as one. All this Mr. Johnston has done in the so-called quotation given by him in your March 15th issue. The onus of proving that he has made a correct quotation rests with himself and is easily done. Let him bring to you, sir, the Watch Tower containing the article in question and let him make with you the arrangements you think best for the publication of the two paragraphs that he has given a garbled quotation of. If he does not do this the inference is plain. As for myself, I have carefully compared his quotation with the original, and I find that not only has he mis-quoted, but he has so worded his mis-quotation as to make the Pastor appear to say the very reverse of what he does say.

In Mr. Johnston's so-called quotation he inserts the word "itself" after the first use of the word "Bible," and in that same sentence he omits the words, "with Bible proof-texts given" after the words "topically arranged." After the second use of the word "itself" he places a period, while in the original I find a comma and five lines of reading matter that are very important in giving a correct understanding of Pastor Russell's thought. In the original the word "Furthermore" begins a paragraph and this second paragraph Mr. Johnston murders in a similar manner. To get Pastor Russell's own exact attitude in this article, it is read the more one is convinced that Pastor Russell's own attitude is the very reverse of that charged by Mr. Johnston. The Pastor reiterates his attitude again and again in such sentences as, "The six volumes of Scripture Studies are not intended to supplant the Bible." "If these books are to be of any value to us it must be because we see in them loyalty to the Word of God, and as far as our judgment goes, see them to be in full harmony with the word, and not antagonistic to it." "This is not, therefore, putting the Scripture Studies as a substitute for the Bible, because so far as substituting for the Bible, the Studies, on the contrary, continually refer to the Bible."

I am no follower of Pastor Russell but I have studied my Bible with the aid of his Scripture Studies, and I feel that I would be cowardly indeed if I failed to give my testimony that I have never found anything to equal these studies in explaining the Scriptures and in showing me how to make use of Concordances, etc., to get a correct knowledge. To any one desiring to get thoroughly acquainted with their Bible I can heartily recommend the Scripture Studies, and no one need fear that they will ever find anything that needs to be hidden from the public gaze. I. Thess. 5:21.

Yours for true Bible study.

Joseph R. Elmhurst.

Four Teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts
as the cereal part of the meal, helps keep one in fine fettle.

There's a Reason—in fact, a number of reasons.

Grape-Nuts is a concentrated food, hence a small portion goes a long way.

It is made of wheat and barley, and contains all the nutriment of these grains, including those invaluable mineral salts so often lacking in ordinary food, but which are indispensable for normal growth and maintenance of body and brain. One great aim in originating Grape-Nuts was to supply this lack of mineral elements, and it fulfills its purpose admirably.

Grape-Nuts is a delicious food, and digests quickly, generally in about one hour. Compare this with the 2½ to 3 hours required by bread.

Ready to eat direct from the FRESH-SEALED package, crisp, nourishing, economical—

German Soldiers Beat British Wounded to Death

Letter Written by German Officer Corroborates Accusations of Inhumanity Brought Against the Huns—Kaiser and Von Hindenburg Still Admired but Crown Prince Lost Caste

LONDON, April 21.—That German soldiers in a rage beat British wounded to death is the charge made in a narrative by the official Eyewitness with the British troops, dated April 16, and given out by the press bureau yesterday.

"In view of false accusations in enemy newspapers regarding the conduct of the British at Neuve Chapelle," the narrative says, "the following extract from the diary of a German officer, dated Dec. 19, 1914, is interesting:

"The sight of the trenches and the fury, not to say the bestiality, of our men in beating to death wounded British, affected me so much that for the rest of the day I was fit for nothing.'

"The writer of this," the British official observer continues, "was in the 13th Regiment, 13th Division of the 7th German Corps. His testimony is borne out by the evidence of our men on numerous occasions, notably at Neuve Chapelle, where several of our wounded were temporarily left behind and subsequently were found bayoneted or with their brains blown out."

Reviewing recent operations the Eyewitness says:

"On the 8th our artillery caused further losses among hostile parties in the neighborhood of Richebourg-l'Avoue, Festubert. The enemy's trench mortars were active, but were soon shelled into silence. Our anti-aircraft guns damaged one of the enemy's aeroplanes.

"About midnight of the 12th an airship passed over the town and dropped fifteen bombs. Three women and a child were killed and a few horses were injured.

"On the 13th enemy aeroplanes were more active east of Ypres, throwing flares and smoke balls over the trenches, which were then subjected to a heavy bombardment of guns and rifle grenades. On the 14th the German heavy artillery shelled Quinchy and about midnight the enemy exploded a mine close to our trenches near St. Eloi, causing a few casualties. Early the following morning we fired a mine opposite Quinchy, blowing up a portion of the hostile trenches.

"Prisoners state that the shortage in regular officers and the promotion of one-year volunteers has led to great deterioration in the quality of junior officers, many of whom the soldiers regard with secret contempt. The wholesale distribution of Iron Crosses has caused the decoration to be despised. The Kaiser and Von Hindenburg are still popular heroes, but the Crown Prince has lost caste.

"The absurd forms in which hatred of the British nation is exhibited are shown by the report of a prisoner that the gas tanks at Diedenhoffen have been painted with "Gott Strafe England' in enormous letters."

BULLER IS WELL LIKED

He Will Make a Splendid Commander Says Major Gault.

OTTAWA, April 21.—Major Hamilton Gault, of the Princess Patricias, who is invalided in London from the front, where he was wounded, writes to Gen. Hughes expressing the satisfaction of this crack regiment at the appointment of Lt.-Col. Buller to the command in succession to Col. Farquhar, who was killed recently.

Incidentally he confirms the cause of the death of Col. Farquhar. "He fell by a stray bullet at night while inspecting some new earthworks," says Major Gault.

"The question of the command of the battalion is now," he adds, "admirably settled in the appointment of Buller. He will make a splendid commanding officer. He has, as of course you know, the absolute confidence of us all and is eminently qualified for the arduous duties which lie before him."

Major Sir Max Aitken, the Canadian official eyewitness in France, has been invalided home, suffering from pneumonia.

Official announcement of the death of a Toronto officer of wounds is made in the casualty list issued last night. The list follows:

Fifteenth Battalion — Died of wounds, Capt. Robert C. Darling.

The casualties announced yesterday were:

Fourteenth Battalion — Killed in action—Pte. William J. Keenan and Pte. Lorenzo Lefebvre.

PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS MEAN BAD BLOOD

People who have impure or impoverished blood should be careful to take only a vegetable and temperance remedy such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is and has been for over forty years.

The first day you start to take this reliable medicine, impure germs and accumulations begin to separate in the blood and are then expelled through the eliminative organs.

In place of the impurities, the arteries and veins gradually get fresh vitalized blood and the action of this good blood on the skin means that pimples, boils, carbuncles, eczema, rash, acne and all skin blemishes will disappear. Then you must remember that when the blood is right, the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys become healthy, active and vigorous and you will have no more trouble with indigestion, backache, headache and constipation.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day at any medicine dealers; it is a powerful blood purifier.

Depend upon this grand remedy to give you the kind of blood that makes the skin clear, the mind alert, the vision keener, and puts ambition and energy into the entire body. You won't be disappointed. For free advice or free booklet on blood, write Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y.—Adv.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets not only the original but the best Little Liver Pills, first put up over 40 years ago, by old Dr. R. V. Pierce, have been much imitated but never equaled, as thousands attest. They're purely vegetable, being made up of concentrated and refined medicinal principles extracted from the roots of American plants. Do not gripe. One or two for stomach corrective, three or four for cathartic.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada at the world's dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

Masters and Men of Britain Can Deliver the Goods

Premier Says Immense Amounts Required, Shortness of Skilled Labour and Number of Men Who Have Enlisted are Responsible for Difficulty of Getting Munitions and War Supplies.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., April 21.—The British Prime Minister, Herbert H. Asquith, in an appeal last night to the workmen of the northeast coast to speed up the output of munitions of war, refrained from all reference to the drink question, and declared that there had been no slackness on the part of either the employes or the employers.

The necessity for greater effort, he said, arose from the fact that an enormous quantity of ammunition was being expended to the success of recruiting among the workers, and the consequent shortage of skilled labor. This was being remedied, and the Premier foreshadowed the enlargement of the present plants and the utilization of factories otherwise engaged to do Government work, with proper compensation.

The appeal was addressed almost as much to the employers as to the men, although the meeting was entirely for the workers, and the manufacturers were told in plain terms that they must not expect to make undue profits from Government contracts.

The Prime Minister was accorded a great ovation, and his speech was repeatedly cheered. He will visit some of the armament works on the Tyne side to-day.

The Premier declared that the demand for men and material was on so vast a scale that it might be said, without exaggeration, that the whole nation was taking part in the war. The armies fighting at the front, like the armies which were being brought into being, were drawn to a degree never before known from all classes and sections of the people. There were very few houses which had not voluntarily and spontaneously contributed their best manhood to the forces of the crown. The men who were producing material were in as true a sense as the sailors and soldiers, fighters and combatants in this national war. No man was worthy the name of British citizen who was not taking his part in it.

In the early days of the war, said the Premier, the Government had appealed for recruits and had obtained the largest and finest body of men who had ever followed the colors.

The Premier also denied that the Government had only lately become alive to the importance of the matter of need for supplies, and declared that in September he had appointed a committee of the Cabinet, headed by Lord Kitchener. The efforts of this committee had largely increased the supplies.

"Nor is it true that there has been any general slackness on the part of any employers or employes," continued the Premier. "Some employers register 67 to 69 hours per week per man. The situation can be otherwise explained. It is due to the unprecedented scale on which ammunition has been expended on each side, to the shortness of skilled labor and to the success in recruiting."

Premier Asquith appealed to the men to rival the patriotism of their fellows who had gone to the front by regular attendance at work and an increase in output. All were called upon to make sacrifices. These sacrifices included a limitation of profits, the temporary suspension of restrictive rules and customs, with provision for reasonable compensation in cases of proven injury or loss.

The manufacturers of war material, he said, were not entitled to undue profit; trade unions would not prejudice their interests by suspending their rules, and firms suffering by the transfer of labor, or by inability to carry out their civil contracts would receive prompt and adequate compensation. All claims would be settled at once by a tribunal set up by the Government.

"I state my own conviction," said the Premier, "when I say that once productive factories are organized and mobilized all will be well. I remember your message: 'The masters and men together will deliver the goods.' That is all we ask you to do."

Husband Slayer Weds Brother Of Her Victim

CHICAGO, April 20.—Mrs. Mary Kozicki entered the Court of Domestic Relations with fire in her eye. Valentine Kozicki, brother of the husband she killed a year ago, entered the same court bristling defiance of her unkind glare.

An hour later they left, walking as close together as possible, a happy bride and bridegroom. And off the State's list of witnesses against Mrs. Kozicki must be stricken the name of Valentine. As husband of the defendant he cannot now give the important evidence which the State's Attorney counted on him to provide.

Attorney George Remus, counsel for the woman, was the Cupid in the case, and Judge Fry gladly halted the wheels of justice to tie the knot. Appearance of the pair in the Court of Domestic Relations had nothing to do with the murder trial. Two months ago Valentine Kozicki had been arrested at the instance of his sister-in-law. Five times the case was continued, chiefly because the man fell into a vat of boiling glue at the stock yards.

Attorney Remus was clearing his throat to ask the court to visit awful punishment on Kozicki when he caught sight of a smile on the defendant's face. It was aimed behind Remus. He turned around and saw Mrs. Kozicki's frown melt into a coy smirk. What he had intended to say to the court was unsaid.

"Are you smiling at Valentine?" he asked.

"Yes," she replied, "sometimes I think he is awfully nice."

Remus hurried over to Valentine.

"What do you mean by grinning at my client," he demanded.

"I'm not grinning—that's a regular love smile," said Valentine.

Inspiration by Lawyer Remus: "Say, why don't you two get married?"

"I'd like nothing better," confessed the man.

"I'll marry him this minute," agreed the woman.

It required slightly more than a minute, as a clerk had to hurry downstairs after a license, but Judge Fry lost no time when the permit arrived. The charge against Kozicki, which would have been highly embarrassing had it been pressed, was dismissed.

Mrs. Kozicki and the brother of her present husband owned a saloon. They lived upstairs. The property was theirs. On the night of September 22, 1913, Mrs. Kozicki shot her husband to death. She said he had attempted to administer one of his periodical beatings.

Valentine Kozicki was the first witness on the scene. Hence his importance as a witness in the woman's trial, which will take place two weeks hence.

ENGINEER AND WIFE PERISH

Both Drowned in the Severn River

River—Canoeist Also Loses Life.

[illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Strachan, former residents of Orillia, were drowned Monday evening at the mouth of the Severn river.

Mr. Strachan was assistant engineer on the Trent Valley Canal construction and moved his family to Port Severn two years ago, when work was commenced on the Severn river section of the canal.

About 7.30 Monday evening Mrs. Strachan went to the river to draw a pail of water, but slipped and fell into the river. Her three-year-old son, who accompanied her, screamed, and Mr. Strachan came to his wife's assistance. He plunged into the river, but the current was too strong for him, and both he and his wife were carried over the falls and drowned.

They leave a family of five sons, the eldest of whom is eighteen, and the youngest less than a year old. The bodies have not been recovered.

Mr. William Strachan of Brechin is a brother of deceased, and Mrs. Strachan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. McLaughlin, reside in Toronto.

Michael Sweet was also drowned near the same place last Sunday. He was last seen in a canoe on the lock basin about noon, and is supposed to have gone over the lock and falls, as his battered canoe was found there the same evening. Search is also being made for his body.

Sudden Death In Fraserville

Man Thought to be R. G. Potter Was on His Way to Bed When Death Overtook Him—Left Port Hope Intending to Come to Peterboro

FRASERVILLE, April 21.—The body of R. G. Potter, whose sudden death occurred on Monday evening at the home of Mr. William Pugh of Fraserville, was removed to Millbrook yesterday, where it will be held until word is received from a granddaughter, who it is said, resides in Hamilton. Deceased, who was in his ninety-second year, stayed at the American Hotel, Port Hope, for a week prior to his arrival in Fraserville. On Thursday of last week Potter decided to come to Peterborough and purchased a ticket with that object in view. He got off at Fraserville to locate a man whom he was seeking, and until the evening of his death remained with Mr. William Pugh. While on his way upstairs to bed on Monday evening deceased suffered a fainting spell from which he never recovered. Heart failure was thought to have been the immediate cause of death. From papers that were found on the deceased it is believed that his name was Potter and that he formerly resided in Tweed. He had no home in particular and for several days prior to his death stayed with Mr. Pugh.

St. Paul's Man Won The Prize

In Oratorical Contest Last Night Between Young Men of Two Presbyterian Churches

Sunday School hall last evening, in which members of St. Paul's Young Men's Bible Class and of the A. S. K. Bible Class of Knox Church took part was won by Mr. Harry Taylor of St. Paul's. Messrs. Kingsley, Kenyon, and L. H. Ingram of Knox Church were second and third, respectively.

There were four speakers, Mr. Harry Taylor of St. Paul's taking for his subject "Some Falacies of the Tariff," Messrs. K. Kenyon, J. Herron and L. H. Ingram from Knox Church speaking on "The Political and Economical Futility of War," "Freedom" and "Rev. Edgerton Ryerson," respectively. Messrs. G. N. Gordon, Ellis and Clarke acted as judges.

The speakers were complimented on their oration. The judges, in announcing the decision, were not sure that they had distributed the prizes correctly, so close were some of the contestants.

The young ladies of the Deborah Bible Class of St. Paul's entertained the Forward Movement Bible Class of Knox Church, and with a number of members and adherents of both churches they swelled the audience to a considerable size.

A musical programme was prepared, the numbers interspersing the speeches. Mr. A. McKenzie, teacher of the A. S. K. Class, ably acted as chairman.

Refreshments were served by St. Paul's Young Ladies.

The prizes were donated by Messrs. Mowat, Moore and Patterson of St. Paul's.

Inspector Will Enforce the Law

In Respect to Sanitary Regulations —Improvement is Noticed

All manure in the city must be placed in proper boxes and covered so as not to provide a breeding place for flies. This is provided by the laws of the Province and furthermore Sanitary Inspector Spence intends to see that the law is obeyed in this respect at least. The inspector has inspected a number of places during the past few weeks and in cases where the proper provisions have not been made the towners have been informed what is expected of them and told what can be expected unless they live up to the law.

The inspector states that citizens are showing a desire to improve the appearances of their properties by cleaning up. Rubbish that has collected during the winter months is being gathered up and either burned up or disposed of in other ways.

Celebration of St. George's Day At St. John's; Friday

Arrangements have been completed for the observation of St. George's Day at St. John's church, Friday evening at eight o'clock, when it is expected that a very large congregation will be present.

The Lord Bishop of Toronto, Dr. Sweeny, M.A., D.D., will deliver an appropriate discourse, in which he will deal with the conflict now raging in Europe.

It will be an intercessory service for the men who are fighting so valiantly for the Empire. Canada is doing her part and thereby being drawn closer to the Motherland. This is also true of the other dominions and to-day, England must have our support in this her hour of need. As an acknowledgement of htsi assistance, it has been plainly stated in the British House of Commons that the dominions and Canada in particular shall be fully consulted when the peace terms are considered.

The 57th Regiment will attend the service, their presence being voluntary as no orders were read at the weekly drill last night.

Ladies Sell Roses.

During the day, the ladies of St. George's church will sell red roses. They have arranged for a large supply and are looking forward to a ready sale. Every son of England will want to wear a rose on St. George's Day.

Work Ahead Of The C.M.R.

Pte. O. D. Taylor Writing From the Front Says They Will Have Strenuous Course of Training.

Writing from the front on March 20 to a local friend, Pte. O. D. Taylor, of the 57th detachment in the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., says: "We are enjoying a ten-day rest. So far it has been rather interesting, and on the whole, we have spent a rather charming sojourn in France. We can smile and say 'The worst is yet to come.'

"Have received Peterborough papers re the grand celebration and send-off for the C.M.R. They cheer and are undoubtedly anxious to get to the front, but wait—a lot depends on that single word 'wait.' They will certainly have to undergo a strenuous course of work here."

USE COCOANUT OIL FOR WASHING HAIR

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, the less soap you use the better.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greasless), is much better than soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

was stated that Mr. W. R. Morris intimated that he would not be to act as auditor. Mr. Dunsford commissioned to interview Mr. ris with a view to having him re- his decision.

v. Mr. Rollins said he felt that artered accountant should be sed for the audit, even if an outsidad to be engaged. It was not a tion of the integrity of other men ed for the work, but merely for complete satisfaction everyone d feel, under any circumstances, the knowledge that the auditing had been done by a chartered accountant.

Ex-Mayor Rush said he did not agree with Mr. Rollins, but the latter emphasized the desirability of having at least one regular accountant as auditor. Mr. W. H. Dunsford is assistant auditor and as a member of the committee agreed to interview Mr. Morris.

The statement of relief dispensed was presented, but Mr. Dunsford suggested that it be brought in again at the next meeting and in the meantime be audited. This was agreed to and the meeting was adjourned until about the middle of May.

City's Payment.

Mayor Buller reported that he had recently made arrangements to have the city's subscription paid in regular installments.

Canadian Engineers Are Praised

Their Comrades of Same Branch in the British Army Compliment Them.

Mrs. J. Foster, 8 Benson avenue, is in receipt of an interesting letter from her brother, Corp. Stanley Fenwick, who is at the front with the 2nd Field Company, Canadian Engineers. Writing from "Somewhere" on March 30th he says: "I guess by the time you get this letter you will have heard something of us in the newspapers. We have been working very hard and all the Royal Engineers and infantry officers have been praising our work in the trenches. Personally I've done my best and all the men in my section have done very good work. . . . We used to go to work just like at home. Go down to the trenches at a certain time in the morning, take our lunch and then come home for supper. When we were working at nights we went down about 8 o'clock and quit about two or three o'clock in the morning. Some times they would shell the town, but luckily our billett never got hit, but one day a shell came into the cottage next door and knocked the stuffing out of it."

NEW METHODIST HYMN BOOK

Representatives of Scottish Denominations at Committee Meeting—Attempt to Unite on Hymns

The feature of the meeting of the Methodist Hymn Book committee appointed by the General Conference, consisting of ministers and laymen from all parts of Canada, was the presence of the Presbyterian Hymn and Tune committee. These two committees have been working together for some time their big idea being to have the new hymnals as near alike as possible.

Church union advocates will be interested to learn that 360 hymns that are sung by the Presbyterians will also be printed in the new Methodist hymnal. The Methodist book, unlike any others, will be practically the first to be "made in Canada," and is to be printed in the Methodist Book Room. It is understood that the two books would be much more alike, but for the fact that the Presbyterians are under obligation to have their book printed by a large publishing house in England, with whom they have a contract.

The Methodist committee has been at work for five years, and at the recent meeting were engaged with the compilation and completion of the new book. They also considered a great deal of correspondence sent in from all over Canada. Considerable time was spent in discussing the number of editions, styles, size, etc.

Although the General Committee has completed its work, the book is far from being ready for publication. They are awaiting the reports of several sub-committees, including the committee on tunes, committee on versions, classifications and copyrights. It will take about a year to finish up this work and that long or longer to print the book.

The secretary was not at liberty to say what hymns had been left out. He refused to tell how many had been cut out of the old book, and would not state as to whether the committee favoured the deletion of popular or favourite hymns.

A NOVEL ATTRACTION

A most unusual attraction has been secured for the Royal Theatre for the next three days. It is known as Cowan's Setters, With Prof. Cowan and his trained dogs. These are all thoroughbred Setters and are excellently trained.

This act is very pretty and entertaining and parents should give their children a chance to see these superb animals perform. It will delight them. The admission for children is only 5 cents every afternoon.

Canadian Buildings "The Finest by Far" at Panama Exposition

The following, under a heading that describes Canada's exhibit at the Panama Exposition as "The finest individual exhibit by far," appears in the Chicago Evening American. It is gratifying reading for Canadians, and as the same article appears in all the Hearst newspapers in the United States—a dozen or so—this country and its resources gets a very tidy bit of advertising even if it involves a little free advertising for the Exposition:

Citizens of the United States who go to the great Exposition at San Francisco will return with increased respect for Canada and the Canadian Government, thanks to the great building and the extraordinarily fine exhibit that represent Canada's power.

There never was seen a more complete, inspiring exhibit of the wonders of a great country.

The Canadians have gone at the thing thoroughly, they have eclipsed completely the exhibits of every one of our individual states, and that is putting it very mildly.

Every Canadian certainly should visit the Panama-Pacific Exposition, if only to confirm the opinion he probably holds that Canada is a wonderful place and its government a magnificent and capable government.

In addition to Canadians, representatives of every state and every county in the United States should make it a point to spend a thoughtful day in the Canada Building.

They will learn there that it is possible for a people not afraid of "paternalism or government influence" to do wonders for the building up of a country.

And they will see splendid work done by private corporations, railroads and others, under proper and efficient control by the people.

exhibits tell the story of the great nation that lies north of us. Canada is an empire of strength, beauty, prosperity and unlimited possibilities.

Intelligent citizens of this nation will rejoice in that Canadian exhibition, with its many proofs of Canadian intelligence, energy good government aan good citizenship.

Every citizen of the United States should be glad to know that we have as our brother on the north a people so powerful, a realm so vast and prosperous.

Forever there can be between the United States and Canada only friendly and brotherly rivalry.

The Canadians, at great expense and with great intelligence, have sent to our Exposition a demonstration of their power and ability. Every American should make it a point to study it. And every one who knows the difficulty of developing and governing a new country will bow reverently to the power that Canada displays.

The exhibition made cannot properly be described. It is your duty TO SEE IT.

It shows the beginning of man's work in a wild country, the forests, the animals, the wildness. And it shows man conquering the earth, making his home of the forest, his fertile fields of the rough plains, his servants of the waterfalls, and, of all, his happiness in independence and free government.

A wonderful empire is Canada, not a PART of England, but a greater England. The people of this country should be grateful for the exhibition that Canada has sent to us.

See the Canada Building if you can and all the other wonders of the Panama Exposition, and all the wonders of this great country that lie between.

If you want to know the meaning of the word Canada, our great northern brother, make it a point, on your visit to the Exposition, either going the Canadian Empire.

License at Mt. Julian Hotel Renewed For Another Year

Only Wet Spot in East Peterboro' Has a Particular Attraction for Many of the Summer Visitors to Stoney Lake.

The license for Wm. Thompson's hotel at Mount Julian, Stony Lake, the only wet spot in East Peterborough, has been renewed for another year. This news will mildly interest some of the summer visitors to the Lake, especially those who take a little "liquor for their stomach's sake." The status quo of the Mt. Julian bar will doubtless remain an incentive for some of those who insist upon going for the mail, and for others the daily shave will be remembered with exacting solicitude for personal appearance.

Ford Motor Co. Increase Wages Reduce Hours

Examiner Special:

DETROIT, April 21.—Announcement of a sweeping advance in wages and reduction of working hours for all employees of the Ford Motor Co., Limited, of Canada, was made here to-day. All employees who have been in the service of the company six months or longer are to receive a minimum wage of 50 cents on hour, or $6 a day, the working hours being reduced to eight hours a day, or 48 hours a week. The company employs about 2,400 persons at its factory at Ford, Ont., and its nine branches located in other cities of Canada.

Bring Along Your Towels And Sheets

To the "Towel and Sheet" Shower for the Soldiers To-morrow Night at the Y.W.C.A.

Just before you left the office on your way to luncheon to-day you shook a little salad dressing on your hands from the revolving, squirt-gun sort of thing which hangs above the wash bowl; then a few drops of water—suds—rinse— and what was the next need on the list?

A Towel.

You might have got along without the soap, if the worst had come to the worst. From the appearance of some towels it may be suspected that many people get along without water also, letting friction and a towel do the work. It may be the plebeian, roller variety, or those patrician kerchief-sized squares one finds supplied in our best hotels, or paper fabric, or even the front of your overalls—but some time, some place, almost everybody uses a towel.

Now the Business Girls' Club of Peterborough proposes to endow an hospital with towels and sheets for chaps who have been on the firing line, in the trenches doing a bit of fighting for us. They will have forgotten, most of them, what soap and water feel like, and about the first thing they will need an introduction to will be a bath.

After that a towel. Perhaps several, and then for the sheets.

But first the people at home must supply the towels and sheets. The thought of wounded, dripping soldiers, standing waiting for the breeze to dry them, and for a supply of sheets for the cots, is not one which appeals to the military hospital authorities. They are asking among other things for towels and sheets, and the Business Girls' Club here has undertaken to send a quantity.

Towels and sheets have been slow in coming in—at least they have not been coming in such quantities as have other hospital supplies, and the Examiner asks its readers to unite with the young ladies in a "Towel and Sheet Shower," for the benefit of the hospital work.

The shower takes place in the green parlour of the Y.W.C.A. at 8 o'clock to-morrow night. Donations may be sent or taken there, or to the store of Mr. J. M. Greene, where the young ladies will take them in charge.

Any reasonable curiosity as to the size and style of towels required may be satisfied in the following descriptions:

Patients' towels, 36 by 18 inches, made of linen huck.

Doctors' towels, coarse cotton huck, 14 by 18 inches.

Dish towels, ordinary size and material.

The dimensions of the sheets will be 60 by 108 inches.

At the Y.W.C.A. to-morrow night there will be refreshments and a programme in connection with the "Shower."

And now, in the interest of the cleanliness and comfort of our wounded soldiers, bring along your donations.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY AT ST. JOHN'S CHURCH

On Friday evening next (St. George's Day) a national service in commemoration of St. George, patron saint of England, will be held in the parish Church of St. John, which has been kindly placed at the disposal of the Rev. Jas. Price, rector of St. George's Church, South Peterborough. The sermon will be preached by the Right Reverend, the Bishop of Toronto. The service will be choral and delegations from the 57th Regiment, and from all or nearly all the various patriotic societies in the city, will be present together with a considerable number of public functionaries.

Operation May Give Prisoner His Freedom

PARSONS, Kan., April 20 — Ira Henry, once member of the Central Christian Church choir and prominent Sunday School worker, is recovering from an operation at the State Prison at Lansing, which probably will restore him his liberty. Henry is serving an indefinite term, from ten to twenty two years, for burglary.

Fifteen years ago Ira Henry was struck on the head with a sledge hammer. Apparently he recovered, but years afterward there came times when Henry was a different man. He led a dual life. During one of these lapses of memory he robbed a home here and was caught.

Henry had only a vague remembrance of the robbery when he was on trial, but the evidence was so overwhelming there was no use pleading other than guilty. And so Ira Henry, son of one of the oldest and most respected men in the city, went to prison.

The operation was performed by Dr. L. F. Barney of Kansas City and Dr. J. B. Faulkner, prison physician. Two inches of Henry's skull was removed and the doctors found a bit blood clot on his brain. Undoubtedly they declared, this was the cause of Henry's lapses of memory. It was removed and the rapid change in the change of the prisoner's head justifies the statements of the doctors.

Skilled Workmen To Be Recalled.

LONDON, April 21.—The Government has made arrangement under which skilled workmen now at the front fighting can be recalled to England to work in the factories producing munitions of war.

Lord Elphinstone made this announcement yesterday at a meeting of the Birmingham manufacturers, which had been called by George Macaulay Booth, chairman of the munitions committee. Lord Elphinstone outlined the Government's plan for organizing the supplies in the Midland counties and said what was ### Luxemburg Still Protesting.

PARIS, April 21.—The Luxemburg legation, which still maintains diplomatic relations with the Foreign Office, made public yesterday a statement to the effect that the Government of the Grand Duchy has protested energetically, and continues to protest, against the violation of that state's neutrality by Germany. The Grand Duchy was invaded by German troops immediately after the outbreak of the war.

Woman Charged With Kidnapping.

KINGSTON, April 21. — Kidnapping her own child was the charge that Eliza Richardson, aged 30, had to answer to in the police court yesterday. Through her counsel she pleaded "not guilty," and the case was remanded a day. It is alleged that the young woman signed papers giving her three-year-old daughter over to Mrs. Helen Bearance, and that Monday she called at Mrs. Bearance's home, and after securing permission to take the child to a corner store for candy, took her to the home of a relative and hid her.

WANT GERMAN TROPHIES FOR THE EXHIBITION

Special Wire to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 21.—A deputation from the Canadian National Exhibition Board of Toronto, arrived in the capital this morning intent upon securing a new line of attractions for the big fair next fall. They interviewed General Sam Hughes to know how they could procure an exhibit of German trophies.

"I'll have Kaiser William brought for you about that time," remarked the General.

While unable to supply trophies he promised to lend all the assistance in his power to have them procured in England.

PEOPLE OFTEN SAY

"How Are We To Know When The Kidneys Are Out Of Order?"

EASIEST THING IN THE WORLD!

The location of the kidneys, close to the small of the back, renders the detection of kidney trouble a simple matter. The note of warning comes from the back. The kidneys become overtaxed and fail to do their work at nature's call.

Backache is the signal sent out by the kidneys the minute they become overtaxed. Those who heed the warning when it first comes, usually have but little trouble.

The danger lies in delay. Doan's Kidney Pills stimulate the action of the kidneys, and enable them to perform their duty perfectly.

Mrs. Greig Murphy, Lower Ship Harbor East, N.S., writes: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills in my family with great success, and don't think there is a better pill for the kidneys. I was very miserable with my back, and could hardly get about. I got a box, and tried them, and found that they were really good, so I took in all about six boxes, and soon found my back cured, and my kidneys as well as ever."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25; for sale at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

An Addition to The Profession

Dr. George Fortune, veterinary surgeon, will be welcomed to the city as an addition to the number of the profession. Dr. Fortune has decided to locate in this city, taking over the offices foremrly occupied by Dr. Rogers, at Fountaine's livery. He has had an extensive experience in his profession and is in an occasional contributor to veterinary publications. He has also been frequently called upon to give expert evidence in actions requiring knowledge of veterinary science. He made his debut in the city only a few days ago and yesterday was called upon to give expert evidence in a case against a soldier who was charged with ill-treating a horse.

Dr. Fortune practiced about fifteen years at Newmarket, besides other places.

U.S. Aeroplane

Examiner Special:

WASHINGTON, April 21.—War Secretary Garrison this afternoon received from Gen. Funston a report concerning the firing by Mexicans on a United States' army aeroplane near Brownsville.

The secretary said he would not make it public for twelve hours.

Despite optimistic unofficial accounts of the incident from Brownsville, the action is generally interpreted as indicating that the affair is very serious.

"DRYS" ARE VICTORIOUS.

Big Gains Against Liquor Registered in Illinois.

CHICAGO, April 21.—Illinois was in the throes of a prohibition ballot yesterday, with decisive victories for the "dry" party.

No new counties were added to the "entirely dry" column, but the no-license territory was extended until less than 200 townships in the state are now wet.

The most extensive success of the days was won in Dupage county, a neighbor of Cook county, of which Chicago is a part, where three out of four communities that had the question up went "dry."

The feminine vote was the deciding factor in at least two of the Dupage dry triumphs. In Naperville 476 women voted dry and 295 wet, while of the men 322 voted dry and 286 wet. The dry proposition carried by 217 votes through the strength rolled up by the feminine electors. The outcome was similar in West Chicago. The men voted for the saloons. They cast 277 dry ballots and 266 wet. The women were against the saloons almost two to one. They voted 365 dry and 197 wet, and the dram-shops were put out of commission by a majority of 29.

BIG JUNCTION TAKEN.

Botha's Forces Capture Railway Line to Windhoek.

LONDON, April 21.—A Cape Town despatch says that forces of the Union of South Africa have occupied Keetmanshop, the most important town in German Southwest Africa, next to Windhoek, the capital. It is an important railroad junction and gives Gen. Botha command of the railroad to Windhoek.

A Berlin report via Sayville, makes claim that a force landed from British cruisers and transports was defeated by German troops near Pangani, a seaport of German East Africa. It is asserted that the British lost 700 men, while the German casualties were seven officers and 13 men killed; 14 officers and 32 men wounded.

Trio of Germans Indicted.

LONDON, April 21. — True bills were returned by the grand jury in the Old Bailey police court yesterday against three alleged German spies, Koepferle, Hahn and Muller, charged with sending military information to Germany. Anton Koepferle pretends to be an American and it is believed he comes from Brooklyn; Augustus Hahn is a naturalized Englishman, while Hahn admits he is a German.

Life Insurance In a Crisis

Every time a great Crisis occurs LIFE INSURANCE has an opportunity to show what a giant of trength it is. Tremendous burdens are placed upon its shoulders, but it never shirks, never hesitates or groans.

When the Titanic took its awful plunge, carrying 1500 human souls into the deep, thousands of widows and orphans were left throughout the world. LIFE INSURANCE accepted the burden without the quiver of a muscle, and spread its protection around the Globe.

When seven years ago the financial world was labouring under an attack of indigestion due to undigested securities, and people could not get even their own money out of the Savings Banks, LIFE INSURANCE furnished spot cash to its policy holders upon application.

To-day when a gigantic struggle wages across the Seas and it is difficult to get loans from banks or money lenders, they find the solution again in LIFE INSURANCE.

It is to-day saving thousands of men all over the world, not only embarrassment but actual failure.

LIFE INSURANCE protects your wife and family.
" " will meet their needs when you are gone.
" " is always a resource.
" " contributes to your estate.
" " increases your savings.
" " increases the savings habit.

Money invested in LIFE INSURANCE is sure to come back to you or your family.

Your credit is made better by the amount of LIFE INSURANCE you carry.

The need for LIFE INSURANCE to every man with a family is as fixed as the daily need for bread, and that need is well met by a policy in THE SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA.

Shattered NERVES

The Nervous Strain of Recent Months

Has Ruined the Health of Many a Business Man.

Sleeplessness, Headache, Nervous Indigestion, Irritability and Depression Tell of Exhausted Nerve Force.

Never before has the strain on the nerves of the business man been so great as since the beginning of the war. With some it has been a question of lessened profits, while others have been thrown out of employment or seen their business go down with a crash.

Worry and anxiety are the most frequent causes of nervous disorders. It is, therefore, not to be wondered at that in many cases the depression in business has resulted in shattered nerves and ruined health.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food has proven itself the greatest of nerve restoratives. It is no miracle-worker, but supplies to the human body, in condensed and easily assimilated form, the ingredients from which Nature forms new, rich blood and new nerve force.

When the nervous system is greatly exhausted it requires patient treatment to revitalize the wasted and depleted nerve cells. Since cure is brought about by the building-up process, you can be sure that each dose of this great food cure is at least doing you some good, and that the results are bound to be beneficial.

By the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the vital organs of the body are quickened into action. Digestion improves, the heart's action is strengthened, the liver, kidneys and bowels resume their natural functions, and the system is benefited in every way. Gloom and discouragement give place to new hope and courage, and you are helped on the way to health and success.

FIVE STRAIGHT FOR PHILADELPHIA NATIONAL

Giants Again Tasted Defeat at the Hands of the Phillies—Boston Beat Brooklyn, Fitzpatrick Scoring the Winning Run—Detroits Slugging too Much for Chicago

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York, April 20.—Rube Schauer, who came to New York in July, 1910, started his first major league game here to-day, and was hit hard by the pace-setting Philadelphians, who won their fifth straight victory of the season by a score of 5 to 2. Umpire Bryon ordered the manager of the Giants off the field in the ninth inning. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Philadelphia | 5 | 12 | 1 |
| New York | 2 | 7 | 0 |

Batteries — Mayer and Killifer; Schauer and Meyes.

Boston in the Tenth.

Boston, April 20.—With two out and three on bases in the tenth inning, Smith drove the ball to the score board, scoring Fitzpatrick, and Boston won a 4 to 3 victory over Brooklyn to-day. The contest was an exciting one, in which misplays kept the outcome in doubt. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn | 3 | 9 | 2 |
| Boston | 4 | 7 | 3 |

Batteries—Pfeffer, Ragon, Coombs, Aitchison and McCarthy; Luque, Hughes and Gowdy.

Reds Whitewashed Cards.

Cincinnati, April 20.—Benton pitched superb ball, allowing only two hits, and as a result shut out St. Louis to-day, 2 to 0. Perdue, who started the game for St. Louis, was hit hard, but kept the hits scattered. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis | 0 | 2 | 0 |
| Cincinnati | 2 | 11 | 0 |

Batteries — Perdue, Niehaus and Snyder; Benton and Clarke.

Pittsburg Beat Chicago.

Chicago April 20.— Pittsburg hit Chicago's pitchers consistently to-day and defeated the locals eight to six. Cheney's offerings were hit to all corners of the field, and Zabel weakened in the seventh. In this round Wagner's triple with two men on bases clinched the game for the visitors. Mamaux pitched in fine form until the seventh inning, when he was replaced by McQuillen. Home runs by Johnston and Fisher were features. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Pittsburg | 8 | 13 | 2 |
| Chicago | 6 | 7 | 2 |

Batteries—Mamaux, McQuillen and Gibson; Cheney, Zabel, Pierce and Bresnahan.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Detroit, April 20.—Detroit's slugging trio, Cobb, Crawford and Veach, smashed their team to a third consecutive victory over Chicago to-day. The score was six to three. Cicotte and Dauss were hit hard in spots. Three hits and a wild throw by Cicotte in the sixth inning decided the game. Manager Rowland made several changes in the Chicago line-up. Outfielder Felsch was benched. Roth replaced Breton at third, and the outfield whirled. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |

| Chicago | 3 | 7 | 3 |
| Detroit | 6 | 11 | 1 |

Batteries—Cicotte and Schalk; Dauss and McKee.

Cleveland Shut Out St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., April 20.—St. Louis could do nothing with Morton's delivery to-day and was shut out 9 to 0. Cleveland bunched hits off St. Louis' pitchers and took advantage of local errors. The score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland | 9 | 11 | 2 |
| St. Louis | 0 | 3 | 5 |

Batteries—Morton and Egan; Perry.

Boston Downed Washington.

Washington, April 20.—Boston batted Gallia hard to-day, and defeated Washington 5 to 2. Excellent fielding kept the score down. Foster, for Boston, yielded two singles and a triple for two runs in the first inning, but thereafter held the locals in check. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston | 5 | 12 | 0 |
| Washington | 2 | 8 | 2 |

Batteries— G. Foster and Thomas; Gallia, Ayres and Ainsmith.

Athletics Outplayed Yankees.

Philadelphia, April 20.—By bunching hits and a double steal, with errors by New York, Philadelphia won to-day's game 6 to 2. Warhop was hit hard in four innings, while Shawkey kept the hits of his opponents' scattered. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 2 | 8 | 2 |
| Philadelphia | 6 | 12 | 0 |

Batteries — Warhop and Sweeney; Shawkey and McAvoy.

"Phillies" Got Out In Front In Bid For Championship

NEW YORK, April 21.—The first few days of baseball leave little chance of comparison of the teams in the different leagues, as the season is hardly old enough to figure upon the efficiency of each machine, but there has been enough playing so far to estimate in a measure the preparedness of the clubs for a six months' dash. In this respect two outfits stand out, the Philadelphia squad in the National League and the Yankees in the younger organization.

"Pat" Moran, the fighting Irish leader of the Phillies, conditioned his team in Florida, and he brought them North inoculated with vitality and life giving germs, as well as supremely confident that no world was too big or too well defended to be conquered. Every man on the squad was physically fit for the start of the championship season, and just how much this means can be seen by a glance at the standing of the clubs, where the Phillies are shown two games ahead of their nearest rivals.

There are few pennants won in April, however, although a good beginning is said to be getting the work half done, and these will have to be more than condition among the Phillies to keep them in front until October. Moran says there is plenty more. He shouts at the top of his voice that there is not a chance to keep his team from the world's series spoils. He asserts that he has the best pitching staff, the best catcher, the best "pony" infield and the hardest hitting outfield in the league. Moran insists that the Phillies cannot lose.

Men Believe in Moran.

Seldom does a major league manager become so firm in his predictions or arguments about pennant winning as has Moran. The pugnacious Irishman will listen to no deductions that place another team above his. He has the winning fever at just as high a temperature as ever bothered George Stallings, and he has his men believing in him, which is his greatest help.

"Dave" Bancroft, the recruit shortstop, and J. A. Niehoff, the second baseman, obained from Cincinnati in trade for "Red" Dooin, have made the infield presentable. Bancroft is a flashy fielder, sensational at times and ambitious enough to be trying hard. His hitting has not been extra noticeable yet, but he is fast on the bases and has the knack of worrying the pitcher. Moran says that Bancroft will make his name as a shortstop before the year is over. Niehoff was a strong player at Cincinnati and has not lost any of his strength since coming to Moran.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, the star pitcher of the National League, is right back on the job. His shutout victory over the Braves and defeat of the Giants left no doubt as to his readiness. Alexander hopes to collect thirty victories this year, an ambition, by the way, fired sagely by Moran, and he will be a hard man to beat. The Philly pitching staff is built around Alexander and Erskine Mayer, both of whom are right at their top speed.

BIG BASKETBALL GAME THIS EVENING

To-night will see one of the best basketball games that has been seen in these parts for some time, when the Veterans meet the Excelsiors.

In looking over the two quintettes and in comparing their records for the year, it is hard to pick a winner, as each of them have won a league.

The Veterans are heavier and have more experience, but what the Excelsiors lack along these lines they make up for in speed and shooting ability.

There is one thing sure, and that is that both teams will be out to win from start to finish, and the game is sure to be in doubt till the last whistle. Both of these teams are very popular because of their ability in the game. And there is sure to be a big crowd of both sexes. Game is called at 8.15.

Joe Lally in the City To-day And Will Return Friday

Mr. Jos. Lally, of Cornwall, arrived in the city to-day, will attend several athletic meetings to-night, and will return to the city on Friday, when he hopes to meet the lacrosse fans generally. He was in Millbrook this morning. He states that the game has taken a strong hold in that town, and the boys have already begun to turn out. Mr. Lally has found the eastern towns strong for lacrosse, and hopes that Peterborough will take up the game with proportionate enthusiasm. To-morrow he will visit Lindsay, Cannington, and other towns, returning to Peterborough on Friday. He is eager to enlist the support of the school teachers, and will likely seek an opportunity to visit some of the schools.

INDOOR BASEBALL

All 8 to 9 games in the Indoor League have been changed. The games for the rest of the week are as follows:

Wednesday, April 21—9-10, A. vs. D.
Thursday, April 22—9-10, E. vs. G.
Friday, April 23—9-10, H. vs. Bugle Band.
Monday, April 26—9-10, B. vs. Brass Band.

Bobby Heck Sold To Erie, Pa. for $500

LONDON, April 20.—The London Baseball Club Saturday completed the sale of Pitcher Bobby Heck to the Erie Central League Club. The great little London southpaw was sold for $500. The local club parted with Heck reluctantly. As a drawing card and a pitcher he was worth a great deal more than $500 to the London Club. The sale was only made after Heck had decided to quit the game after this season. Bobby was dissatisfied. For the past five years he has been pitching splendid ball, the first three with Lansing, in the South Michigan League, and the last two with London. No better southpaw than the Syracuse lad ever performed in the Canadian League, and had it not been for the baseball war, there is no doubt that he would have received a trial with a major league club a year ago.

Was Going to Quit.

Bobby had signed a contract with the London Club for the coming season, but when it was decided to cut the Canadian season short this year by over two weeks, he became dissatisfied. Although he made no direct statement to the local directors, letters received by local fans from him told of his determination to quit. He figured that after pitching as good ball as he had done for the past two seasons, he was worth a trial in faster company. Rather than come back to London he thought it would be best to retire from the game.

Greater Chance for Bobby.

Although the Central League is only a class B league and but little faster than the Canadian League, the longer season, and the greater opportunity to come under the notice of the big leaguers will likely be more acceptable to Heck than the Canadian League.

The London directors regret having to sell Bobby. They held off as long as they could. It was only to further Heck's own interests that they finally yielded. He will get a bigger salary from Erie than the London Club can afford to pay him.

Reisling Signs Two Fielders.

Manager Reisling also hated to part with the star southpaw, but in a telegram to the writer Saturday he said: Am glad Bob gets a chance in a higher league. He deserves it." Local fans will also miss the Syracuse boy, as he had hundreds of friends in this city. However, there is no one that does not wish him luck and the chance to get up where he belongs.

Manager Reisling also announced this morning that he had added two more outfielders to the London team. They are Hoch and Eckstein, last year with the Galt Wobbly Leaguers. Reisling thinks both are worth a trial, as they were head and shoulders above any of the other players in the W. O. B. L. last season.

Football Ceases On April 30th

Will Resume When War is Over—No Fresh Contracts will be Made

"No more Soccer in England" was the headline in most papers, and it caused quite a sensation. It ought to have been qualified, however, with a second headline, "Till the War is Over." A fortnight ago it was intimated that the Football Association had decided that no players' contracts could be renewed before August 1st, and if the war be still in progress at that time the closure would be applied until it is. It is, therefore, quite possible that football will be in as full swing as ever at least for a part of next season, provided the war, as we all hope it will be brought to and end ere many months have passed. General Smith-Dorrien told the Canadians the other day that it would be all over in five months, and if that should come true all will be toeing the leather by October, only one month late. As the Dominion of Canada F. A. has not taken any action in the way of stopping the game here, and thus indicate to the pick of young Canadians that it is their duty to enlist, we may take it that the 20,000 footballers in this Dominion will go on kicking as before.

No Fresh Contracts.

This decision was not unexpected. A continuous outcry has been going on since the beginning of war, declaring it scandalous that the pick of Britain's athletes should play football instead of joining the army. Amateur football practically stopped when the war commenced, but the professionals, who number nearly 5,000, continued as usual.

Secretary Wall explained this as follows: "It is impossible to stop the game at the beginning of the season, because contracts had been signed with the players, landlords and contractors amounting to three-quarters of a million pounds, and these had to be fulfilled. No fresh contracts will be made. We hope the players [illegible] The meeting decided to defer consideration of dates for cup competitions for the season of 1915-16, and playing of international matches to the future action of the council to be guided by development of events in war. This means that practically no football will be played until the war is over.

Sergt. Downes Writes From the Trenches

Local Policeman With Coldstream Guards Describes Fierce Fighting---Says the Canadians Have Made a Name For Themselves

SERGT. E. DOWNES
Of the Coldstream Guards, the local policeman, who is at the front.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Chief of Police Thompson to-day received the following letter from Sergt. E. Downes of the local police force, who is at the front with the Coldstream Guards:

3rd Coldstream Guards,
British Expeditionary Force,
April 6, 1915.

Dear Sir,—I was ever so pleased to have such a nice letter from you and to get it on Easter Sunday made it read so nice. It is awfully good of you to take so much trouble over me and I thank you with all my heart for your kind wishes.

I guess you have already heard of the terrific battle which took place here three weeks or so ago. Well, that was just the finest example of determination and pluck ever known. We lost heavily, but our losses were only small as compared with those of the enemy. Poor Col. Farquhar was killed during that attack. He was the gentleman who accompanied the Duke of Connaught to Peterborough and was in command of Princess Patricia's Regiment.

At the beginning of February we had a very exciting time. My company was in a trench holding a position which we had taken from the Germans the previous day. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon they commenced to bombard us. For exactly one hour and 10 minutes their guns rattled away at us. Shells were hissing and bursting the whole time and it seemed impossible that any of us would get away alive, yet we knew we must stay there at all cost. God seemed to be with us, for we lost only a few. Our captain was hit, but is doing well in England now.

Well to continue, it happened that in the early hours of the morning the Germans, thinking they could regain their trench, made an attack on us. The shock they must have had. We met them with a very heavy rapid fire. Those who could, just scampered away for their lives, but as they were only 30 yards from us you can bet there were heaps of them popped off. Our casualities were nil.

Their fighting now seems to be a half-hearted sort of fight. They don't seem to relish it at all. The Canadian regiments out here have responded magnificently to the great welcome they received and have made quite a name for themselves.

E. DOWNES,
Sergeant.

A Polite Plea of A Light Sleeper

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—"Whistling girls and crowing hens" are not proverbially regarded with much favour, but a whistling girl is miles ahead of the whistling boy, who on his way home late at night—from eleven o'clock till two a.m.—breaks the silence of the streets, and rouses honest people from their sleep. One particular young man who passes on Charlotte, St. Joseph or Gilmour streets, is a special offender. He can't whistle a tune, but he can make a noise, which is anything but a lullaby. Nothing is more exasperating and nerve-racking than for a nervous light-sleeper to be aroused from his or her first sleep with, in many cases, inability to get sleep the rest of the night. It is the refinement of cruelty for a young man who can't whistle to break the rest of tired sleepers. I am sure he does it thoughtlessly; and that if I politely request him to refrain, in future midnight hours, he will oblige.

Yours truly,
LIGHT-SLEEPER.

Direct sunlight by its chemical effects disintegrates the backing of of mirrors in a comparatively short time.

Unsupervised Playgrounds

To the Editor, The Examiner:

Dear Mr. Editor,—I am quite in sympathy with the Local Council of Women, who are shaming our Local Council of men, in their attempts to provide supervised playgrounds for children, though it seems that such grounds are unnecessary. Private citizens all over the city are preparing unsupervised playgrounds for children. They are spending money, and time, and labour in fitting up their lawns, which the children will convert into playgrounds and waste places almost before the work is completed, with more or less complete destruction of the beauty of these lawns — turning both the lawns and the money spent on them into a waste. A word to the wise. Are citizens to have no protection or encouragement in their efforts to beautify the city?

Yours truly,
PROFITLESS ENDEAVOUR.

Toronto World: Mrs. L. T. Harris Ardiel was the hostess yesterday afternoon in her pretty house in Lynwood Avenue of a very nice tea. It was hard to realize that the pretty little girl receiving at the drawing-room door was the mother of the big baby boy of 17 months. Mrs. Ardiel wore a very handsome gown of blue accordion-pleated satin, with overskirt of bronze embroidered net, diamond ornaments and a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies. Her aunt, Mrs. Ormond (Peterborough), who received with her, wore white crepe metor, sprigged with pale blue, pearl ornaments, and a corsage bouquet of most beautiful vari-coloured sweet peas. Mrs. George Heintzman and Mrs. Goodwin Gibson poured out the tea and coffee in the tea-room, the polished table being almost covered with real lace and tulle, artistically arranged round a mirror plateau, on which stood a handsome pierced silver basket filled with daffodils and narcissi. The pretty girls assisting were Mrs. Godfrey, Miss Ione Heintzman and Miss Rita Hutchison.

THORNBURN—COOK

A quiet wedding was solemnized last evening, when Miss Lillian Cook of Kingston, sister of Mrs. Cooper, Engleburne Avenue, became the bride of Mr. Geo. T. Thornburn, also of Kingston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. Phelps, and the young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Cooper. Mr. and Mrs. Thornburn will reside in Kingston.

MINICOLA—CALLAGHAN.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of the Sacred Heart this morning, when Rev. J. V. McAuley united Mr. Joseph Minicola, 519 Elm street, and Miss Mary Callaghan, 30 Park street, in the holy bonds of matrimony. The attendants were Miss Agnes Dwyer and Mr. Domenico Memmo.

After the nuptial knot had been tied, the happy couple and immediate friends adjourned to the home of the bride where a delightful wedding breakfast was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Minicola left this morning on a wedding trip to Toronto and Hamilton, and on their return will reside in the city.

SLATTERY—SULLIVAN.

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was solemnized at St. Martin's Church, Ennismore on Tuesday, April 13th, when Elizabeth Alena, second daughter of Michael C. Sullivan, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Thomas Slattery, of Otonabee. The bride looked charming in a dainty gown of Belgium Blue satin, and wore a white picture hat with a large Belgium Blue plume, and carried a bouquet of white carnations, while Miss Maggie Sullivan, sister of the bride, who acted as bridesmaid, was attired in sand-colour satin with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. Mr. James Slattery, brother of the groom, acted as groomsman. After the wedding ceremony had been duly performed the bridal party motored to "Home Rule Farm," the home of the bride's parents, where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was served to about seventy guests. Miss Marian Crough presided at the organ, assisted by Mrs. J. E. O. Donoghue and J. K. Galvin.

Mr. P. J. Scollard ably performed the duties of toast-master and was aided in his pleasant task by Reeve Crough and Mr. James Slattery. After the numerous courses had been served the guests indulged in songs, dancing and games, in which they found themselves deeply engaged till the "wee sma' hoors" of the morning. The bride received numerous and costly presents, testifying to her high esteem in her native township, among them being a diamond ring, the gift of the groom, while the bridesmaid received a similar gift set with turquois, and the groomsman a beautiful set of cuff links. Messages of regret on account of inability to attend because of the precarious condition of the Cremong bridge were received from many Peterborough friends. Rev. Fr. J. J. O'Brien and Fr. McAuley being prevented also for this account.

Mr. and Mrs. Slattery will take up their residence at 120 Gladstone avenue, with the best wishes of their host of friends.

OBITUARY

SAMUEL JOHNSTON.

The death occurred last night, at the home of his son, Mr. G. W. Johnston, 525 Weller street, of one of the oldest residents of Peterborough, in the person of Mr. Samuel Johnston. The late Mr. Johnston was in his eighty-fifth year. He was born in the Township of Cavan, but had lived in this city over fifty years. He was a man of many estimable qualities, and won the respect of all with whom he came in contact. He attended St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

His wife and two sons, Messrs. G. W. Johnston, of this city, and T. W. Johnston, of Rochester, N.Y., are left to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 from the above residence to the Little Lake cemetery.

NINA HERLIHY.

Many of our citizens and hundreds of the residents of the surrounding townships learned with intense regret of the sudden death of Nina Herlihy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Herlihy, of Downeyville.

The deceased has been ailing for some time, but death was unexpected, and came as a great shock to her many friends.

Nina Herlihy was one of Downeyville's most popular young ladies, and a member of St. Luke's choir. She was of a kind and loveable disposition, and was revered and esteemed for her many noble qualities by a large circle of friends.

The deceased young lady was only 21 years of age, and leaves to mourn her loss a broken-hearted father and mother, two sisters, Pearl and Olive, and two brothers, Martin and Wm. C. all at home.

The funeral was held from the residence of her father on Saturday, April 17, to St. Luke's Church, Downeyville, where requim high mass was said by Rev. Father Maguire. St. Luke's Church was crowded to the doors, and was the largest funeral ever seen in Downeyville. Rev. Father Maguire preached the funeral sermon, which was a masterpiece of eloquence. The reverend gentleman, in his sermon, referred to the exemplary life of the deceased and many in the congregation were visibly affected.

The remains were interred in St. Luke's Cemetery, and the services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Father Maguire.

The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Vincent Perdue, Jas. Carroll, Fred Fitzpatrick, John Perdue, Albert Carroll and Alphonsus Herlihy, all cousins of the deceased.

Among those present from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Murray and Mr. and Mrs. Tetzo, from Peterborough; Mrs. P. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. Delaney, from Warsaw; and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Murtha, Messrs. A. J. Ashmore, R. Butler, J. Hoolihan, F. Carew and John Carew, M.P.P., all of Lindsay.

CAPTURE OF HILL NO. 60 AN IMPORTANT GAIN

CARING FOR "WAR BABIES" IS A GREAT PROBLEM

Many Soldiers' Widows Have Only Meagre Allowance to Finance Them---Intention to Have Mothers and Children Supported Out of Public Funds.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., April 22.—Admittedly the greatest side problem of the war will be caring for "war babies" who are brought into the world with soldier fathers, and in some cases without the sanction of church or state. Statistics completed here showthat there are 20,000 women and girls living in proximity to the great British training camps, who are to become mothers within the next few months. There are many women whose husbands have been killed at the front who have only the meagre allowance granted to soldiers' widows to finance them through the ordeal of childbirth.

In order to solve the problem, representatives of over a score of sociological and philanthropic relief so cities met to-day privately in the headquarters of the Women's Imperial Health Association to agree on a concerted plan for relief.

It is the intention of the leaders to have Parliament pass a bill to legitimize the child of every soldier whether married or not, the mother and

To-day's Suffragette, discussing the subject says: "War babies must not only be welcomed, but must be given greater, rather than smaller, advantage. Every one will be needed and must be made a valuable asset to the nation."

THE TURKS ARE EVERYWHERE DEMORALIZED

LONDON, Eng., April 22.—The official report of the Indian office says: "The losses of the enemy in the Shaiba action total 2,500 and we took 515 prisoners, who have been brought to Basra. Turks everywhere are in a demoralized retreat. We sunk twelve Arab vessels and have occupied Nakhailah."

Dead French Airmen Found

BERLIN, April 22—The bodies of two French military aviators, one dressed in the uniform of a Lieutenant, and the other in that of a Sergeant, have been found in the wreckage of an aeroplane in the forest east of Muelhausen. The bodies bore a number of wounds made by shrapnel bullets. It is believed that the aviators were members of the aerial squadron which recently attacked the manoeuvre grounds at Nuremberg.

Bishop of London Preaches to Canadians in Trenches.—The Bishop of London held services under shell fire and only with difficulty was he restrained," reported Gen. French. In recent letters Hal. R. Gordon, B.A., a Canadian in the First Contingent, thus describes the Bishop's Easter visit. "His address was short and to the point. He impressed us as a human being rather than a Church dignitary."

RUSSIANS CHECKED GERMAN MOVEMENT

Situation is Now Very Favourable---Only Serious Threat on Invaders' Positions Now Removed---Enemy May Drop Back.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, April 22.—The counter-attack of Gen. Litsinger's Bavarian army against the Russian left wing in the Carpathian position has now been definitely stopped. The Russsians have reoccupied the hill village of Cavtchik, four miles westward of Koziomoka and overlooking the Munkacz-Stry road. This attempted German advance northwest has been the only serious threat the Russians had met since they crossed the main ridge. Generally the situation in the southern campaign is now very favourable to the Russians.

There are signs of discord between Gen. Litsinger and Archduke Frederick, who is the nominal commander of the entire Austro-German combination. The Germans are ready to sacrifice Hungary, at least economically, by fighting a series of rearguard actions and drawing the Russians down towards the middle of the Danube. This would relieve the Silesian flank, where great German forces are now being deployed from Cracow, chiefly along the Dunajec.

Gen. von Hindenburg retains in nearly full strength his extreme northern army which attempted to reach the [illegible] the borders of East Prussia, but he has sent great numbers from his winter position on the Narew, Bzura and Rawka Rivers southward to join the Austrians on the Pilica and Nida, making a continuous and strongly held line from Petrokow to Cracow and southward. This region is also threatened by the Russians, and may be the scene of a great battle before it is possible to move further south from the lower slopes of the Carpathians.

The Austrians one the Pilica are using only explosive bullets despite the public notification that prisoners found with them would be punished. Gen Selivanoff, who directed the siege of Peremysl, informed Gen. Kusmanek January 15 that prisoners with explosive bullets would be shot as criminals. Documents found in the fallen fortress show that Gen. Kusmanek January 26 ordered these bullets should be returned to the artillery depot.

The Austrians have practically evacuated the Province of Bukowina, according to reliable information reaching here from Bucharist. It is believed that nearly all the hostile troops in that section of the war theatre have been withdrawn under German directions to stiffen the forces in Northern Hungary, the enemy trusting to the weather conditions in Bukowina to prevent any considerable advance by the Russians.

Graphic Account of Fighting Around Hill Number Sixty German Losses Were Heavy

NORTHERN FRANCE, April 22. — Although the brilliant and successful action northeast of Ypres, which ended in the capture of Hill No. 60, was a minor affair, compared with the battle of Neuve Chapelle, its results promise to be even more far-reaching and important.

With Hill No. 60 in our hands the way is laid open for a damaging blow at the enemy. Hill No. 60 is a low-lying ridge, strongly entrenched and held by the enemy. It formed a screen and protection for the larger hill of Zand Poudre, five kilometres farther east, where the enemy's artillery is posted. Zand Poudre is the highest hill, commands the whole country, and is the key position in Belgian Flanders.

MANY FIERCE FIGHTS.

In October there were many desperate struggles for the possession of the hill of Zand Poudre. Those who held it were masters of the situation. It fell into the hands of the Germans, and they have retained possession of it ever since. On it were established batteries of light guns which reduced Ypres to ruins, and for months they held in check the British advance from Ypres towards Menin and Lille.

Now that Hill Number 60 is in our hands and the screen of trenches has been taken, the enemy's infantry has been broken and driven back, and the hill of Zand Poudre deprived of its main protection, has become seriously exposed and the strain upon it might well reach the breaking point, for here the enemy has no salient like those at La Bassee and St. Mihiel. It is a concave line, with the hill of Zand Poudre in the centre of the curve.

Yard by Yard we had approached the enemy's trenches on Hill Number 60. Finally a mine which was exploded on Sunday evening prepared the way for the attack on the hill. The enemy were sapping and mining, too. Our sappers beat them at the game, but it was a close thing, for, half an hour later, the enemy's sappers would have been prepared to explode a mine under our trenches

Immediately afterwards the trenches on the hill were searched by shrapnel and shattered by shells from our massed guns, and then the infantry sprang from the trenches for the assault. The first-line trenches were taken with little opposition, so great had been the effect of the mine explosion and artillery fire.

The second line was still held in great strength The enemy, though surprised and rudely shaken, fought stubbornly, but our men were irresistible, and the whole hill was soon in our possession.

When darkness fell fresh troops were thrown into the captured trenches, and during the night strenuous efforts were made to repair the damaged trenches and to put them into a state for defence, but it was a terrible experience for our men. The enemy had the range on the hill and all through the night rained shell and shrapnel upon it with telling effect. Nor was there any respite when dawn came, for with its coming the Germans launched their first counter-attack.

GERMAN GALLANTRY FRUITLESS.

Masses of grey-coated troops swarmed over the plain. Decimated by shrapnel, moved down by machine gun and rifle fire, they reformed and continued their advance with desperate courage. More than once they reached our trenches at the foot of the hill. Then the bayonet was needed, as well as the rifle shot, to keep them out. Time after time they returned to the charge. They charged furiously all day, but when night had again fallen the pluck and fine fighting qualities of our men had won the day. The enemy retreatd, leaving heaps of dead and wounded in front of our lines. Our losses, too, were heavy, but not as great as war at one time anticipated.

German Socialists Are Busy Agitating For Peace

THE HAGUE, April 22.—The Socialists of Germany are making an earnest effort to seek for a basis on which the cessation of the war can be brought about. Dr. Breitscheidt, a prominent member of the German Socialist party, is now in Holland consulting the Dutch Socialist leaders with a view to getting into communication with the British, and, through them, with the French Socialiss in an endeavour to bring pressure to bear on the various Governments.

It is declared that the German Socailists are virtually unanimous in favour of peace, and against any annexation of territory. It is said that, although the Socialist newspapers in Germany are not permitted under penalty of suspension to publish criticisms of the Government or express scepticism regarding the results of the war, at a meeting where only members of the party were admitted and from which the police were absent, free discussions in favour of peace took place.

The general view of the Socialists, it is said, is that Alsace and Lorraine should belong to neither France nor Germany, but should be autonomous. The argument is that if France recaptures the provinces a rankling for vengeance would be held by a large part of the population, which, it is asserted, does not desire to be governed by the French, and that therefore the situation would be as bad as ever. It is reported that the great East Prussian landowners are trying to treat for peace with Russia, owing to fears that their property will suffer, but the Socialists are said to have expressed the opinion that the prospects of a durable peace are more likely through an arrangement of terms by Germany with France and England and by evacuating Belgium.

With reference to the Dardanelles, it is declared that the German Socialists believe that it will not be feasible to internationalize or neutralize the straits until a United States of Europe has been formed. They assert that the futility of neutrality has already been shown.

The Socialists of Germany assert that it will be impossible to starve Germany, but express the belief that the war cannot continue much longer in consequence of the disastrous effect on the economic conditions of all the countries engaged.

Climax of Titanic Political Struggle Between Roosevelt And Barnes Is Reached

SPECIAL WIRE TO THE EXAMINER:

SYRACUSE, N.Y., April 22.—A battle royal between Col. Roosevelt and William Barnes is impending to-day.

The climax of their titanic political struggle was reached in the cross-examination of the former president.

The most tempestuous day of the libel trial was expected. Interest was keyed to fever pitch. It was Roosevelt's third day on the witness stand.

The real "fireworks" in bitter clashes between him and Barnes' chief counsel, William M. Ivins, past master in cross examination, was expected.

Both sides were primed to-day for combat of words.

Roosevelt was straining at the leash eager and anxious for the fray. His opponents were prepared for a rough and tumble, free for all examination.

The question of whether Roosevelt had legal "malice" in alleged libel charges against Barnes was the crux of the fray. Roosevelt denies having issued the statement because of the malice based on Barnes' bitter antagonism culminating in the Barnes' part in his defeat at the Chicago Republican convention.

Barnes' plans of attacks was outlined to-day. His atterneys have racked and scrapped all written and spoken attacks of the Colonel upon Barnes.

They had every violent tirade and harsh word of the Colonel against Barnes.

"Barnesism" and bossism are in readiness to spring upon the defendant.

Germans Tried To Land in Britain

LONDON, April 22.—E. T. Jane, the well-known naval expert, addressing a meeting in Liverpool, said it was not generally known that the Germans had tried to land an expeditionary force in Britain, and that it was the British navy that had made them go back to their harbours again. The navy had saved the country, and there was never a word of it in the newspapers.

Caretaker of Burns' Cottage In Toronto

TORONTO, April 1.—A kindly prototype of the Ayrshire "Cotter" himself is Mr. James Mitchell, now of 106 Dixon avenue, Toronto, but for 20 years the caretaker of Burns' cottage, Alloway, Scotland, who Saturday was awarded $400 of his claim against the C.P.R. for the loss . a mahogany wardrobe, ontaining among other irreparable property, a cane made from an oak beam from the ceil-

The loss as told in Thursday's Star, occurred while the effects of Mr. Mitchell, who but recently moved to Toronto from the west, were in transit between Calgary and this city. "Money cannot repay me," said the old gentelman to the Star to-day, lamenting the loss of this daily reminder of his famous charge.

"I remember the day when we had as many as 2,000 visitors,' he said, "and mind ye, the village itsel' has scarce a hundred. Burns' being born there made Alloway, for his was the only cottage at that time, and more than that, lad, it made Ayrshire.

"We were overrun with visitors in the summer," he continued; "many Canadians, and lots and lots of Americans."

Bryan was Inquisitive

The thought of the "lots and lots" of Americans, and their passion for souvenirs, set a twinkle dancing in the kindly grey eyes and an appreciative chuckle to preface his next remark:

"D'ye mind that man Bryan over there?"

The Star man affirmed that he "minded."

"I'll tell ye a story of yon. Ye see, we have some of the Burns' manuscripts in the cottage and to keep them safe they are kept in a strong case and that again is placed in another glass one. Well, one day a gentleman and his wife and daughter came to look around and seemed to be mighty interested in those papers. He tried to open the case, and when I went over he asked me to get the manuscripts out for him to examine.

'I says, 'No, if you want to see them you'll have to see them the same as other people do.' At that he got quite indignant, and soon left. There was another American in the cottage at the time, and I saw him laughing like to end himself.

"'Do you know who that was,' says he.

"'No, I says, and I disna care.'

"'Why that was William Jennings Bryan, the would-be President.'"

"And what was the manuscript that made Mr. Bryan so curious?" asked the Star.

"'Tam o' Shanter' and 'Queen Mary's Lament' in Burns' own writing."

"You like Canada?" queried the Star, in parting.

"A' weel, ye ken my family (is here. Yes, Toronto's weel enough, but—" and here the gentle eyes grew dim as an Ayrshire mist—"yet, ah lad, there's no place like Scotland after a', ye ken."

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment, Money Back If It Fails

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatment, we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Pills.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Pills are unexcelled, and that they will do all we claim, that we sell them with our own personal guarantee that they shall not cost the user a cent if they should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Pills, for kidney ailments that resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time, they will positively remove all symptoms and effect permanent relief.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Pils, and our generous guarantee should convince the most sceptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Pills at our risk. Price 50c. Sold in this community only at our store. The Rexall Store.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

A dangerous fury blazed in Grell's eyes—the fury of some splendid animal trapped and tormented yet unable to escape from its tormentors. He glared savagely at the superintendent.

"I am shielding no one," he declared.

"You can, of course, make any answer you like. Suppose we go on to another point which perhaps you will have no objection to clearing up. We have Harry Goldenburg's record. We know he had been blackmailing you, and we know that he was your brother, too; sit still. He was your brother, was he not?"

"My half-brother. How did you know that? How did you know he was blackmailing me?" Grell spoke tensely.

"Oh, simply enough. The likeness was one thing, and a hint I got from Ivan that he was a relative confirmed me in my opinion I had already formed by another fact—which I observed when I saw you at Dalehurst—that you had a similar walk. You will remember, I asked you if he was a relative, but you would not answer. The supposition that you were being blackmailed was born out by inquiries made for us by Pinkerton's, which proved that Goldenburg had visited you several times and that he was ever low he might be before. I think it is a fair inference."

"Quite fair." Grell's face was a little drawn, but he spoke quietly. "You are quite correct, Mr. Foyle. As you know so much, there can be little alarm in enlightening you on that part of the story. I take it that you treat it as confidential."

"Unless it becomes necessary to use it for official purposes, as evidence or otherwise," said Thornton before the superintendent could reply. "We cannot give an absolute pledge."

CHAPTER LII.

"Very well; I am content with that." The prisoner nursed his chin in his cupped hands and stared unseeingly at the distempered walls. "It began years ago, on a little farm in New Hampshire. That was my father's place. He died when I was six or seven, and my mother married again. The man was the father of Harry Oldenburg. I was eight years old when Harry was born. Four years later my mother died, and when I was sixteen I ran away from home. You will know something of my career since then; the newspapers have repeated it often enough — office-boy, journalist, traveller, stockbroker, politician. I was still young when I became a fairly well-known man. In the meantime I had not seen nor heard anything of my brother except that he had left the village when my step-father died.

"In Vienna some years ago I became intimate with Lola Rachael—the woman you know as the Princess Petrovska. She was a dancer then and had hosts of admirers among the young men about town. As a matter of plain fact, I believe she was employed by the Russian Government for its own purposes. But of that I was never certain. Anyway she entangled me. And I believe she really had an affection for me. It was during that time that I was a fool to write her letters—which she kept.

"Eventually I went back to the United States. I became a state senator, and became involved in politics. One day I was in my hotel in Washington when I received a visit from my brother Harry Goldenburg. I was in a way glad to see him, although he was practically a stranger. He impressed me favourably—perhaps the fact that we were so alike physically had as much to do with it as his suave ways and gentle manners. Even at the time I believe he was suspected by the police of being an astute swindler. Of that, of course, I was ignorant. He told me a story of a mail order business he had established in Chicago which was doing great things, but which was hampered for lack of capital. Well, to cut te story short, I lent him five thousand dollars. A month later, he wrote to me for two thousand, and got it. A few weeks after that I read of a great fraud engineered in Central America and there was a three-column portrait in the paper of the man at the bottom of it—my brother. That opened my eyes. When next he came to me—he [illegible] the year—I charged him with living by fraud. He laughed in my face and admitted it. When I threatened to call in the police, he merely shrugged his shoulders and asked what I thought of a flaming headline in the press:

"BROTHER OF SENATOR GRELL HELD FOR BIG FRAUDS."

"I could see it all just as he painted it. My political career was very dear to me just then. Such a thing would have killed it. I knew if I exposed him he was capable of carrying out his threat. However, I told him to get out of the place before I threw him out of the window. He could see I was losing my temper and took a little pistol from his pocket—a Derringer.

"'I have a number of letters which you sent to a lady in Vienna,' he said. 'I know many newspapers which would offer me a good price for 'em.'

"I think it was perhaps fortunate for me that he held a pistol—or I might have done something I should afterwards have regretted. He flung a letter face upwards on the table. It was one of those I had written to Lola Rachael. If he had the rest of the correspondence—and he swort that he had—it would have been deadly in the hands of an unscrupulous political opponent. As you know, electioneering in the States is rather different from what it is here. I was fool enough to pay him money on his promise to suppress them. He would not sell them outright."

"That was the beginning. After that I never had a secure moment unless I was away on an exploring expedition. The moment I reappeared in civilisation my brother would seek me out. He was cunning enough to press me only to the verge of endurance. He could judge exactly how much I would stand. At last, however, I resolved not to yield another penny to his extortions. I cut loose from all my affairs in the United States and came to England. I thought I could fight him when I had reduced the stakes. I found after all that I had increased them, for I met Eileen—Lady Eileen Meredith."

He passed. Neither of his two hearers said anything. An injudicious remark might break the thread of his thoughts.

"When I became engaged to her," Grell resumed, "I knew that it would not be long before Goldenburg would see his chance. I set to work to find Lola, and discovered her as the Princess Petrovska. Then for the first time I learned that she had married Goldenburg—but she admitted that any affection she held for him had long since faded. They had parted a few weeks after the marriage—which they both seemed to regard somewhat cynically—and she had resumed her first husband's name. She admitted that she had helped him to blackmail me, but apparently she herself had handled little enough of the loot. She was vicious enough about it. I have her a cheque and induced her to come to London. I had it in mind to stop this blackmail before I was married.

"As I expected, Goldenburg was not long in scenting profit. He descended on me ravenously. I told him that I would pay him ten thousand pounds if he would put all the letters he possessed in my hands but that I would not otherwise buy his silence. He could see that I was in earnest, and asked for time to consider. I gave him till the night before my wedding. I said nothing of the Princess Petrovska. I knew that they would meet. One cannot be too scrupulous in dealing with a scoundrel, and she had her instructions—to steal the letters from him if necessary, while pretending that she was only anxious to join forces with him in looting me.

"But all her efforts went for nothing. He recognised the value of her co-operation in the circumstances, but would give her no hint of the place where he had concealed the letters. Time drew on. You will know enough of her to recognise Lola as a clever, resolute woman. She made up her mind to accompany Goldenburg to his appointment with me as a last resort. It was to keep that appointment that I left Ralph Fairfield at the club the night before the wedding—the night of the murder."

He breathed heavily. Thornton picked up a piece of paper and crumbled it nervously between his lean hands. Foyle, eager and alert, was leaning forward, anxious not to miss a word. A great deal of what had been obscure was being cleared up. But so far nothing that Grell had said but could be interpreted as a motive—and a singularly strong one—which might in other circumstances weave a hangman's rope about his own neck.

"You did not want any one to know that you were absent from the club," remarked Foyle. "Why?"

"That was merely a matter of precaution. I wanted my interview with Goldenburg to be secret. I had given Goldenburg a note which would ensure his being shown to my study and I was purposely a bit late for the appointment. I wanted to give the Princess Petrovska all the opportunities possible. But when I reached there it was clear to me that she had failed. He had not brought the letters with him. I got rid of the woman, and Goldenburg and I quarrelled. Then it was that I killed him."

"And what of the other woman?" asked the superintendent.

"What other woman?"

"The veiled woman who was shown up to you by Ivan."

"There was no other woman," said Grell, his lips tightening. "I have told you as much as I intend to."

"Just as you like. I believe you have told the truth up to a point, Mr. Grell. It is fair to assume that a blackmailer of Goldenburg's calibre would have taken precautions lest you should fail to comply with his demands. Doesn't it appear a fair assumption that he might have taken steps to arrange the presence of the person most interested, next to yourself? He probably never mentioned that he had done so until it was too late for you to stop her. I mean Lady Eileen Meredith."

The table crashed to the floor as Grell, the last remnants of his self-restraint gone, leapt to his feet. Sir Hilary Thornton sprang between the two men. Foyle also had risen, and though his face was impassive the blue eyes were sparkling and his fists were clenched.

"You liar!" raved Grell. "How dare you bring her name into it!"

"This excitement will not advance matters," said Foyle placidly. "Sit down for a little, Mr. Grell. You cannot prevent the inevitable."

Had Heart Trouble
FOR YEARS.
Weighed 87 Lbs.
Now Weighs 138 Lbs.

Miss Beatrice Lougheed, Staples, Ont., writes: "I feel it my duty to tell you what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have done for me. I had heart trouble for quite a few years. I doctored for it, and altogether my bill amounted to $400, and still no cure. One day when very sick I was lying on a couch close to where some almanacs were hanging. I took one down, and was reading about what Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills cured, and thought I would try them. I got six boxes to start with; have only taken three boxes and I never felt as well in my life as I do now. I only weighed 87 pounds when I started to take them, and now I weigh 138 pounds. I hope all poor sufferers will be benefitted by them as I have been."

Wherever there is any weakness of the heart, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will strengthen it and build up a strong healthy system.

Price, 50 cents per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price, by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Late Mr. Rolland.

One of the most widely known and most highly respected citiens of the Village of Omemee, in the person of Samuel Rolland, passed to his eternal reward on Monday, April the 12th, at the age of 81 years.

The deceased was engaged in the shoe business on King Street for the past 45 years, or since his coming to the village from his home in England.

Probably few men had the host of friends Mr. Rolland possessed, and his good qualities remain as a monument to his memory. In religion he was a member of the Methodist church, and in politics a strong supporter of the cause of Conservatism. He is survived by his sorrowing wife, two sons, Mr. Samuel Rolland, a large land owner in one of the western provinces, and Rev. Edward Rolland, Methodist clergyman at Greenbank, Ont.; also two daughters.

The funeral took place on Wednesday to the Emily cemetery, followed by a large concourse of citizens and friends.

Writes and Reads Chinese and Speaks Japanese

Winifred and Her Class in the Shaw School

Winifred Sackville Stoner Jr. With Her Mother, Mrs. W. S. Stoner.

By Martha E. Coman.

New York, Saturday.

AND still the wonder grows, puzzling educators everywhere, that the small head of little Miss Winifred Sackville Stoner, Jr., aged twelve years, can carry all it knows. For this knowledge includes Japanese, Latin, Italian, French, German, Spanish, Esperanto and English—eight languages which the child speaks fluently—and nine others, including Chinese, which she can write, read and recite in, and a more than superficial acquaintance with astronomy, physiology, geometry and various other "ologies" found in the college curriculum.

The adjective "small" is used merely because the owner of this well stocked head is so much a child. For Winifred, now stopping in New York, is normal physically if her mental attainments are extraordinary, though her mother, Mrs. Winifred Sackville Stoner, declares that the daughter, who successfully passed her college entrance examinations at the age of nine years, is just a healthy, happy, normal child, properly educated.

By that Mrs. Stoner means according to the natural method which she has come to New York to explain to and interest other mothers in so that they may help to educate their children and incidentally brighten up their own minds. In this educational campaign the mother will be ably assisted by the junior member of the family, who delivers Cicero's orations in the original when she isn't playing ball, dancing, having a game of chess or otherwise amusing herself. Or she will write a jingle for you in Chinese, tell you the history of the world in Esperanto or teach a class of children how to read and write in ten days.

If you didn't know of Winifred's remarkable mental accomplishments and you saw her playing in the park with other little girls and boys—probably it would be with boys, because she prefers them as playmates and likes their rough and tumble sports—you would think her just like any other little girl. She is unusually large for her age and here she displays a truly feminine characteristic—she is a bit sensitive about her weight, which is 129½ pounds. She has the reddest cheeks of any little girl who ever came to New York. "That's because we both take cold plunges," Mrs. Stoner explained. "Winifred and I both like the cold water."

They were entertaining callers in their apartment in the Plaza Hotel, where they have rooms high up and overlooking Central Park. In a bookcase near the window was a row of volumes representing the work of little Miss Stoner. At the age of five she published her first book and has since added twenty-nine volumes to her list of literary efforts, one having been published secretly for her mother's birthday present.

She has translated her mother's book on natural education into French and was the first person, according to Mrs. Stoner, to give the Mother Goose jingles to little girls and boys of numerous other countries. She has translated it into Esperanto, which language she has mastered so perfectly that she has received medals from practically all the European rulers. Last winter she conducted a class in Esperanto for older persons attending the Carnegie Institute, in Pittsburg.

"Tell us how you learned physiology," Mrs. Stoner said.

"Jingles," replied the girl. "I learn everything in jingles. They stick, you know.

"Eight and twenty bones, 'tis said,
Are located in my head.
In my trunk are fifty-four,
That I add to my bone store,
While my limbs have plenty more—
Full one hundred twenty-four.

"That's the first of the ten verses of the jingle on physiology," Mrs. Stoner explained. "We study everything in jingles. A child remembers what she learns that way. You know yourself that when you want to find out how many days there are in the month of September you repeat the little rule beginning, 'Thirty days has September,' and then you know.

"Winifred wrote this 'Bony Song' five years ago just to help her remember all the bones in her body. And she never forgets. She has written a set of verses on the kings of England, another on the history of the world, and ever so many other subjects which children usually find so hard to learn in school."

This nutshell knowledge is the secret of Winifred's cleverness.

"How did you learn to read and write?" the reporter asked the romping youngster, who was restless under the showing off process.

"On the typewriter," was the quick reply. "First I learned to say the name Peter; then I picked out the letters to make the name on the typewriter. I found the ones that matched the letters in the book, and it was easy after that."

When Winifred junior was two weeks old she learned to play ball with a soft sphere suspended above her feet. She kicked at this until she learned how to hit it. "She knew how to play football then," her mother said. "Then we taught her to throw. Winifred can throw a ball just like a boy, and both of us are extremely proud of her athletic accomplishments.

"She can row, fence, swim, skate, box, ride, cook, crochet, knit, sew and play chess. We have reared her in the way we think is best for her physical development. I have never worn a corset in my life and Winifred will never be harnessed into one. Of course, she doesn't want to." Mrs. Stoner has a small, splendid figure, which she attributes to the perfect freedom she has allowed her body. Winifred is as tall as her mother and promises to develop into a fine and beautiful woman.

Ever since she could read this child phenomenon has kept a book in which she has pasted all sorts of information. Whenever she wants to find the answer to a riddle she appeals to this book.

And what does this small girl do for mental recreation? Before she came here she played with and absorbed knowledge from Professor Raymond Gros, head of the School of Languages. When they were playing tag they talked in French, and alternating with this educator was a Japanese friend, Dr. M. W. Kurinker, who played chess three times a week with Winifred junior and chatted with her in his native tongue.

"But doesn't she have any time to play with children? Don't they amuse her?"

"Listen," was Mrs. Stoner's reply. And from the inner room came a series of childish screams, and a peep inside showed the learned girl of twelve pummelling her small boy playmate.

In a "votes for women" speech delivered by this youthful advocate of the ballot Winifred burst into verse, beginning

"Ma can sew and ma can bake;
Every sort of thing can make
Out of thread and wool and yarns.
And, besides, 'tis she who darns
All the rents in all our clothes,
And the holes made by our toes;
But our ma she cannot vote
Any more than Bill, our goat."

Winifred junior's daily routine is that of a healthy, normal child, one with an excellent appetite. She rises at half-past eight o'clock, takes a cold bath and rub and breakfasts at nine. Usually this consists of beefsteak, baked potato and any other nourishment the child desires.

She works, writes letters, reads and then goes marketing with her mother. At noon she has luncheon, and she fills in the afternoon with a little play and some study. She has dinner at the hour usual in most families, and after games and conversation she goes to bed. "And she wants to be tucked in just like any other little girl," Mrs. Stoner hastened to add, "for Winifred has been reared on love and she must have just as much affection and attention every day.

"I don't altogether approve of her hearty meals, especially the breakfasts, but her father insists on letting her have them."

And the natural education system which has been responsible for the remarkable knowledge of this twelve-year-old girl, what about that?

Therein lies her secret—the one Mrs. Stoner has come to New York to share with other mothers, for she believes absolutely that every mother can be her child's best teacher if she goes about it in the right way, and here are Mrs. Stoner's ten commandments of natural education:—

Thou shalt never say "don't" to thy child.

Thou shalt never say "must" to thy child.

Thou shalt always answer thy child's questions.

Thou shalt not tease thy child.

"Don't imagine that Winifred is an angel," Mrs. Stoner hastened to say after repeating the Ten Commandments. "She isn't at all. In fact, she would be a very naughty little girl if we did not try hard to develop her. Sometimes she and I have very violent wrestling matches, but these are just for fun. She likes nothing better—not even teaching Esperanto or playing a Japanese game—than punching the 'stuffing' out of some boy, as she puts it. You see, she is a regular tomboy. But that does not hurt her in the least."

"I should say not," volunteered the child in question. "I like being a tomboy, and I'd rather play with boys any time than with girls. Boys can do lots more things than girls, can't they?"

And the mother had to admit that, generally speaking, boys can.

"The trouble with mothers is they aren't polite to their children," Mrs. Stoner said. "Politeness goes a long way with little folk. You say to a child, 'Go get that ball of yarn,' and Johnny will go, but he doesn't move with joy and alacrity, and if he can possibly get out of doing it he will. But you say in a gentle voice, such as you would use to a guest to whom you were trying to be very nice, 'Johnny, please go and get me that ball of yarn,' and Johnny goes and fetches it properly. You get back exactly what you give in this world.

"If you rear your little ones in an atmosphere of giggle you get plenty of sunniness and happiness in your home, but try bringing up your children in an atmosphere of gloom and see how it will affect them.

"All there is in education is self-control and the joy of service. You know how you have to train even a baby not to scream but to use self-control, and when you can teach that baby how to perform services with joy you have mastered the very foundation of natural education.

"We can all learn from Mother Tabby as to nature's intended first teacher of the young. I believe Mother Tabby never allows any grandmothers, cousins, aunts or hirelings to give her offspring their first lessons. She insists upon being their teacher and, moreover, she never plays aimlessly, but always to a purpose. When she teaches her kittens to catch hold of their tails she is training their muscles so that when they reach the cathood state they can earn their own livelihood by catching rats and mice.

"I am working for higher pay for teachers, fewer pupils for each teacher and shorter hours. I want the teachers to be able to smile when they have finished their day's work. That's why both Winifred and I want the vote. The government spends $3,000,000 a year on pigs, for investigating diseases, &c., and only $30,000 a year on its children. When women have the ballot they will spend the $3,000,000 on the children and the $30,000 on pigs.

"My new and ideal school will have ten pupils in each classroom where children have to go to school instead of being taught at home by their mothers. Just recollect that the mother has the child in her care 168 hours a week and the teacher 30. At the child brought up by its mother only is a namby-pamby creature. The father's influence is needed.

"Before you go do let me tell you something more about Winifred—'Cherie,' as she is called at home," cried the enthusiastic mother, following me to the door. "She is the head of the International Junior Peace League and has written a poem on peace. She wrote a book of twenty thousand words in two days; she has beaten every chess champion she has ever played with but one; when she was four years old she composed a set of verses on whooping cough, from which malady she had just recovered; she dances very nicely, plays the violin, mandolin, guitar and piano; she could recite one thousand classical poems when she was five years old; can repeat numerous Latin orations of great length, and she has been my secretary, writing all my letters, since she was six years old.

"This is the age of the child, isn't it? We have had the age of the man, then came the age of the woman, and now it is the age of the child."

RECIPE TO CLEAR A PIMPLY SKIN

Pimples are Impurities Seeking an Outlet Through Skin Pores.

Pimples, sores and boils usually result from toxins, poisons and impurities which are generated in the bowels and then absorbed into the blood through the very ducts which should absorb only nourishment to sustain the body.

It is the function of the kidneys to filter impurities from the blood and cast them out in the form of urine, but in many instances the bowels create more toxins and impurities than the kidneys can eliminate, then the blood uses the skin pores as the next best means of getting rid of these impurities which often break out all over the skin in the form of pimples.

The surest way to clear the skin of these eruptions, says a noted authority is to get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of hot water each morning before breakfast for one week. This will prevent the formation of toxins in the bowels. It also stimulates the kidneys to normal activity, thus coaxing them to filter the blood of impurities and clearing the skin of pimples.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent drink which usually makes pimples disappear; cleanses the blood and is excellent for the kidneys as well.

WEDDED LIFE WAS REIGN OF TERROR

Husband in Court Scorns Return Home Unless Judge Goes Also

CHICAGO, April 20.— Thirty-nine years ago James W. Dixon married. When arraigned in the Court of Domestic Relations on a charge of abandonment he declared he had spent "thirty-nine years in terror."

"Is there no chance for you to go back to your wife?" asked Judge Sabath.

"Yes, if you will sleep in the house, protect my life and give me a chance to sleep," said Dixon.

"She threatened to commit suicide and leave a note saying I killed her, so I would be convicted of murder.

She pulled a knife on me and I had to grab a pillow to keep from being killed. She keeps a revolver in the house.

"She is a spiritualist and wishes to learn to tell fortunes. When I object she flies into a tantrum."

"I admire his imagination," commented Mrs. Dixon.

The judge sent them into his chambers to talk it over. They sat in opposite corners and would not speak a word. Then the judge ordered each of them to sign a $500 peace bond.

"This is your new marriage certificate — start all over again," he advised, and the Dixons went home. Dixon is sixty-eight years old. His wife is seventy-one.

This Frees Your Skin From Hair or Fuzz

(Toilet Tips)

The method here suggested for the removal of superfluous hair is quick and certain and unless the growth is extremely stubborn, a single application does the work. Make a stiff paste with some powdered delatone and water; apply this to the hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub it off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. To avoid disappointment, be sure your druggist sells you delatone.

Regular Meeting of the Norwood Village Council

Lacrosse Team Has Been Organized For the Season—Results of Easter Examinations in the High School

NORWOOD, April 20.—The regular monthly meeting of the Village Council was held on Wednesday evening, April 7th.

Those present were: Reeve Squire and Councillors T. Morrison, S. Hendren, W. Portway and Clerk Laing.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The following accounts were then presented and ordered to be paid: H. Carrol, work, $2.70; Wm. Taylor, work, $2.70; Norwood Register, work, $17.40.

A communication was received from a New York Theatrical Company, which wished to secure the hall for three nights in October. As the date fell on the Norwood Fair Day, it was decided not to consider the application, as the Council hold an annual entertainment at that time.

Mr. John Baskin addressed the Council in reference to a blacksmith shop he had erected on Ridge Street, and which he was advised he would have to secure a permit and make the building fireproof, as it is in the restricted area designed in the Fire Limit By-law.

The matter of distributing the auditors' report was then taken up, and Reginald Portway was given the contract for this work at 50 cts.

Mr. W. J. McLaughlin asked the Council if they were going to enforce the Transient Traders' By-law in reference to new blacksmithing business being opened up. Quite a discussion took place, in which the by-law was produced and read over. The point was brought up as to whether a man's labour is merchandise or not. The Council concluded it was, and in the case of a blacksmith that he bought and sold goods like other business men.

Councillor Portway reminded the Council that he did not see why they did not enforce the by-law last summer, when a Jew was in the village buying and selling junk.

It was finally decided to obtain advice from Mr. Peck, Peterborough.

Mr. Gee Andrews was home last week from Toronto.

Vigilance the Price of a Good Complexion

To retain the natural beauty of the skin only proper care and treatment is needed. Our skins are naturally clear and healthy, but the demands of everyday life and unnatural living quickly spoil their freshness and beauty. So necessary is this care that no woman can afford to neglect it. The Nyal people have just issued a new booklet, "Your Complexion," which contains most useful and interesting information on how to care for the complexion in such a way that its beauty and freshness will be preserved for many years. It also includes directions for best methods of massage. The constant use of some good preparation, such as Nyal's Face Cream, is absolutely necessary to keep the skin really clean and healthy. It is a nourishing, oxygenated, greaseless skin-food which leaves no shine. Get a 25c or 50c jar and rub it gently into the skin. See how quickly it is absorbed, leaving the skin pleasantly refreshed and delicately fragrant. 1208

All Nyal preparations are justly famous, and none more so than Nyal's Face Cream, which we unhesitatingly recommend. Call or telephone us for your copy of this book, which contains most valuable information.

The funeral took place on Wednesday afternoon to the Norwood Cemetery.

WHEN FRAMING PICTURES.

A good rule to remember in framing pictures is that "a frame should be part of the picture"; it should be of it, but never in evidence. The frame either adds to or spoils the effect of the picture. It is the simple frame or plain mouldings that are generally the most satisfactory. Very few pictures are fromed with mats and when they are advisable they should be of a somewhat lighter tone than the frame's colour—the exceptions where a white mat is desirable are few and far between.

Gilt frames were originally used to frame richly-coloured oil paintings hung in dim cathedrals. Later they were used in large galleries in rich surroundings, where some uniform method of framing must be adopted that one picture be prevented from destroying the effect of its neighbour, and a nice balance obtained. The gold frame was used as a compromise Yet the excessively ornamented frames in gilt are to be avoided, for they detract from the picture and direct the eye away from its subject.

The full beauty of a picture is usually brought out by simple, dignified framing. Not only are the details of the picture more fully enjoyed, but its perspective is brought out by a simple frame. Bear in mind that the moment a frame is noticeable there is something wrong with it.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

Timely Comments and Comparison of Prices

"Betty Botter bought some butter,
But, she said, this butter's bitter;
If I put it in my batter,
It will make my batter bitter.
But a bit of better butter
Will but make my batter better.
So she bought a bit of butter
Better than the bitter butter
And made her bitter batter better."

Butter and eggs were the chief factor of the market last Saturday. The hens are getting down to business in proper style. Storing has commenced and importations from across the line have stopped, which should have a tendency to keep the price up. Manitoba farmers are getting from 15c to 16c a doz. for their eggs, and may shortly become competitors on the Ontario market.

Bringing butter to the market has its disadvantages, especially to the farmer's wife, who manufactures an A No. 1 article. If she stands beside a woman with an inferior grade of butter, her only consolation is that she may empty her basket a few minutes sooner than her neighbour, but the neighbour is able eventually to get the high price.

A butter tester would certainly have his troubles, for would not every woman think her own butter A No. 1? The only solution that presents itself would be as follows: Let every woman who thinks she is not getting as much as she should, seek out two or three discriminating householders who would become her regular customers, and take her total output. A good butter maker is a rarity, and it should not be difficult for her to dispose of her wares in the manner suggested, at prices satisfactory to herself; it might also provide a ready market for her eggs and chickens.

It is becoming quite the fashion for city women to attend market now, for the purpose of disposing of home-made cooking, such as pies, tarts, cakes and biscuits, with an occasional offering of preserves and catsup. They are not doing it for the benefit of their own pockets (like their sisters from the country) — Oh, no, what a horrible idea!—but they are making money for the churches they represent. For example, last Saturday the "Cheerful Workers' Bible Class" of St. James' Methodist Church served ice cream and cake to all who produced the coin.

The women of Park Street Baptist Church sold pies, cakes, biscuits, preserves, pickles and catsup, while the members of Mr. Hone's Bible Class of the George Street Methodist Sunday School had a table in the centre of the market on which they exhibited samples of their culinary art, even home-made bread.

Judging by the rapidity with which these goods disappeared, there must have been a lot of city women who either had a lapse of memory on Friday—baking day—or were planning a big afternoon at the picture show, instead of smoothing out the creases in their bake boards.

Maple syrup will soon be a picture of memory for this season. The output has been small compared with other years.

The Canadian Red Cross Society have inaugurated a scheme for providing our wounded Canadian soldiers with fresh maple syrup and maple sugar, through the Grimm Co., of Montreal. The request is that each grower might supply a gallon of syrup or some sugar and express it, without cost to himself, to the Grimm Co. Just imagine if you were in the same position how you would like to have a taste of syrup from "home."

Grains, Hay.

| | |
|---|---|
| Wheat, per bushel | $1.40 |
| Barley | .70 to .80 |
| Oats | .60 to .65 |
| Peas | $2.15 |
| Shorts, ton | $29.00 |
| Bran | $28.00 |
| Baled hay | $20 to $22 |
| Loose hay | $24.00 |
| Straw | $13.00 |

A report covering the most of Ontario says that fall wheat has come through the winter well, and has as far come through the freezing and thawing process of spring in fine shape. The damage will not exceed five per cent. A large increase in acreage is also reported.

Flour has gone up 10c a hundred.

Dairy and Poultry.

| | |
|---|---|
| Butter, dairy, per lb. | 33c to 34c |
| Butter, creamery | 36c |
| Flour, cwt. | $4.35 |
| Cheese | 20 to .22 |
| Eggs, new laid, doz. | 18c |
| Turkeys, lb. | 25c |
| Geese | 18c |
| Ducks, lb. | 20c |
| Chickens, per pr. | $1.20 to $1.60 |
| Cream, qt. | 35c |

Fruit and Vegetables.

| | |
|---|---|
| Apples, per bbl. | $1.00 to $1.50 |
| Potatoes, per bag | 50c to 55c |
| Onions, peck | 30c |
| Onions, white pickling, qt. | 15c |
| White beans, qt. | 10c |
| Carrots, peck | 15c. |
| Turnips | 10c |
| Parsnips | 10c. |
| Beets, peck | 15c. |
| Celery, head | 5c to 10c |
| Cabbage, head | 5c to 10c |

New Brunswick is continuing to supply the Ontario market with potatoes. Many Ontario farmers prefer to feed their potatoes rather than sell them at the prevailing low prices.

Meats and Hogs.

| | |
|---|---|
| Bacon, per lb., | 25c to 28c |
| Ham | 25c |
| Cooked hams | 35c |
| Pork | 12 to .13 |
| Spare ribs | 12c |
| Lamb | 23c. |
| Veal | 20c-23c |
| Sirloin steak | 25c |
| Round steak | 22c |
| Live hogs, cwt. | $8.75 |
| Small pigs, cwt. | $8.25 |

Owing to low prices and high cost of feed, the general tendency seems to be to reduce the number of hogs raised, though there are some men who believe that in the long run best results are obtained by a steady-going method of farming, which cuts out plunging into one thing and then into another.

Wool and Hides.

| | |
|---|---|
| Wool (No market) | |
| Sheep skins, each | $1.00 to $1.75 |
| Calf skins, lb. | 12c to 13c |

BUSY SESSION OF THE SMITH COUNCIL

The members of the Municipal Council of the Township of Smith met in the County Council Chamber, on Tuesday, April 6th, at 10 o'clock. All the members were present with Reeve McKee in the chair. The minutes of the last two meetings were read and confirmed.

A communication was received from the Colonization Road Department, stating that on account of the money stringency the Township would not receive a grant this year.

Moved by Councillor Nichols, seconded by Deputy Reeve Jobe, that Councillor Moore and the Clerk wait on the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, and also the local members, to try and secure at least part of the grant.—Carried.

Mr. J. C. McConkey addressed the Council and requested a grant for certain portions of his road division. The matter was left over until the annual spring inspection of roads.

Mr. N. G. Bell of Bridgenorth asked the Council to bear part of the expense of repairing his waggon, which was broken on the East Communication Road on account of the bad condition of the road. No action taken.

Moved by Councillor Moore, seconded by Councillor Nichols that the agreement re Boundary Roads with the City Board of Works, be approved by the Council, namely: That the Chairman of the Board of Works, the City Engineer, together with the Reeve and a member of the Council, be a committee to go over the roads each year and estimate the amount to be expended. The Township undertakes to do the work and the city agrees to pay one-half the cost. In case of any damages arising from negligence each Corporation is equally liable.

The following resolutions were passed:

1. On account of the large expenditures in keeping the roads open during the winter and in order not to increase the Township rate, the Clerk was instructed to have printed notices attached to each road list, stating that the Council would not be accountable for any expenditure unless authorized by a member of the Council.

2. That a special grant of ten dollars be given Mrs. Trew, a widow of Bridgenorth, with a large family of small children, and that the trustees of the Foley Estate be requested to grant a similar amoun.

3. That By-law No. 735, appointing road-masters, fence-viewrs and sheep valuators be passed.

4. That the following accounts be paid: Nicholls Hospital, Mrs. Cruikshanks, $64.00; Norman Bullock, work on road, $4.00; Geo. Miller, timber for bridge, $23.19; David Miller, pay sheet, $37.31; W. A. Payne, work on road, $3.45; Garvin Preston, work on road, $12.75; Hubert Roseboro, work on roads, $12.90; A. G. Shearer, goods Sullivan, $6.22; P. Nicholls, work on road, $1.50; Philip Westlake, work on road, $9.00; Alex. Scott, work on road, $7.00; Geo. Deyell, work on road, $17.25; Bruce Preston, work on road, $23.25; Gordon Fitzgerald, work on road, $9.00; Geo. E. Pearson, work on road, $8.40; Mr. S. Dean, work on road, $21.20; P. T. Udy, goods T. Cullen, Sr., $10.00, Thos. Tyres, work on road, $5.55; R. Denne, goods to Austin, $2.00; St. Joseph's Hospital, per L. Boisvoisin, $56.00; Geo. Cummings, work on road, $4.36 Municpal World, regist. book, $3.75; Fred Heard, work on road, $7.15; R. Stabler, work on road, $2.00; A. J. McWilliams, work on road, $12.25; A. B. # A BRITISH SUBMARINE SUNK SAYS BERLIN

GERMANS MASS FORCES ALONG BELGIAN LINE

Reports From Dutch Sources Say a Drive is to be Launched Against Main New British Army in the North---French War Office Say There is Nothing New to Report.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 22.—The German first line troops are again being massed along the northern front from Soissons to the sea. Advices received to-day from Dutch sources indicate that the Kaiser's general staff is preparing to launch a drive against the main new British army. It is against them that the Kaiser is expected to make his most serious effort. According to the latest advices reaching here the British forces will have [illegible] of them. All of the lines of railway centering in Belgium have been devoted to troop and ammunition movements since the British captured Hill Number 60, dommating the territory about Ypres. These troops have been moved to points where they can strengthen the main German positions, and also be used in attacks against the British-Belgian lines. It is also reported here that included in the eqtipment that has passed south into Belgium, according to reports via Dutch sources, are many heavy Austrian guns mounted on automobile trucks of the sort which proved so effective in the first German advance last August.

LE TEMPS' VIEWS

PARIS, April 22.—Discussing editorially Dr. Dernburg's suggested terms of peace, Le Temps considers it most significant that nearly all of Germany's "apologists" from diplomats to Socialists, have begun to talk peace. It argues that the German rulers realize fully that the game is lost, and are now trying desperately to escape approaching destruction, but says that the United States, like the allies is not deceived. Le Temps considers Dr. Dernburg's "clumsy stratagem" a further instance of the German failure to understand the psychology of the other nations. The article concludes, "Kultur has built an impassable barrier between Germany and the rest of the world. Their monstrous infatuation is the source of all their disillusions."

BERLIN, via wireles to New York, April 22.—The war office announced to-day the repulse of French surprise attacks, accompanied by artillery exchanges, in the western part of the forest of Pretre, north of Hartmannsweilerkopf. Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy, it is stated. The war office also confirms to-day's unofficial reports that the Russians were compelled to evacuate Tarnow because of the heavy gun fire of the Austrians.

BERLIN, via The Hague and London, April 22.—"If this is to be a war of silver bullets, Germany is prepared. Wall Street is and can be with the allies, but Germany will remain unfrightened. The German people have oversubscribed two war loans. In my opinion they stand ready to over-subscribe a third, should a third prove necessary." That is the opinion of financial Germany, as expressed to-day by Dr. Karl Helfferich, secretary of the Imperial Treasury. It reflects the official views of the relations of finance to the war.

"NEWS" FROM BERLIN

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, April 22.—"The pen of the diplomat must not spoil what the sword has so well achieved," was impassionately proclaimed by Counsellor Passache, the Liberal leader and Vice--President of the Reichstag, in discussing suggested peace here to-day. "The land which we have conquered at the cost of so much German blood, our bravest and our best, must never be returned." He said, "We must not stop where we are, but we must progress to the English channel, and capture all of the British strongholds as an earnest endeavour for permanent peace."

Will Divert The Romaine St. Sewer

In the Trunk Sewer Now Under Course of Construction on Park Street.

Messrs. Hunt and McDonald were a deputation that waited upon the Board of Works last evening for the purpose of requesting that a sewer be constructed on that particular street. Mayor Fuller, who was present at the meeting admitted that the people had a grievance that should be remedied as soon as possible. City Engineer Parsons explained a number of engineering difficulties connected with the construction of sewers in that neighbourhood. The construction of the trunk sewer on Park Street would overcome these. He intimated that it was the intention of the city to divert the Romaine Street sewer into the Park Street sewer, which was being put down low enough to meet all future requirements in that neighbourhood. The Board of Works decided to look over the ground at an early date.

Ormond Cheese Factory Purchased

The patrons of the Ormonde cheese factory have organized a joint stock company and purchased the factory from Mr. Youarex for $1500.00. The shares were put at $10 each, and nearly all the stock has been subscribed, and routes let out for the coming season. Mr. Geo. Jackman of Stirling has been engaged as cheesemaker. The following officers were elected:

Pres.—J. Coughlan.

Sec.—W. J. Pickens.

Trustees—Messrs. D. Fife, W. Lynch, J. B. Moore, Wm. Preston, W. Dunlay. The factory is to be put in better shape than heretofore and a greater output assured.—Hastings Star.

CORP. HARRY WARD, 30 Stewart Street, with the 39th Battalion at Belleville. Corp. Ward did very efficient work as orderly room clerk during the organizing of the 57th detachment here. He was employed on the accounting staff of the C.G.E. before enlisting.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY SERVICE.

To-morrow is St. George's day; and as the anniversary of the patron saint of England, derives especial importance from the conditions that exist to-day. St. George—England—is fighting in deadly earnest for the slaying of a greater dragon than the Cappadocian Knight put hors de combat. The celebration of the day in Peterborough this year takes an unique form, a form fitting for the birthday of a saint, a church service at St. John's—to-morrow night at 8 o'clock—which will be attended, of course, by Englishmen; and Canada's share in fighting the battles of England will be represented by the presence of members of the 57th Regiment, which has furnished, directly and indirectly, 400 to the fighting lines. The Lord Bishop of Toronto will preach the special sermon. Always an eloquent preacher his message on this occasion, inspired by the circumstances, will be well worth hearing.

QUICK WORK.

"Yes, we can give you the quickest run to the railway station or anywhere else you want to go by taxicab, motor car, hack, or livery rig. All you have to do is to call 257 or send word to Doc. Robinson's Livery Plant, Charlotte Street. dtf.-76

TO INTERVIEW GENERAL HUGHES

Doctors of Peterboro to Confer With Minister of Militia To day in Regard to Peterboro Base Hospital Scheme.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

A delegation from the local Medical Society will confer with Major-General Sam Hughes this afternoon as the Minister of Militia passes through from Ottawa to Toronto, in regard to the Peterborough Base Hospital, the details of which were announced in last evening's Examiner. The city physicians held another enthusiastic meeting yesterday afternoon and further progress towards perfecting the scheme was made. It is understood that the physicians who do not accompany the hospital to the front will contribute $50 a month towards [illegible] while the lawyers of the city will undertake a similar obligation. It is not possible at the present time to publish a complete list of the local doctors that will go to the front, but there will be eight or nine to go, and the staff will include one of the city dentists. The matter will be taken up with Major-General Hughes this afternoon.

Port Hope Guide—Eight motor lorries and two touring motor cars with one hundred men of the Divisional Ammunition Park, second contingent, arrived in town from Toronto about eight o'clock last evening. Col. Pousette, C.A.S.C. was in command, and Capt. William Mayell, C.A.S.C., was in charge of the arrangements en route. The men took up their quarters in the Park and, although the weather was quite chilly they all appear to enjoy the experience. Large bonfires were kindled and the soldiers' favourite song, "A Long Way to Tipperary," was heard in the "wee small hours." The boys left this morning for Cobourg and will spend the night at Rice Lake.

With 39th Battery.

Kingston, April 20.—A set of boxing gloves has found its way into the "club," as the boys call their barracks here in Kingston. The gloves have been busy, too. How these soldiers fight is a treat. There is sure science with some of them, but mostly it is a real fight. There is no backing up Many hob-nailed boots eliminate foot work. There have been some half dozen knockouts in the last evening; more than you would see at an amateur tournament. You fall in no padded ring, but on a hardwood floor. There is something thrilling, too, in facing a man to get him; to smash him to a standstill. To take a rain of heavy blows with a smile, and fight back with your head reeling until your mind gives out, or you fall in a heap with your boots on, or until your man stops first, and you are still going. But this primitive and glorious sport was stopped suddenly to-day

A Painful Experience.

Inoculation was the agent. Tuesday afternoon the half of the battery lined up to have the long steel needle injected, bearing its little jet of poison. To-night there is a band of men hanging around with crippled arms, as sore as a toothache and as stiff as an examination. To-

Show Him That He's Not Forgotten

Sergt. Peter Victor, the first Peterborough boy to be wounded in the trenches, is lying very ill in the Hampstead Military Hospital, London, with his leg badly torn. He will be there for a long time, is he informs his mother in a pathetic letter which is reproduced in to-day's Examiner, and he adds: "I am the only one in the Hospital who has no visitors." Think of it, thousands of miles away from his mother and his home folk, he has no one to come and see him. Here is a chance for Peterborough people to do something to show him that the citizens of the city he represents are not forgetting him.

How many of his friends, his comrades in the 57th Regiment, and citizens generally, will write him a letter? There can't be too many, pour an avalanche of missives into that London Hospital. You may not have known him personally. Write any way and tell him you are sorry to learn of his condition. And perhaps some little gifts of cigarettes. Chocolate might be appreciated. Here is a chance for the Kitchener League and the other organizations who have done much good work. Show Peter Victor that Peterborough is proud of him.

His address is:

Sergt. Peter Victor,
Hampstead Military Hospital,
London, N. W., England.

SAY SUBMARINE RAID ON HELIGOLAND FAILED

German Admiralty Reports That One British Submarine Was Sunk by German Destroyers and That Others Were Fired Upon and Damaged.

Special Cable to The Examiner:

BERLIN, via The Hague, April 22.—The admiralty to-day issued a statement announcing that one British submarine was sunk by German destroyers when it essayed a raid into Heligoland bight. Other hostile submarines were fired at and are believed to have been seriously damaged. For several days it was reported that British submarines have been active at several points, but their efforts to reach the German naval bases have been checked with no damage to German warships.

TURKS ENTRENCHED

ATHENS, April 22.—The Turks have entrenched themselves very strongly along the coast of the Gulf of Saros, from a point near Enos, on the mainland, with particularly formidable works opposite Bulair, "Peninsula of Gallipoli." The allied fleet yesterday bombarded the Turkish encampments near Bulair, the position of which had previously been indicated by the aviators. A British torpedo boat bombarded the Turkish camp at Katophanagia, near Smyrna. A Greek sailing ship was sunk by a mine in the Agean sea, with the Captain and all the crew.

BRITISH MORALE SUPERIOR

LONDON, April 22.—To-day's contribution to the account of events at the front makes the claim that the morale of the British troops is now much superior to that of the enemy, which has been noticeably weakened since the Neuve Chappelle fighting. Successes in this fighting is accepted as the commencement of the spring and summer's work, and resulted in a noticeable dropping off in the number of the British sick. Troops are now supplied with many things to take the minds of the men off the serious side of this war. Chief of these is a bathing system, which keeps down the vermin. Big rest depots are established at which band concerts, competitions, moving pictures, vaudeville, and boxing matches divert the men. In addition thousands of mouth organs and penny whistles have been distributed and the soldiers are encouraged to stage foot ball matches in their rest periods. The beneficial results is very marked.

OTTAWA, April 22.—A cable received at the Militia Dept. to-day denies the report of the death in France of Nurse Richardson of the first Canadian contingent. The cable states that Nurse Richardson has been ill but is recovering.

PARIS, April 22.—Whether because of the tightening of the censorship lines or the failure of the commanders at the front to report, there is again an utter absence of any real news from the allied front. This afternoon's official communique declared that the general situation was unchanged and that there was nothing new to report.

BIG FEATURE WEEK PLANNED BY MERCHANTS FOR VISITING SHOPPERS

Will Refund Return Fare to Every Visitor on a Basis Proportionate to Amount of Purchases--They Will Offer Special Buying Attractions

Peterborough merchants are planning a special shopping event for out-of-town purchasers, the first announcement of which has just been made. During the entire week previous to May 24th they will pay the fare, both ways, of every visiting buyer who takes advantage of the offer the merchants specially extend to buyers coming from points outside the city. The idea has just been broached, and further details will be made public as the big shopping week approaches. A schedule of fares and the amount of purchases necessary to secure the proposed refund, will be made known shortly together with a list of all the merchants participating in the proposed shopping event.

The idea seems to have a better promise than Dollar Day which proved most satisfactory to the general public. At the same time Peterborough is the logical and geographical centre of a large and prosperous countryside, which will appreciate additional progressive methods of merchandising. Our neighbours in the country and nearby towns realize that the more goods that can be turned over in this city the closer the buying and the greater the financial benefit to the purchaser.

The present proposal offers to these consumers a chance to shop on the same basis as local buyers. That is their fares or part of them, according to the value of good bought, will be refunded. Hence it will cost them little to come to Peterborough that week in May, and they will find here that merchants will have most attractive offers in all lines of goods. Peterborough's stores can compete with the metropolitan departmental stores, and, in addition, when you buy in Peterborough you see the goods before you purchase them.

"Fare Day" should bring this fact home to those who are not aware of it. The success the merchants have individually attained in their respective businesses and the gratifying results from Dollar Day are an assurance that this new venture will surpass all previous united efforts to attract shoppers to Peterborough.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL.

Good old bucolic Tusser, more than three hundred years ago, launched upon the world a bit of proverbial wisdom, that should appeal to our city fathers to-day—"safe bind safe find." There seems to be need of the City Council being wide-awake in regard to the arrangements with the Provincial Board of Health in connection with our sewage disposal plant, estimated to cost anything from $[illegible] to $300,000. When we are investing so considerable a sum of money, we should be sure, at least, that it should be an investment, and not an instalment of continued payment; that the civic authorities should take, and will take, every possible precaution to see that something as near as possible to finality will be secured.

The City of Berlin, Ontario, was [illegible], on the recommendation, or orders, of the Provincial Government's expert, the sum of $110,000, to construct a sewage disposal plant. Now the city will have to begin again. The plant then decided upon as perfect after two years' investigation, has been virtually condemned, and the city will have to incur considerable additional expenditure. The City of Berlin has received an ultimatum from Dr. McCullough, the inspector of the Provincial Board of Health, giving the city till November 10th, to abate the nuisances complained of by farmers and others living in the vicinity of the sewage disposal plant. When the now confirmed sewage disposal plant of Berlin was finished it was pronounced one of the completest plants on the continent, and the Government contributed $4,000 to the cost of construction. It appears that Berlin itself is to blame for the trouble that now faces it. The civic authorities, it is said, have neglected to provide for disposal of the increased amount of sewage created by numerous new industries, and the growth of the city.

Here is evidence that the greatest care must be exercised in the adoption of the plans. If the plans approved by the city authorities, and now under judgment of the Provincial Board of Health, do not provide for reasonable permanence, and reasonable duration of efficiency, even if approved by the Provincial authorities, the plans are to that extent imperfect and undesirable. The responsibility of this rests to some extent upon the city; but as the Provincial authorities have the power of deciding; and dictating to the city what it shall do, the chief responsibility rests upon the Provincial authorities. In the connection it seems only fair that the Province should give the city a guarantee that the plant will be effective for a defined number of years, without creating nuisances to the neighbourhood.

In the event of failure in effectiveness of the plant, built virtually at the order of the Government, it does not seem unreasonable to demand that in case of unequal or extensive repairs, the Government should bear a large proportion of the expense. It would evidently be unfair to penalize the city that acts in good faith upon the instruments as to plans, of the Provincial Board of Health.

If the growth of the city demands extension of the system, we can regard such a necessity with complacency; but it does not seem too much to expect that a plant will be ordered to be constructed that will serve the purposes of at least a generation. Then posterity and not we, will have to provide the required extensions; and if this is made necessary by increase of population, there will be larger ability to bear the cost. In any event it seems that the City Council should make as tight a bargain as possible, in order to safeguard the city, and insure that the system of sewage disposal prescribed by the Provincial Board of Health, and made compulsory to the city, shall be adequate for its purposes, and of a guaranteed efficient permanency. If possible there should be secured an undertaking on the part of the province to bear a share of the expense of reconstruction, in case the plant built according to the plans it approves should have to be replaced, except for any other reasonable and natural growth of population. Safe-bind; safe find, is a good motto; and we can be sure that the City Council will take every possible precaution to see that the interest of the city is efficiently and adequately safeguarded. We can't very well afford to spend $300,000 once; not to speak of spending as much every few years.

TAXATION AND REVENUE.

Higher taxation doesn't always bring larger revenue. The miscalled "war tax" stamp increase, promises to be one instance of this. We have had imposed a postal rate higher than that of the United States; and not Canadian postal revenue, but that of the United States will get some of the benefit. Canadian firms, on account of the increased "war tax" stamp, are having their business circulars printed in the United States, and mailed from the United States post offices, at the 2-cent rate, to Canadian addresses, not only depriving Canada of the additional revenue, but depriving Canadian printing establishments, and Canadian printers, of business and work. More than that; increasing taxation doesn't bring more revenue, especially in the matter of postage rates. This has been proven. In 1898-99, the Laurier Government reduced the rate of letter postage, from three to two cents. Under previous Conservative rule there was with a three-cent postal rate an average yearly deficit in postal revenue of $700,000. Under the Liberal postal reduction from three to two cents, and on British letters, from five to two cents, within two years—after the new plan got working—there was a gain in revenue enough to wipe out the deficit of $700,000, and to balance revenue and expenditure. And more than that. There was a steady annual surplus of postal revenue over expenditure, till in the last year of Laurier administration, there was a surplus, for that year, of more than a million—$1,192,000. This surplus under a reduced postal rate was either due to a low postal rate increasing correspondence and, therefore, revenue, or to careful administration of the national postal business. The surplus may have been due a little to both; for with the same postal rate, the postal surplus of over a million—in 1910-11—the last year of Liberal rule, was whittled down, under Conservative administration to a surplus of only $132,000 in 1913-14, a loss of a million in three years, from inadequate and reckless administration, for the low postal rate, as a factor in revenue remained in full operation, and yielded a continuously larger revenue. The postal revenue increased in the three years, from nine millions in 1910-11, to nearly 13 millions in 1913-14, while the expenditure in the Post Office Department increased from nearly 8 millions in 1910-11, to nearly 13 millions in 1913-14.

An increase in expense of administering the department, of nearly five millions a year in three years, shows that not loss of revenue, but extravagant increase of departmental expenditure, was to blame, with every other department sharing in the increased expenditure, of which the Post Office is a type. Since the Borden Government came into power in his department, the Postmaster-General has dismissed 772 Grit employees, and appointed to do their work 3,312 good Tories. If the same reckless extravagance prevails in the general administration of the Department it is no surprise that the surplus of postal revenue over expenditure, has dropped from $1,192,000 in 1910-11, to $132,000 in 1913-14. And with, as in the case, the same extravagance prevailing in all the other departments of the Government, it is no wonder that revenue falls short of meeting the expenditure, and that the Finance Minister, instead of, economizing, resorts to what he calls a "war tax," to cover the criminal folly of his extravagant expenditure.

An attachment for a gas jet will cook almost anything as well as a gas range would do it, has been invented by an Englishman.

Borden Government's Blow at British Trade With Canada

The folly of adding further obstacles to business between Canada and the motherland is emphasized by a comparison of the trade returns for the twelve months ending February, 1915, with the totals for the preceding twelve months. Imports from and exports to Great Britain totalled $[illegible], a decrease of no less than seventy millions as compared with the previous year, while imports from and exports to the United States amounted to the enormous total of $[illegible], an increase of almost twenty millions. Fifteen millions of this represented an increase in imports from the United States during a period when our imports from Great Britain declined to the extent of forty millions.

It may be urged that the great falling off in imports from Great Britain was due to the war, which interfered materially with the output of British industries. In a measure this is true, but there is a deeper underlying cause for the relatively declining purchases of British goods which is one of the most marked features of Canadian import trade. The people of Canada are becoming more and more accustomed every year to American patterns and styles, and methods in housing, clothing, and that wide range of articles indicated by the word notions. The Borden Government came in avowedly to try and check the growing tendency of Canadians to buy freely from their neighbours to the south. Trade was to be directed into "loyal" east and west channels instead of the reasonable north and south routes it persisted in taking despite the material tariff advantages enjoyed by the importers of British goods under the Fielding tariff. The result of almost four years of Conservative trade development has been an unprecedented increase in Canada's imports from the United States and a corresponding [illegible] in imports from Great Britain. Guided by the politicians who were determined to have "no truck or trade with the Yankee," either in buying or selling if it could be avoided, trade with the Republic has increased greatly, especially in imports, while the British manufacturer gets a yearly proportionate share of Canada's custom.

With almost inconceivable folly the Borden Government chose a time when British industries were hard hit by war conditions to increase to the extent of five per cent. the taxes levied on British imports. The woollens of Bradford and Leeds had to face heavy tariff taxes before the latest additional taxes that had been demanded by Canadian mill owners to prevent the shutting down of their mills. The additional five per cent. will transfer no small part of the business in textiles to the home manufacturer, who will collect in the form of extra profit a very considerable share of the excessive duties now levied upon British woollens. The effect upon the consumer will undoubtedly be to force him to accept goods of poorer quality than he purchased before the increase in duty. His income has in most cases diminished rather than increased, and he will either have to wear his clothes longer because of the exactions resulting from the tariff increase or content himself with cheaper goods.

What is true of textiles is true of almost every other class of imports. The increase of duty will not mean an increase of national revenue, the need of which was the pretext for increasing protection. Imports, especially of British manufactured goods, will be discouraged, and the revenue that should have been derived from the increase will go not into the public till, but into the pocket of men already conspicuously rich and prosperous during a period of general trade depression. The Canadian people have been so long accustomed to a privileged class whose profits are secured by tariff laws that the blow dealt at British trade during the past session of Parliament has caused little indignation throughout the country. It should at least be used by Liberal speakers to show how empty and insincere was the declaration of the Conservative leaders who four years ago demanded that in trade and commerce, as in all other relations, Canada should be "loyal" to the motherland.—The Globe.

NO DIFFERENCE.

A darkey running a ferry across the Alabama River was accosted by a poor white stranger who wanted to cross, but hadn't the wherewithal.

Pete scratched his woolly poll, perplexidly, then queried: 'Doan' yo' got no money at all?"

"No," was the dejected reply.

'But it doan' cost yo' but three cents ter cross," insisted Pete.

"I know, but I hain't got three cents."

After a final inward think, Pete remarked:

"I don't tell yo' what; a man what's not got three cents am jes' as well off on dis side ob de ribber as on de odder!"

Church Trust Has Been Formed

CINCINNATI, has a church trust. The idea of the trust is to economize and to restrain useless churches from springing up in almost any and every field, and those who have started this movement point out that the results secured will be of a beneficial nature.

If a community in the vicinity of Cincinnati is without a church and is thought to need one, a committee composed of prominent ministers will investigate. If they think the church should be formed action of that nature will follow, but if in the opinion of the committee the field is over crowded they will advise against the formation of the new church and do all in their power to keep it from starting.

The Federation of Churches, as this organization is known, was started in Cincinnati to remedy certain defects now said to exist here. In many localities it is claimed, there are more churches than are necessary, while in others there are more than enough. The Federation's committee will aim to weed these extra churches out. Wherever possible the superfluous churches will be eliminated at once. In one community it has been found there are five churches where only two are needed.

Wherever a church of any denomination is not fully covering the ground another will be started and encouraged, to appeal to the tendency toward liberal clientele from a religious standpoint.

The Federation of Churches, the first church trust in America, it is said, has opened elaborate offices for business in the Union Central Building in Cincinnati. The offices have the appearance of any business office, and there will be no especial effort to give the headquarters of this church movement other than a particularly business atmosphere.

"We are here for business," says Secretary Fagley. "There has been too much overlapping of work, too much sentimentality about church work, and a sad lack of true business efficiency. Many thousands of dollars have been lost forever in religious work by striving in directions that common sense would never justify, too much senseless competition, and too many churches, some entirely out of sympathy with the communities in which they are located.

"False pride has had its share in causing heavy losses in trying to maintain churches which should never have been started at a heavy sacrifice. There is no sense in two churches trying to do the same thing where one only is needed; where one good, strong organization would be a power for good and have the respect of all. We shall attempt to do away with the senseless rivalry and competition, and the useless expense of two complete church bodies, besides the additional likelihood of fomenting personal jealousies and bickering.

"Again, the various church bodies can work harmoniously in regard to the collection of funds to carry on the various new lines of church endeavour.

"The churches in the New Federation of Churches of this city will go about church business henceforth under the new trust idea, for there need be no secrecy between churches, no competition, in the ordinary sense. A corporation has something to sell and will not establish sales agencies to the number of perhaps a half dozen in a city not capable of supporting more than one. Yet we find churches, each engaged in the same line of work actively competing and killing each other's influence, at least in a figurative sense. It is undoubtedly better to have one strong church in a community than several weak ones.

"It may take some time to do away with the prejudice against interdenominational work in the minds of some of the laymen, and therefore by trained speakers will be given that the new idea may be fully understood and needless opposition overcome. New plans for the collection of church funds will be inaugurated, and new systems for the keeping of church accounts, and handling various kinds of church finance will be put forth and encouraged.

"There is much to be accomplished by the new idea, much to be worked out as the first 'Church Trust' attempts to improve the religious field along the line of increased efficiency of the worker and economise the means of the churchman."

Political Issues Loom Large In British Prohibition Fight

Brewers' Interests are Almost Entirely Conservative in Party Affiliations and Drastic Move by Government is Likely to Meet Violent Opposition.

LONDON, April 20.—That the government contemplates drastic action to prevent excessive drinking during the period of the war is as certain as that it has adequate powers under the Defence of the Realms Act to put these measures into effect.

"Nothing but root and branch methods will be of the slightest avail in dealing with this evil," says the Chancellor of the Exchequer, who has been sounding the country on the subject for some weeks. "The feeling is that if we are to settle German militarism we must first of all settle with drink. We are fighting Germany, Austria and drink; and, as far as I can see, the greatest of these deadly foes is drink."

Now every one—the distiller, the brewer, the publican and the public—is inquiring what does Mr. Lloyd George mean by "root and branch" methods? The question is causing greater commotion throughout the country than any other topic that has cropped up since the war began. Not even the appeals for recruits to the workmen to maintain the output of munitions, which are at the bottom of the crusade against strong drink, have caused so much excitement.

So far as can be gathered Mr. Lloyd George's proposal is in the direction of the total prohibition during the period of the war of the sale of excisable liquors. That is, practically, the proposal which was put before him by the deputation from shipbuilding firms on the Tyne and Clyde and other centres. And not one of the deputation was a teetotaler.

There is, of course, a difference of opinion among the Ministers at present concerning the scope of the reform which should be effected. Some believe it would be best to limit the prohibition to the sale of spirits. But this, while permitting the sale of beer, would also permit the sale of wines. It is felt that if a serious restriction is to be placed upon the working classes the well to do classes should certainly suffer an analogous restriction.

May Raise Political Issue.

The subject, it will be seen, is in the initial stages of Ministerial discussion. But, none the less, it may be said that the general opinion in the government seems to be that a further restriction of the hours of opening of licensed premises will not suffice to check the evil which is retarding progress in the shipyards, munition factories and other vital industrial centres.

If Mr. Lloyd-George's proposal eventually is agreed to, with or without modifications, there is no doubt that it must be carried into force by legislation.

A bill of first-class importance would be a challenge to all parties in the State. Their support must be given or withheld, and by this the success of the venture could be judged at the crucial moment, if not before. At present the government is not aware what the opinion of the responsible opposition is upon this subject, and labour opinion has yet to crystallize.

As a leading member of the whisky trade, Sir Thomas Dewar, while says the trade is anxious too help the government in restricting the consumption of strong drink, so long as it interferes with the output of the munitions of war, said to an interviewer:

"The members of the deputation could only speak so far as their own particular areas were concerned. It is estimated that more than three million persons are connected with the liquor industries, in which there is capital invested to the amount of $1,220,000,000. Total prohibition would cause complete chaos in this trade, not to mention the effect on other industries which are directly connected with it.

"Everybody employed in the allied trades is anxious to meet the government in the matter and assist as far as possible. They are prepared to make sacrifices and set up to the wishes of those in authority. The interests of the war stand supreme above everything—that is readily recognised by the trade. As evidence of this it is worth noting that licensed victuallers throughout the country have of their own initiative approached the magistrates and offered to reduce the hours of opening their houses.

WOULD INCREASE UNEMPLOYMENT.

"The trade is willing to accept even a further limitation of the hours of opening, but because there have been excesses through over abundance of spending money in those centres where munitions of war are manufactured it would seem hard on other parts of the country where wages remain at normal rates that the liberty of the subject should be interfered with. It would hardly serve to shorten the war, for instance, if prohibition were exercised in the sleepy corners of Surrey or Devon."

Speaking for the Allied Brewery Trades' Association, of which he is secretary, Mr. Wilson said:

"If it is decided to prohibit the sale of drink altogether it will mean that half a million persons alone connected directly and indirectly with the brewing trade will be affected. A large proportion of these, too, are young girls, women and youths not of military age, who will be thrown upon the nation. There is invested in the trades connected with brewing more than $500,000,000, with a weekly wages bill roughly of between $3,500,000 and $4,000,000. Think what the complete stoppage of drink would mean from a financial point of view. It would mean the closing down of all machinery, plant and utensil trades in which huge sums are invested; it would affect farmers, collieries, grain merchants of all kinds, chemists, sugar refiners and hundreds of others interested in some way in the trade."

On the other hand, those in favour of total prohibition cannot see how any harm may come from throwing out of employment the workers who are engaged in the distilleries, breweries and in the public houses. "Let them go and do something else," they say. "There is plenty for them to do in war time in other fields of work."

BRITISH GRAVES AT MARNE.

French Comrades' Care of Soldiers' Resting Places.

A report on the examination of the Marne battlefields, sent to the Red Cross Joint Committee for tending Soldiers' Graves, tells of French care for the resting-places of British fallen. It states:

"In all the regions wherein, perhaps more than any other, the French feel that the bravery and skill of the British troops saved them and their country there is an intense desire to do all that is possible to show not only the gratitude, but an emotion very like love for Great Britain.

"They gladly offer perpetual concessions of land in their cemeteries; they wish to lay our soldiers beside their own; they will go to any amount of trouble to find and tend our graves in scattered localities, and they long for permission to gather them into consecrated ground."

Belgians Hold But 300 Square Miles of Land

Belguim's Cities, Commerce, Industry and Resources Lie Behind the German Lines

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21. — "Out of 11,370 square miles of territory occupied by Belgium before the present war, less than 300 square miles thereof is still held by the Belgians and their allies; and the normal population of the part of the country still held by the Belgians is only 100,000, while the peace population of the whole country was more than 7,000,000." Thus begins a statement just prepared by the National Geographic Society showing what Belgium has lost of her territory since the present war began. It then continues:

"All of Belgium's cities, her commerce, industry and resources of mine and timber lands now lie behind the German lines, which sweep from Westende, on the North Sea, to Basle, where the Rhine leaves Switzerland for Germany.

"Independent Belgium to-day is a thin strip of land wedged into the French department of Pas-de-Calais. This area is the sand-dune, infertile low-lying, sparsely populated part of Belgium. Antwerp, Brussels, Liege, Ghent, Charleroi, Louvain, Namur, Ostend, Malines and some score of other important cities of the low country are under German domination. In that strip of territory which the allies defend, there is not a single city with 20,000 population, and there are but 10 small towns in all the section.

"The coal fields of Liege, Mons, and Charleroi, with their annual outputs in normal times of 22,000,000 tons a year, are in the hands of the invaders. The great steel and iron works of Liege and Charleroi are lost. When, in the years before the war, one passed through the busy city of Liege on the Paris-Berlin express at night, he saw thousands of splashes of fire-glow in the fleeting shadows, where the restless furnaces of foundries trading with every country laboured. The American traveller who watched these fires gleam by, recalled to mind a strip of railroad eastward out of Cleveland, where factory and foundry line the way for miles.

"The iron, zinc, lead and magnanese mines of Belgium lie behind its enemy's lines. Its rich quarries of marble, granite and salte are in its northern and eastern provinces. Here, also, are its forests and its more important manufactures. These sections have been in the hands of the invaders from the early days of the war. Ghent is the capital of the Belgian textile industry, an industry which occupies many of the cities and towns of Flanders, where woolen and cotton stuffs and lace genres are made, but the looms all lie behind the German front. So, too, is all of Belgium's agricultural country lost; and a sand-drift and stretches where dairy farming was carried on in peace times are all that now remains under the shadow of Belgium's battle standards.

"Belgium stood sixth among the nations of the world in the relative value of her commerce before the war broke out. To-day this commerce has been completely crushed; no free ports remain, and there is not even a customs port on all her borders where goods pass through save three ports above upon the French and German borders where war munitions and supplies for contending armies are pouring in. Belgium's trade is no more; her industry is no more; her mining is no more; her cities are foreign soil; her schools, her four universities at Ghent, Liege, Brussels and Louvain are no more; her capital is lost; her farms are gone. —Belgium, herself, is almost non-existent as a concrete thing."

Britain Has 750,000 Men Now At The Battlefront

Information Given by Chancellor Causes Astonishment Because There is No Diminution Apparent in Men in Training—Amunition Used at Neuve Chapelle Unprecedented

LONDON, April 22. — The British Expeditionary force in France, which, at the beginning of the war, consisted of six divisions, has been increased to more than 36 divisions, or, roughly speaking, 750,000 men, according to a statement made by David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon.

The Chancellor added that the place of every one who had fallen in battle had been filled, and that the army was adequately equipped. But he reiterated the need for a greater supply of ammunition, declaring that during the battle of Neuve Chapelle more ammunition was used than in the whole of the South African war, which lasted nearly three years.

The interesting information also was given that the output of the munition factories had been increased more than nineteen-fold since the outbreak of the war, but the call was still for more, and, as Mr. Lloyd-George continues to hold the opinion that consumption of liquor is interfering with the work, he promised legislation to deal with this matter.

The figures made public by the Chancellor as to the size of the British army in France and the expenditure of ammunition has caused great surprise in England, where the opinion has been general that about half that number of men had reached the front, especially as there has been no signs of any decrease in the number of khaki-clad men training in this country.

It is likely that many of the new men have already been under fire, as the Germans are making repeated attempts to capture Hill 60 near Ypres, which the British took on Sunday, and have, according to Field Marshal French's report, been repulsed with great loss.

It was one of the most magnificent pieces of organization ever performed and nothing like it, he said, had ever been done before by any country.

Mr. Lloyd George said that Great Britain was also supplying her allies with munitions, and that, in spite of this, there still was a large reserve. He adhered to his statement that a small minority of workmen could, through drink, throw the whole work out of gear. He promised that when the Government measure was introduced dealing with this matter, it would be found that it had not been approached from the point of view of persons who wanted to advance any particular idea or notion, but from the point of view of persons who had one object in mind—an increase in munitions.

It was no use saying there was no more drinking than normally, the speaker said. These were abnormal times and they had to take abnormal measures with an evil which had become abnormal.

A division of the British army contains 15,000 men on a peace footing but on a war basis nearly 50 per cent. more. This would give a total of from 750,000 to 800,000 men.

Transports Await Chance

Big Allied Fleet Manouvering For Opportunity to Land

LONDON, April 22.—Off the Anatolian coast, between Tenedos and Mitylene, a great fleet of the allied transports is manoeuvring, awaiting an opportunity to land troops, and the British and French warships have renewed operations on the Dardanelles. Six torpedo boats attacked the entrance of the Dardanelles under cover of fire from the warships. Constantinople claims that they were driven back.

After bombarding the forts for about five hours yesterday a heavy fog forced the warships to cease their operations. Two torpedo boats were hit by the return fire of the Turkish forts and the Turks say that one was sunk, but the Admiralty scouts this story.

A report from Berlin states that The Tages Zeitung publishes a despatch, the origin of which is not given, stating that 20,000 British and French troops have landed near Enos, in European Turkey, on the north side of the Gulf of Saros. Heavy cannonading took place between the Turkish batteries and the British warships around Enos.

Great activity has been noted among the British forces on the Island of Lemnos, which lies to the west of the entrance to the Dardanelles, says a despatch received in Berlin. Troop transports are arriving daily at Lemnos from Alexandria, Egypt.

A despatch from Petrograd says that a naval raid against the Turkish coast positions in the Caucasus region was announced in the Russian Admiralty yesterday in the following statement: "The first flotilla of our torpedo boat destroyers in the Black Sea bombarded the Turkish positions at Archave, and near the Village of [illegible]

SHE DARKENED HER GRAY HAIR

A Kansas City Lady Darkened Her Gray Hair and Stimulated Its Growth by a Simple Home Process.

She Tells How She Did It.

A well-known society lady who darkened her gray hair by a simple home process, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can darken their gray or faded hair, stimulate its growth and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, 1 small box of Orlex Compound and 1-4 oz. of glycerine. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair every other day until the gray hair is darkened sufficiently, then every two weeks. This mixture relieves scalp troubles and is excellent for dandruff and falling hair. It does not stain the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off. It will make a gray haired person look 10 to 20 years younger.

Havelock Man Rewarded For Life Saving

Brakeman J. J. Carter Presented With Albert Medal by the Duke of Connaught—The Engineer's Report

A DESPERATE CHANCE

MONTREAL, April 22.— An act of courage receiving fitting recognition yesterday afternoon at the hands of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, who personally presented the Albert medal of the second class to J. J. Carter, freight brakeman of Havelock, for having at the risk of his life saved a little girl from being crushed to death. The presentation was made at Lady Strathcona's residence.

The gallant act which earned this highly-prised medal occurred at Tweed, Ont., in May of last year. Carter was on the fireman's side of the locomotive of a train running eighteen miles an hour. The semaphores were set in the clear position, but the little girl had got on the track by crawling through the fence. Shouting out "Stop!" to the engineer, Carter hurried out through the front window on to the running board, and so on to the pilot. The engineer put on the brakes, but could not stop in time, so that the train was still running eight or ten miles an hour when they reached the child. Just as they came to the spot Carter jumped ahead of the engine, and by grabbing the child with his right hand pulled her along with himself into a ditch clear of the track. The eighth car had reached the spot before the train was brought to a standstill.

In his report the engineer said: "I consider Carter took a desperate chance in doing as he did, as a misstep would have cost him his life."

First Trip on April 21st

Northern Navigation Co. Has Started Its Season

An evidence of the interest which is being taken in travel on the Great Lakes this year is shown by the announcement that the steamship Huronic of the Northern Navigation Co. left for its first trip to Port Arthur on April 21st, instead of April 24th, as originally scheduled.

The Huronic is one of the steamers which makes up the Lake Superior fleet of the Northern Navigation Company—the line which links the east with the west.

This early start is of particular interest to freight shippers, because it provides a speedy way for manufactured freight to travel from the eastern section of the country into northern Minnesota, and the western Dominion, and for the farm products and ores of the West to come East, a rail trip which requires many days.

So many inquiries have been received at the general offices of the Northern Navigation Company at Sarnia as to when the sailings would begin, that H. H. Gildersleeve, general manager, believes this season will see the greatest passenger travel ever known on the Great Lakes. With the disturbance abroad, the thousands of Americans who normally go to the old world for the summer season, will spend the time in enjoying the beautiful spots of America.

"This is evidenced," says Mr. Gildersleeve, "by the prominence which the southern resorts have gained during the winter season, now coming to a close. Never before have Americans gone to them so generally. When the warm weather comes, these people will seek the cooler climes and that means that a great many of them will spend their time about the Great Lakes, for there is no country which is more delightful during the months of summer. Every steamship company operating boats on the lakes, I believe, will see an increased passenger traffic this year."

The steamship Hamonic, a sister ship of the Huronic, will go into commission shortly. The Noronic, flagship of the Lake Superior fleet, will run several chartered trips on the lakes before entering upon her regular schedule.

Oil Samples Will Be Tested

At the Instance of the Board of Works—Matter Left With Chairman

At last night's meeting of the Board of Works, Ald. Green, chairman of the Board, and City Engineer Parsons were authorized to purchase the quantity of road oil required after having the samples tested. The prices quoted by two companies range from 5 1-4 cents to 6 1-2 cents per gallon. The City Engineer said he had submitted specifications for asphaltic road oil and asked for tenders. Samples were submitted. These will be tested and the grade of oil decided upon.

CITY HALL PARAGRAPHS

What's Doing in Civic Circles—Items of Interest Concerning Municipal Administration

Last evening Alderman Langford made his initial appearance at the 1915 Board of Works.

Sewer on Wescott Street.

Messrs. Hunt and McDonald waited upon the Board of Works last evening in respect to a sewer that is in demand on Wescott street. Mr. Hunt declared that it was eleven years since the matter was first brought to the attention of the Council. The Board of Works will look over the ground when the annual tour of inspection is made.

Releases Obtained.

A communication has been received from City Solicitor Gordon saying he had obtained releases from Mr. Murphy and Mrs. Gagnon for damage to their property on Smith street.

Will Cost $27,700.

The estimated cost of constructing the pavement on Hunter street from Aylmer street to Belmont avenue, as recommended by City Engineer Parsons, is in the neighbourhood of $27,700.

WITH OTHER MUNICIPALITIES

The rate of taxation for the Village of Merritton for the year 1915 will be 27 mills.

Will Enforce By-law.

The by-law against riding bicycles on the sidewalk will be strictly enforced in Brantford.

Street Lighting System.

Sir Adam Beck turned on the lights for the new ornamental system on Talbot street, London, which will illuminate this street for a mile and a half.

Sewerage System Inadequate.

Berlin's sewerage system has been pronounced inadequate by the authorities, and the Provincial Board of Health has given the city till November 10th next to abate the nuisances created in consequence.

Was Fined $300.

Wellington McVicar, of Washago, has been fined $300 by the Police Magistrate of Orillia for selling liquor in a local option municipality. This is the second recorded case under the new Provincial Act.

Stratford Rate 27 Mills.

By paring grants and limiting new work to the minimum the Stratford City Council Finance Committee found that the tax rate can be kept down to 27 mills, the same rate as last year.

Exclusive of Proposed Rate.

The proposed rate of 27 mills for Stratford does not include a one-mill tax for garbage collection and a like amount for the Provincial war tax, but includes the Patriotic Fund debentures. Council will formally pass the rate by-law to-night.

Quo Warranto Goes On.

The effort of Mayor Porter and Controllers Ellis and Nelson of Ottawa to sidestep the quo warranto proceedings instituted by E. E. Boyce has failed, and they will go on before the county judge.

Muskrat Pelts Lower in Price

The Demand is None too Brisk—Better Market in Prospect.

The price of muskrat skins are considerable lower than last year, with the demand none too brisk. From 25 to 30 cents appears to be the prices paid, with most of them selling at 28c. The old trappers have not offered their season's catch for sale yet, the present offerings coming from farmers and young fellows who have caught a dozen or two rats during the season. The larger consignments will come in shortly before the 1st May, the trappers anticipating a better market.

A local fur dealer said that he could barely get out with his own money at the prices paid now. There is a good market for fur this year. Another dealer claims he lost 33% on the lots he has purchased up to the present time.

SIMPLE WAY TO END DANDRUFF

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

HUNTER STREET WILL BE PAVED

Despite Counter Petition of Ratepayers—Work Will be Undertaken by the City—Concrete to be Used

Despite a counter petition signed by a majority of the ratepayers concerned, the Board of Works will proceed with the construction of a concrete pavement on Hunter Street from Aylmer Street to Belmont Avenue, including the four streets that form the boundaries of St. Peter's Cathedral. This was decided upon at last night's meeting of the Board, following a desultory controversy that dissipated all hope of an adjournment at ten o'clock, which hour has come to be regarded as a reasonable time for adjournment providing the pleading is not too heavy and the soft pedal is applied to the discussion. The work of paving Hunter Street will be proceeded with under section nine of the Local Improvement Act, which empowers the Council to undertake such work whether or not the people residing on the street favour it. City Engineer Parsons presented a report recommending concrete as a suitable pavement for Hunter Street. By using concrete it will be possible to employ local labour throughout and also eliminate the need for any additional equipment other than that already owned by the city. The Board, which is composed of the whole Council, was of the opinion that it would be better to pave Hunter Street this year rather than wait a year or two as was suggested by some of the ratepayers who signed the counter petition. It would provide work for the unemployed which was very necessary, and by using the style of pavement recommended by the City Engineer, the work could be done by the city much cheaper than if it were let by contract.

Park Street.

Ald. Stratton was also instrumental in having a resolution passed recommending the paving of Park Street from Brock to Charlotte Streets. The City Engineer will be asked to recommend a suitable paving material for this piece of work. The resolution was seconded by Ald. Saunders and adopted only after it had been converted from an amendment into an original motion. As an amendment it was allied with the motion to pave Hunter Street, which was fathered by Aldermen Edgar and Dobbin. In support of the resolution Ald. Stratton said that he had been approached by a number of Park Street ratepayers who were desirous that some form of permanent paving be introduced on Park Street.

On motion of Aldermen Stratton and Saunders, it was decided to pave Murray Streets from Aylmer to Water Streets. George and Water Streets north of the present paving area was given some consideration, but after some discussion it was decided to leave the matter over for the time being.

Germany Will Mourn When Italy Strikes

ROME, April 22—Senator Carafa announced yesterday to a number of Senators that Ambassador Von Buelow was greatly distressed over the fact that the conversations at Vienna between Italy and Austria were making no progress and owing, as Von Buelow expressed it, 'to Italy's unreasonable demands." Senator Carafa further quoted Von Buelow as saying:

"Germany will consider the rupture between Italy and Austria as a day of national mourning, but nevertheless she will do her full duty by Austria."

Afterwards Senator Carafa visited Premier Salandra, who when informed of the German Ambassador's remarks, declared:

"In view of the higher interests of our country, we also will do our whole duty against anybody."

LITIGATION OVER FARM LANDS

Arising Out of Removal of Line Fence—Damages Claimed For Wrongful Entry

Mr. Alex. McArthur, of Belmont, has issued a writ in the County Court against Mr. Andrew Buchanan, a neighbour, for recovery of possession of land said to have been wrongfully obtained by the latter by reason of his moving a fence which had been in existence for over 26 years, and enclosing thereby the plaintiff's land and a valuable spring. The writ also claims damages for the alleged wrongful entry. C. A. Ghent, of town, is acting for McArthur, and Peck, Kerr and McElderry, of Peterborough, for Buchanan.

Meeting of Women's Missionary Society

Was Held Yesterday in Mark Street Methodist Church

Mark Street W. M. S. held a very successful open meeting yesterday afternoon, the President, Mrs. Wm. Payne, being in the chair.

After the opening exercise, which consisted of singing, a prayer by the Pastor, Rev. L. Phellps, and responsive reading, Mr. Phellps welcomed the visitors in a few well-chosen words. Mrs. Matthews of Murray Street Church, gave an excellent paper, which brought out some of the problems our missionaries have to face in foreign lands.

Solos were sung by Mrs. J. Lock and Mrs. E. Wand, and a duet by two of the Mission Band girls, Miss Myrtle Succee and Miss Elva McIntyre. All the numbers on the programme were enjoyed by those present.

The annual thank offering was taken and amounted to $80.00.

The Rev. Arthur Phellps closed the meeting with prayer.

President—Mrs. W. Payne.
First Vice Pres.—Mrs. L. Phellps.
Rec.Sec.—Mrs. F. Smiley
Cor.Sec.—Mrs. J. Speer.
Treasurer—Mrs. J. H. Smith.
Superintendent of Systematic Giving—Mrs. R. J. Weir.
Superintendent of the Mission Band Mrs. K. Throop.

STREETS WILL BE WATERED ON SUNDAY

In Certain Sections of the City—Churchgoers Will Benefit

The paved streets, together with certain thoroughfares leading into the city, will be watered on Sunday, according to a recommendation that was passed at last night's meeting of the Board of Works, on motion of Aldermen Stratton and McIntyre. In speaking of the benefits to be derived from watering the streets on Sunday mention was made of the churchgoers. At first it was proposed to confine Sunday street watering to the paved sections of the city, as the cost of extending it over the macadam roads would be prohibiive, and it will only be a matter of a short time until the streets are oiled. Three times the motion to water the paved sections of the city on Sunday was put to the Board and each time the division was held up by an attempt on the part of some one alderman to reopen the discussion and volunteer numberless reasons why some other section of the city should be watered. It was repeatedly pointed out by the chairman and others that it was the intention of the Council to oil the macadam roads just as soon as the necessary arrangements could be made and, therefore, it was unnecessary to resort to the use of water, especially as the appropriation for this purpose is not very large. It was finally decided to recommend that the paved sections, as well as some of the main thoroughfares, be wartered on Sunday.

'A Horrible Example."

Ald. Edgar wanted to know why a couple of clerks were fined for dry-sweeping the sidewalk in front of their premises, while the Board of Works was permitted to dry-sweep the roads

City Engineer Parsons admitted the inconsistency of the by-law, claiming that it referred to streets only, and not to roads.

"It was a horrible example," suggested Ald. Dobbin.

Ald. Green was of the opinion that the merchants were very liberally treated when it came to looking after their interests in the business section of the city. The streets were watered frequently and every effort made to keep them in good condition.

To this Ald. Stratton did not agree. He thought that the merchants had reasonable grounds for complaint. One merchant had invited him into his store to show him the amount of dust that had accumulated on the stock.

Its inventor claims that a new leather for lining shoes is perspiration proof.

"Forward the Union Jack" is Popular Song

Written by Brother of Three Peterboro Citizens

One of the most popular and stirring patriotic songs that have appeared in the last year is that written by Mr. J. A. Hendry, and which is now placed on sale in the principal centres of Canada. The song is written in a fine martial spirit and swings in a rousing melody that is not only attractive but stirring. The title is "Forward the Union Jack."

Mr. Hendry comes of good Scotch parentage, having been born at Ruthergien, Scotland, though he has spent many years of his life on this side of the Atlantic. He is the author of many songs, all of which have been well received, and which have been esteemed for the sentiment expressed in the verse and the aira to which the words have been set. Mr. Hendry's latest one is a contribution to the number of Canadian songs that is well timed, and well in place.

The sentiment of the song does some justice to the several parts of the Empire, and eulogizes each of the semi-independent parts, as Australia, Canada, South Africa and New Zealand. The song will no doubt become at once a general favourite. It is on sale in the book stores beginning of the week and should be heartily welcomed and received.

Mr. Hendry is a brother of Messrs. Thos., Robert and James Hendry, all of this city.

OBJECTION WILL BE MADE TO THIS IDEA

The time has surely not come, said a citizen of sporting proclivities to the Examiner to-day, that any young men forming a city league baseball team has to depend upon a hastily equipped room in a hotel for shower baths and dressing purposes. Last year the professional team enjoyed the privileges of the Y.M.C.A. When our own boys are playing could not similar arrangement be made. There are excellent bathing facilities at the "Y" and showers at the T.A.S. rooms with an environment above unfavourable criticism. The idea of turning a hotel into an athletic club as has been widely reported, will not be cordially received by the parents and friends of the members of that team or of the other teams, members of which are bound to be attracted. Just say, if you like, that there will be strong opposition to this plan if it is carried out.

The farther sport is kept from licensed bars, no matter how well they may be kept, the better for sport and the young men in it.

Motion pictures are being used to teach hygiene to the less civilized Filipinos.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUNDS

$500. Will Cover All Expenses of the Plan

Should we wait until the war is over, before establishing playgrounds?

The hot months of July and August will soon be here, and the well-to-do of Peterborough will hie them to the Lakes, taking their families with them, and the girls and boys will have a glorious time, bathing, fishing and boating!

But what of the children of less fortunate parents? Those who cannot afford summer outings? Is it not hight that they too should have in their holidays, at least what little change can be made possible, and be given a place wherein they can work off some of their superfluous energies in properly directed play, and be kept from finding vent in destroying the lawns and flower-beds of our citizens. The Local Council of Women desire to help the Horticultural Society in this way, by establishing this year, one supervised playground. We have waited long for this; should we longer delay? when it is a matetr of the health and happiness of the youth of our city, and because of the unhappiness of those children in other lands, who are suffering from the war, let us try to make the children at our door, more healthy and more happy, and better able to grow up, able and willing to help others.

The Local Council of Women are asking very little for one ground this year—only $500—which will not be a great drag on anyone. This $500 pays for everything—Supervisors (a man and a woman- and the necessary apparatus.

Ten cents or so spent for carnations in memory of our mothers, whether here or gone to their rest—by men and women of Peterborough— will easily give the Local Council of Women the required funds. Don't forget the date to buy carnations — May 8th.

Cordova Mines Have Been Closed

Down For Two Months Owing to Accident to Compressor Plant

HAVELOCK, April 22.—The Cordova gold mine has been forced to close down on account of a very serious accident that occurred at the air compressor plant at Deer Lake. The big drive wheel at the power house, which is about twenty-five feet in diameter and eight feet broad, flew into a thousands pieces, twisting the shaft and wrecking the bed plates. Fortunately no one was hurt and no serious damage done to the building. The damage to the plant is estimated at between $30,000 and $40,000 and it is not known yet what steps the company will take to remedy the effects of the smash. At all events the plant has been closed down for two months pending developments.

BANK CLEARINGS

The bank clearings for the week ending April 22, totalled $370,140, a decrease of $77,509 as compared with the eek before. The corresponding week ast month the clearings were $483,511.

First Things in Peterborough

Interesting Collection of Items of Local Interest

The first white man to set foot on the site of Peterborough was Samuel de Champlain, who passed through here about the middle of September, three hundred years ago. It was on the occasion of his leading the Hurons and Algonquins in their foray against the Iroquois.

In 1818 a space of land was reserved for a town site when the township of N. Monaghan was being surveyed by Richard Birdsall, under the direction of Hon. Z. Burnham.

In 1819 Adam Scott located site for the first mill at end of King Street, and in following year built the mill. Power was obtained by the use of an undershot wheel. Parts of the flue conveying the water were disclosed at the time of preparing foundation of new opera house, 1905.

River Otonabee was first known as "Seebee."

Communication Road first was an Indian trail, which started from Otonabee river where the gas works are now located at end of Simcoe Street, cutting across lots to the west of Water Street, to the foot of Smithtown hill, and winding about to miss the crests of the high hills until the lake at Bridgenorth is reached.

Chemong Lake was first known as "Echegamonge."

In August, 1825, the Peter Robinson immigration party from Ireland landed on "Scott's Plains." In recognition of his splendid services the early settlers named their new home after him, by calling it "Peterborough."

Until 1827, Peterborough had no other name than "Scott's Plains."

First bridge built across Otonabee in 1827, supported on three piers. It did not last very long, however. For many years a ferry was used. Before the erection of dam at "Locks" the river was quite shallow, and could be forded in many places.

In 1838 two small steamers, the Pemcdash and Northumberland were launced on Rice Lake.

August 25th, 1838, the corner stone of the Court House was laid. Contractors: Joseph Scobell and Walter Sheridan.

PUT AN END TO HIS LIFE

Ira McMullen of Lewis Street Takes Dose of Poison.

Mr. Ira McMullen, while in a despondent state of mind, committed suicide yesterday afternoon at his home on Lewis street by taking strychnine poison. Though Dr. Amys, who was called, was present before the end came, he could not do anything to save the life.

Out of Work.

The late Mr. McMullen has been out of work for some time, and though he has tried very hard to secure employment of some kind, he found it an impossible task for him. He had the responsibilities of a home with a wife and daughter, and one small child to keep, and the fact of his being unemployed so long preyed upon him so much that he must have taken this means to end it all.

Though Dr. Amys was called as soon as the family knew that anything had happened, the strychnine had gotten such a start that any efforts at First Aid were of no avail.

Here Fifteen Years.

The deceased man was a native of Uxbridge, coming here fifteen years ago. He was well-known in some circles throughout the city, and also by the members of the farming districts who have often left their horses in his charge when making a trip to the city, as he has been employed as yard and stable man by several of the local hotels.

He was in his fifty-ninth year and was a fresh-looking man for his age. He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing widow and two daughters. The daughters are; Mrs. John Wells, residing with her mother at 309 Lewis street, and Mrs. F. E. Watkins, of Keene; the latter arriving here last evening for the funeral.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon from the family residence, Lewis street, at 2:30 o'clock. Service will be conducted at the house at 3:00 p.m. by Rev. J. R. Webb, interment taking place in Little Lake cemetery.

Stopping of March on Calais A Great Thing

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, in a war lecture in London this week, said:

"A great thing was done when the British army stopped the German march toward Calais. The extent of the victory at Ypres had not yet been appreciated in this country. It was probably the greatest as well as the most expensive in our annals. We still have in our minds the old-fashioned idea that a victory must be followed by the retreat of the enemy and the capture of his guns. In these days of enormous armies the defeated army is simply absorbed in the whole nation in arms behind it. You never get a spectacular defeat. The way to judge of victory is whether the army had attained its object. In this case 600,000 Germans determined to get to the coast, and 150,000 British and Indians determined that they should not do so. In trying to break through the Germans lost anything between 150,000 and 200,000 men with nothing to show for it. If that is not a great victory I don't know by what other name to call it."

Daring French Aviator Captured by the Germans

BERLIN (by wireless to Sayville, L.I.), April 22.—The report on th progress of hostilities given out to-day by German Headquarters relates that Lieutenant Roland G. Garros, the famous French aviator, has been made a prisoner by the Germans at Ingelmunster, in Belgium, seven miles north of Coutrai.

Of the daring French military aviators who have been performing deeds of valour since the war began, few have been as picturesque as Lieut. Garros. His exploits have been watched with especially keen interest in this country as he has flown here, taking chances which many aviators shunned.

Flying here, in South America and in Mexico, he had many falls from considerable heights, but never was seriously injured. Twice this month accounts have reached here of daring encounters with German aviators in the air which ended in the Frenchman bringing his adversaries to earth.

The first of these battles was described in a despatch from Furnes by Major Paul Pontus, whose father formerly was Minister of War in Belgium. When the French and the German lieutenants met, the German sent his car above Garros the better to destroy him, but Garros evaded this and gained the superiority of height. Then Lieutenant Garros set his quick-firer working, the German replying with his carbine.

Suddenly there was a flash of smoke and flame, and the German aeroplane and its pilot went crashing down to earth. Two of Lieut. Garros' bullets had reached the German's gasoline tank.

His second duel this month with a German aviator was near Dunkirk. An aeroplane was sighted carrying a pilot and an observer, and Lieutenant Garros rose alone to meet them. They [illegible] a stream of bullets pouring from the quick-firers in each machine. Lieutenant Garros had the faster machine, and, outmanoeuvring the enemy, killed both Germans in the air. Landing, Lieutenant Garros walked over to where the wrecked German machine lay with the bodies, and saluted the dead.

A few days after the beginning of the war, a romantic story was cabled here of a French aviator who gave his life to destroy a Zeppelin. The aviator, it was said, rose to a great height above the dirigible and then dived with his machine clear through the giant envelope. So long as the story remained current, Lieut. Garros was supposed to have been the hero of the reputed exploit.

Among aviation records set by Lieutenant Garros were his flight made on December 11, 1912, when he went to a height of 19,032 feet and established a world's record altitude mark; his flight from Tunis to Sicily in December, 1912, when he travelled for a distance of 160 miles entirely over water, and his flight across the Mediterranean from St. Raphael to Bizerta. This latter feat was accomplished by Lieutenant Garros in 7 hours 53 minutes, in which he travelled 558 miles.

Lieutenant Garros is only thirty years ol and first took up flying in 1910. He was born at Cape Town in 1886. He is a graduate of the University of Paris and of the Law University of Paris. For a while he practised law in Paris.

The exploits of Lieutenant Garros have made him a prominent figure in aviation circles throughout the world. He has appeared in meets in Richmond, Chatanooga, Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas, Fort Worth, Oklahoma City, Waco, Houston, San Antonio, El Paso, Mexico City, Vera Cruz, Havana, and New York, and holds a number of speed prises won at tournaments in many European cities.

Crime For Spain to be Silent, Declares Count

MADRID, via Paris, April 21.—"Silence at present is a crime, for if we wait until the moment of victory to show our sympathy for the victor, it is probable we shall be too late," was the assertion made by Conde Alvaro de Romanones, formerly Premier of Spain, in speaking yesterday to a large audience at Palma, capital of the Balearic Isles. He recalled that Spain's foreign policy since the Cartagena agreement in 1907 has been more and more favourable to the Triple Entente

"The present hours are so grave and important," said the speaker, "that it is necessary for Spain to make a solemn declaration. Without violating our neutrality we must say who among the belligerents we consider our friends."

Conde de Romanones' address wes enthusiastically cheered by his hearers. Among other things, he said the government was obliged to be silent on the subject, but that men not in power could declare that Tangiers was a national aspiration and that the future of Spain was in the Mediterranean, while the future of Portugal was in America.

At the same time Conde de Romanones was speaking at Palma, the Premier, Senor Dato, delivered an address in Barcelona in which he appealed to the people to aid the government in the difficult task of defending its interests.

The Cartagena agreement was a triple understanding reached between Great Britain, France and Spain, following a trip by the late King Edward to Cartagena in 1907. The agreements between Spain and Great Britain and Spain and France were distinct, although following the same lines. Great Britain's chief interest in the agreement was in the removal of any cause for uneasiness in regard to the possibility of a land attack on Gibraltar, Spain for the first time recognising her right to hold the peninsula. Spain, on the other hand, benefited by having a strong Power guarantee her positions in the Canary Islands and the Mediterranean, including the Balearic Islands.

No attempt was made by Germany to conceal its irritation at the agreement, for it was felt that its chief aim probably was the further isolation of that country.

SALVING THE SUBMARINE

By W. N. Babcock

The frequent foundering of submarines and occasional unaccountable disappearances have resulted in many widely different suggestions for salving them—some more feasible than others.

One of the most practical in recent years and the development of two eminent men in submarine naval architecture is at present receiving considerable attention.

According to this invention, each submarine is constructed with a centrally arranged well or pit of considerable diameter leading downwardly through the deck and into the body of the vessel but formed as a distinct compartment open at the top but not opening into the vesel. At the bow and tern, a tube extends vertically completely through the vessel from top to bottom and in the bottom of each tube is securely fixed a shackle plate to which one end of a lifting cable is made fast. In the large well at the centre is mounted a marker buoy. To this buoy are conected the remaining ends of the lifting cables. An air hose is carried by the buoy, its lower end being secured in the wall of the well by an air-tight joint. Within this tube are arranged the wires of a telephone system which includes the usual set of transmitter and receiver. One pair of these instruments is suitably placed within the hull of the submarine, and the other pair is carried by the buoy with its wires arranged in the air hose or tube.

In order to make the hold on the lifting cables even more certain, a cable clamp is arranged in each of the tubes leading through the hull and is adapted to be operated from the interior of the vessel. In case of necessity, the cable might have to be cut. For this purpose, a cable is provided in each of the tubes and is operated from the interior of the vessel.

In operation, when the vessel founders, the commander will immediately release the marker buoy which will rise to the surface carrying with it the air hose, telephone and lifting cables. As soon as the searching vessel locates the buoy it will communicate by the telephone with the foundered boat and arrange for the salving. It will then connect to the lifting cables and hoist the submarine. This system is particularly adapted for the salving of one submarine by another. The salving submarine after locating the foundered one, will partially submerge itself, connect to the lifting cables, and then rise to the surface lifting the foundered boat with it. It will then proceed to shallower water, where it will again submerge itself, take a new hold and repeat the operation. Thus step-by-step it will bring the foundered boat into such shallow water that the crew may readily escape and the boat be easily lifted.

Recent investigation seems to prove that Bahia, Brazil, is the oldest city on the American continent, having been founded in 1549, or 35 years before St. Augustine, Fla.

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your issue, last evening, another Russellite sympathizer, Joseph R. Elmhurst, tries to make out that Mr. Johnston has misquoted Pastor Russell, notwithstanding all the substantial proof that has been given by Mr. Johnston and others that what was said was correct. In order, therefore, to corroborate the truth of Mr. Johnston's statements, I wish to give Pastor Russell's quotation exactly, without any omissions or additions of any kind, and from this the public can see that Pastor Russell does call his books the Bible. Here is the exact quotation from the "Watchtower" September 15, 1910; page 298, Pars. 4, 5:

"If the six volumes of Scripture studies are practically the Bible, topically arranged, with Bible proof texts given, we might not improperly name the volumns—the Bible in an arranged form. That is to say, they are not merely comments on the Bible, but they are practically the Bible itself, since there is no desire to build any doctrine or thought on any individual preference or on any individual wisdom, but to present the entire matter on the lines of the Word of God. We therefore think it safe to follow this kind of reading, this kind of instruction, this kind of Bible study."

"Furthermore, not only do we find that people cannot see the Divine Plan in studying the Bible by itself, but we see, also, that if anyone lays the Scripture Studies aside, even after he has used them, after he has become familiar with them, after he has read them for ten years—if he then lays them aside and ignores them and goes to the Bible alone, though he has understood his Bible for ten years, our experience shows that within two years he goes into darkness. On the other hand, if he had merely read the Scripture studies with their references and had not read a page of the Bible, as such, he would be in the light at the end of the two years, because he would have the light of the Scriptures."

The above quotation has been taken from the "Watchtower," exactly word for word with the exact punctuation, as given by 'Pastor" Russell. Every reader can decide for himself now whether Mr. Johnston is correct or not. Pastor Russell does, according to his own language, call his books the Bible itself.

Yours sincerely,
Truth.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it, is one of the sayings of the wise Solomon. But how to train a child is a very difficult problem. On one point, however, those who have studied child welfare are unanimous, viz., that if he is well developed and physically healthy the chances are he will be better morally, mentally and spiritually. We see this fact illustrated in those whose forefathers from one generation to another have been confined to the unsanitary dwellings and dusty streets of great cities, and have not had the air, the sunlight, or the food necessary to develop energy or stamina. Our worst emigrants come from the slums of Europe; our best, from the Highlands of Scotland, or the seafaring countries of Sweden, Denmark or England. The ancient Greeks were the most physically perfect people the world has ever known and their education was practically a play-ground education. At seven years of age the Athenian had entered the Palaestra or what was essentially a playground. The better half of the day was spent in gymnastics, dancing, games and play. In the afternoon there was singing, some writing, in sand in a box or strewn on the ground; some reading, (all in the open air), and a long period of play again. Such was the schooling of the Greek, up to the age of ten or eleven, and it did not differ essentially up to the age of sixteen, except in the severity of the exercises. Physically and intellectually this produced the highest type of man "In physical beauty, in courage, in patriotism, in philosophy, literature architecture and art, the Greeks have been the unaurpassed models of the ages." We are just awakening to the educational value of playgrounds. In Chicago $10,000,000 has been spent on them, and Mr. Roosevelt says: "They are the greatest civic achievement the world has ever seen."

Peterborough is behind in this respect. We have not a single supervised playground. But the Local Council of Women ade endeavouring to start one this summer. Five hundred dollars, are needed for this purpose. As our people have given so generously to the Patriotic and other funds, a method has been taken to secure this amount that will fall lightly on every one. On Saturday, May 8th, the Council will have young ladies on the streets selling carnations for Mothers' Day. We hope the public will patronize these well, and honour mother and forward the playground by buying and wearing the flowers.

J. B.
Convener of Publicity Committee for Local Council.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The summer is coming, and the boys will want to swim where they are not chased away by the "Cops," and they will want a place where there is a dressing room and a man to look after them. I think the City Fathers should take the matter up and have a place fitted up where the boys can undress to go into the water without being seen by the girls who go riding in a canoe. Last year the matter was taken up but nothing was done. I think down [illegible] would be a good place to fix up for them. There is always a grumble from the boys because the matter is not looked after. Hoping the City Fathers will look into the matter and think kindly of giving the boys a good swimming place as they would have "kicked" if they hadn't a good place when they were boys.

Thanking you for the valuable space in the best paper in town.

Yours truly.
"A Swimmer."

Have You That TICKLING IN THE THROAT SENSATION?

This trouble is most distressing, and caused from a cold which has settled in the throat. How many people have lost a good night's sleep by that nasty, tickling, irritating sensation in the throat? The dry, hard cough keeps you awake, and when you get up in the morning you feel as if you had had no rest at all.

What you want to cure the cold is Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. This valuable preparation is composed of the most soothing and healing expectorant herbs and barks with which is combined the virtues of the world famous Norway pine tree.

Thousands of testimonials prove that what we claim is true. All we ask you is that when you ask for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup see that you get "Dr. Wood's," and not some no-account substitute.

Mr. Charles S. Chase, Shelburne, N.S., writes: "Coming to Nova Scotia from the State of Maine, I caught a severe cold which persisted for many weeks, and was accompanied by a bad cough and a constant throat irritation. After trying many remedies, a friend handed me part of a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. It helped me so much I bought another bottle which completely cured the cough and allayed the irritation. It is certainly the best cough medicine I have ever tried."

The price of "Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c.

ENEMY AIRSHIPS ROUTED.

Four British and French Aviators Secure Reinforcements.

GENEVA, April 22.—The Rhine from Basel to Muhlhausen was the scene of an aerial engagement Tuesday afternoon. The action lasted from 5 until 7 o'clock and it was witnessed by gatherings of people at many points of vantage.

Four aeroplanes of the allies, two British and two French, moved out from French territory to attack a group of German machines. Numerically the Germans were stronger and as the aircraft of the allies were subjected to a bombardment from Fort Istein, they retired. Later they returned with reinforcements. Outnumbering the Germans, they drove them away.

Later at half-past nine o'clock, two Zeppelin airships, accompanied by several aeroplanes, appeared in the vicinity of Huningen, on the left bank of the Rhine, two miles from Basel. The coming was followed by firing for two hours.

Town Burned Down.

SWAN LAKE, Man., April 22.—The worst fire in the history of Swan Lake broke out yesterday morning at 12.30, and wiped out four stores, the postoffice and The Echo printing plant, and the Government elevator. The fire started from a bonfire at the back of W. W. Shirley's bakery, which was completely gutted, then destroyed Mrs. Cuthe's restaurant, empty store, postoffice, J. P. Hallaman's general store, and The Echo newspaper office. The flames then caught the main street and gutted the Government elevator.

All members of the Boy Scouts are asked to meet at 7 o'clock on Friday, April 23rd, instead of 7.30 o'clock. Full uniform and staves are required. This is a very important meeting as a baseball team is to be decided upon.

Saturday morning the older boys will play baseball on the Central Park at 9.30. The older boys include the Intermediate and Collegiate. The Junior Boys will play outdoor games at ten o'clock on the Central Park.

Every boy who intends writing on the Bible study examinations will meet in the boys' room at nine o'clock Saturday morning to review the lessons which they have been studying.

ECZEMA WAS CURED TWELVE YEARS AGO

Dr. Chase's Ointment Proved to be a Permanent Cure

The old idea of eczema being a disease of the blood has been pretty well exploded by the record of cures made by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Some doctors still advise internal treatment, but the results are slow and uncertain, and too often a lamentable failure. With Dr. Chase's Ointment it is different. You apply the ointment to the sore parts. It cleanses the sores, and soon sets up the healing process. In a few days you can see with your own eyes the wonderful change that is taking place and are encouraged to keep up the treatment until the cure is complete and the sores replaced by smooth, natural skin.

It is wise to look after your general health, keep the bowels regular and the blood rich but you can depend on Dr. Chase's Ointment to cure the eczema if you will do your part and apply it regularly.

Mr. W. H. Roberts, Charlottetown, P.E.I., writes: "I can recommend Dr. Chase's Ointment to anyone suffering from itching skin disease. I had eczema on my leg and suffered terribly from the itching. I had a doctor treat me for four months without relief, and I was getting worse all the time. A second doctor gave some relief for a time, but made no cure. I tried several advertised treatments, but without relief until I used Dr. Chase's Ointment. This ointment cured me in a month. That was twelve years ago, and I have never had a sign of the old trouble since.

"Since then we have always kept Dr. Chase's Ointment in the house and find it invaluable for chafing chilblains, insect stings and burns. I would not be without it if it cost $5 a box."

"This is to certify that I am personally acquainted with Mr. W. H. Roberts, and believe his statement regarding the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment to be true and correct." — (Signed) Alex. Horne, Justice of the Peace.

PHILLIES' MADE CLEAN SWEEP FROM GIANTS

Six Straight Wins for Moran's Team and Five Straight Losses for the Ex-champs.—Donovan's Yankees Won Easily From Philadelphia, Fisher Holding the Latter to Three Hits—Six Pitchers in Brooklyn-Boston Game.

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

New York, April 21.—The Philadelphia Nationals made a clean sweep of their series with New York, winning the fourth game by a score of 6 to 1. It was the sixth straight victory for Philadelphia, and the fifth consecutive defeat for McGraw's former champions. George Chalmers, who went South with the New York team this spring, and was permitted to sign yesterday with Philadelphia, pitched against his training camp associates and held them to two singles. Cravath broke up Perritt's game in the third innings, when he doubled with the bases full. Score. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Philadelphia. .. .. | 0 | 6 | 0 |
| New York.. .. .. .. | 1 | 2 | 2 |

Batteries—Chalmers and Killifer; Perritt, Stroud, Fromme and Smith.

Brooklyn Beat Boston.

Boston, April 21.—After winning four games of the series from Brooklyn, the Braves lost to-day, 8 to 4. It was a game of erratic pitching, Boston using four twirlers and Brooklyn two.

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Brooklyn .. .. .. .. | 8 | 13 | 4 |
| Boston.. .. .. .. .. | 4 | 7 | 2 |

Batteries—Aitchison, S. Smith and McCarty; Crutcher, Cocreham, James, Luque and Gowdy.

Reds Won in Five Innings.

Cincinnati, April 21.—Leach's single, his steal of second, an out of Herzog, and a sacrifice fly by Killifer that scored Leach, proved the deciding factor in to-day's game with St. Louis, inasmuch as rain stopped the contest in the fifth inning with the score 1 to 0 in Cincinnati's favour. Both pitchers were in good form. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis .. .. .. .. | 0 | 0 | 0 |
| Cincinnati .. .. .. .. | 1 | 0 | 0 |

Batteries—Griner and Snyder; Ames and Clarke.

At Chicago—Pittsburg-Chicago game postponed; rain.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Detroit, April 21.— Rallying in the eighth and ninth innings as they often have done in the past, the Detroit Tigers won from Chicago to-day by 4 to 3, and made a clean sweep of the four game series. Russell was invincible until the eighth. In this inning a triple by Bush, Young's infield out, and doubles by Cobb and Crawford produced two runs. With two on bases in the ninth Fabre replaced Russell and filled the sacks. Bush then walked, forcing in Kavanagh, and the winning run was scored when Young hit safely. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago .. .. .. .. | 0 | 8 | 1 |
| Detroit .. .. .. .. | 4 | 11 | 2 |

Batteries—Russel, Fabre and Schalk; Reynolds, Beehler and Baker, McKee.

Washington Trounced Boston.

Washington, April 21.—Bunched hits, bases on balls and errors gave Washington a 11 to 3 victory to-day in the last game of the series with Boston. Collins was wild and ineffective in six innings, and Comstock, who relieved him was no improvement. Millan batted a home run with one on bases. Lewis hit with the bases empty. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston .. .. .. .. | 3 | 8 | 5 |
| Washington .. .. .. | 11 | 9 | 0 |

Batteries—Collins, Comstock and Carrigan, Haley; Boehling and Williams.

Cleveland Defeated St. Louis.

St. Louis, April 21.—Timely hitting gave Cleveland another victory over St. Louis this afternoon by 3 to 1. The game was called at the end of the sixth inning to permit Cleveland to catch a train. In the fourth innings while chasing a foul Severeid crashed into the stand and was knocked unconscious. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland .. .. .. .. | 3 | 6 | 0 |
| St. Louis .. .. .. .. | 1 | 4 | 2 |

Batteries—Steen and O'Neill; James, Perryman and Severeid, Agnew.

Called by agreement.

Athletics Were Shut Out.

Philadelphia, April 21.— New York got only five hits off Bressler and Harper to-day, but three of these were doubles, and all of the extra base drives were mixed with passes and an error, and the visitors won eight to nothing. Fisher was in grand form, and was given splendid support. After Bressler gave three passed in the third inning, Cook cleared the sacks with a double, and scored on Boone's double. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New York .. .. .. .. | 0 | 3 | 1 |
| Philadelphia .. .. .. | 8 | 5 | 1 |

Batteries— Fisher and Nunamaker; Bressler, Harper and McAvoy.

Mr. Lally Attended Several Meetings In City Last Night

Mr. Joe Lally hustled around the city yesterday afternoon from the time of his arrival until eleven o'clock, meeting lacrosse supporters and others who are desirous of having the game restored. At the Y.M.C.A. he found the physical directors, Mr. Carson, a warm advocate of lacrosse. There was a regular meeting of some of the older boys at the "Y.," including Harold Long and Harold Knapman. Mr. Carson stated that he intended to get the boys into lacrosse if the final resort was a "Y." league of several teams. The boys are interested, and, as Mr. Knapman remarked, the game should appeal at the Collegiate, where the ball players are only 50 out of the 200 in attendance. The rest are only playing catch or decorating the side lines.

Mr. Lally stated his opinion that the boys must understand that no sport should be allowed to interfere with their lessons, although the physical development of boys should be a very important item. He also declares that it is a great mistake to fully equip boys either for baseball or lacrosse, and if it comes to a question of giving the sticks to the boys or letting the game die, by all means let the game die. Mr. Lally claims that the professional method of equipping teams has a pernicious influence on amateurism, and if carried out among small boys will ultimately defeat the end desired.

After the meeting at the "Y." Mr. Lally visited the Sacred Heart Church, where an athletic meeting was held in the basement. He asked the committee that when they were deciding the games for the boys they at least give lacrosse some consideration. He dwelt on its benefits, its rejuvenation, and stated that he particularly felt that the restoration of the game would come through the little fellows in the school. Rev. Father O'Brien remarked that he had always liked lacrosse. The committee composed of W. Grady, Peter Milloy, F. McGrath, Henry Guerin, and A. Rose had complete charge of the sports, and it was for them to map out the programme they deemed most advisable.

Fred McGrath was a lacrosse player a few years back. He said he would like the opportunity to help the game along among the boys. Mr. Grady said the executive would discuss lacrosse at a meeting to be held next week.

Eddie Collins Worth His Weight in Gold 'Tis Claimed

"He is worth his weight in gold"—How many times you have heard the phrase used as an extravagant expression for commanding merit or ability.

It is supposed to denote the superlative, beyond which nothing. Yet modern baseball has put our time honoured bromide in the piker class. Eddie Collins, new second-baseman of the White Sox, not only is worth more than his weight in gold, but he is worth three and one-half times his weight in gold. This approximation, moreover, covers his value for a playing period of only five years.

Now let use get busy with our mental arithmetic and figure how this conclusion is reached. Collins was sold by the Philadelphia Athletics for a reported price of $50,000. Many skeptical persons doubted this statement and thought it was only for advertising purposes. They perhaps will be surprised to know that Comiskey not only paid the Athletics $50,000 for Collins, but paid Eddie a bonus of $15,000 for signing a five year contract at $15,000 per annum, or an average of $18,000 a year for five years of service.

When the Federals began to flirt with the premier second sacker of the national game last season Connie Mack signed him to a new five year document with the ten day clause eliminated. Before Eddie attached his John Hancock to the interesting instrument he saw the figures of $11,500 per year inserted.

Collins preferred to play in the east, where his home and friends were. Therefore before Comiskey parted with his $50,000 he authorized President Ban Johnson of the American league to ascertain what Collins would want to play in Chicago. Eddie apparently is as good a financier as he is ball player. The total was staggering, but Comiskey stood the tilt, and this is what his ledger shows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Paid to Athletics | $ 50,000 |
| Bonus to Collins for signing | 15,000 |
| Salary for five years | 75,000 |
| Total | $140,000 |

Now the coinage value of an ounce of gold is $20.67. Twelve ounces, Troy weight, constitute a pound. Therefore a pound of gold is worth $248.04. Eddie Collins weighs 160 pounds and cost $140,000 for five years, or at the rate of $875 a pound. Ergo Eddie Collins cost more than three and one-half times his weight in gold. Q.E.D.

If Collins can make the White Sox contenders for the American league pennant he is worth all this money and more. If he can help the White Sox win a pennant it is a cheap investment. Even at the worst Comiskey is likely to get his money back in increased gate receipts.

All baseball clubs which prove good money getters on the road have some particular star to be featured. Detroit has Ty Cobb, Washington has Walter Johnson, New York has Christy Mathewson, Pittsburg has Hans Wagner, Boston Nationals have Johnny Evers and their pitchers, Boston Americans have Tris Speaker and did have Joe Wood.

A player in the game every day is more valuable than a pitcher, for fans are likely to wait until the star hurler's turn to work, and a manager dislikes to be under the handicap of having to name his pitcher in advance to make the turning stile click, for it lets the enemy frame its hurling corps for the series in anticipation. Eddie Collins played regularly last year, which he considers his greatest in the national game, and expects to do so again this season. For three successive years he has scored the greatest number of runs of any American league player.

CITY LEAGUE EXECUTIVE DISCUSSES CONSTITUTION

A meeting of the Executive of the Peterborough City Baseball League was held last evening at the Review Office, at which the constitution of the League was discussed. The rules will be adopted at the next meeting at which a schedule will also be arranged. It was announced that satisfactory arrangements are being made for the use of Riverside Park. The clubs are reminded that the entrance fee must be paid before to-morrow night. So far, only the East City team has planked down their $25.

War Is Hard on Soccer Clubs Loss In Revenue

Aston Villa Has Had a Particularly Unhappy Experience—Up-to-date $50,000 Less Than Last Year Has Been Taken in Gate Money

LATEST SOCCER GOSSIP

LONDON, April 22.—The disastrous effect of the war on the finances of the leading football clubs are just coming to light. That the majority of the clubs have suffered severely has long been self-evident from the reduced attendance at the league games, but the statements just issued by two clubs which have the biggest following in England — Aston Villa and Bolton Wanderers — only show what can be expected when the smaller and weaker league clubs send out their reports.

Aston Villa has had a particularly unhappy experience, as, in addition to its loss in revenue, it was in the midst of extensive and expensive alterations to its ground [illegible]. Up to date $50,000 less than last year has been taken in gate money, and a loss of $20,000 on the season's working will have to be faced. Bolton Wanderers are $41,500 behind last season's gate receipts, which results in the big loss of $9,094 being made to date.

That all contracts with players, dates for league and international games have been held over until Aug. I was mainly responsible to the chairmen of these two clubs, who both declared that if the war is not over by Sept. 1 it would be the height of folly financially to continue professional football.

Latest Soccer Gossip.

What a fine defence Sheffield United possesses in Gough, Cook and English. They have lost only two goals in their cup tie against Blackpool, Liverpool, Bradford, Oldham, and Bolton. Cook and English, it is interesting to recall, are Tynesiders, and two of the lightest defenders in the league.

Harry Makepeace, the Everton half back and Lancashire cricketer, played in his 51st cup tie against Chelsea.

Lawrence, the Newcastle goalkeeper, possesses the unique record of having appeaded in seven cup final games, including replays. Only one other individual can claim as much. He is Lord Kinnaird.

Bobby Parker, the Everton Centre, is hot in pursuit of Freeman's record. Curiously, the two latest League records have been set up by Merseyside men—first Faybould, and then Freeman and Will Parker follow suit.

South Shields are now certain to again win the North Eastern League championship. They have the wonderful goal average of 130 goals against 26. Irvine Thomley, the old Manchester City Centre, and Bob Whittingham of Chelsea fame, have more than half of this little lot between them. In a recent game against Jarrow, Whittingham bagged six goals, while Thornley netted five times.

Two old Everton players would doubtless like to be the bases for removal from their present domicile. Tommy Wolstenholme and Jack Cameron are said to be "someweher in Germany" waiting for the dove of peace to be let out.

NOTES OF THE DIAMOND.

New York weather has been more than expected by the most rabid baseball fan.. and as a consequence those patrons who usually wait until the sunshiny days of July to attend the games are turning out now.

Reports from Chicago have it that Lavender and Schulte, who refused to speak for more than a year, have slasped each other by hand and now are in league with the rest of the Cubs to bid for honours.

Should Roger Bresnahan( rid the Cubs of the internal strife that has kept the club members at loggerheads for three years he will have made good as a manager if he does nothing else.

In the tour of California and the West with the White Sox "Eddie" Collins spoke several times on the benefit of clean living. He is a shining example of his lectures.

Ban Johnson predicts that the American League race this season will be the hardest fought in the history of the league. Mr. Johnson gets his salary from the American League and should be optimistic.

Unconfirmed rumour has it that one of the recent purchasers of the New York Americans already has thrown down the gauntlet to B. B. Johnson and has joined the opposing minority.

Reports that the Federal League was going to mar the opening of organized baseball by seeking injunctions on several players has been proven unfounded.

The only Giant outfielder who is hitting the ball hard these days is Bob Boucher of the Cardinals.

Ever since Marquard pitched his no hit game the Giant hurlers have been pitching no hit games.

By Mrs. Fred Clarke.

(Wife of the Pittsburg Manager)

I have been asked for my opinion regarding the personnel of the Pittsburg club for 1915—not concerning the players' ability, however, but the class of the men who have been trying for the various positions. With the ability of the members of the squad, I have nothing to do — that is Mr. Clarke's affair—but I will not hesitate to say that our boys are gentlemen in all the word implies and that none of them could fail to be a credit to any club they might belong to.

Ball players as a rule are showing a marked improvement, as regards personal behaviour and class. I have travelled much with my husband and have often come in contact with the men who follow the national pastime. Nor do I hesitate to say that, in the main, they have been men that any lady might be proud to know. The day of the rowdy has passed, and those who still labour under the impression that the gentlemen in baseball are in the hopeless minority are in line for an awakening.

Hotels Want Players.

One fact that should confute the idea that ball players do not know how to conduct themselves off the field is that the best hotels in the country are bidding for baseball patronage. All of us know that in days past the travelling club couldn't get accommodations in a first class hostelry and that ball players were ineligibles immediately their vocation became known.

But how different it is now! From what I have heard, it would have been fatal for a ball player, fifteen years ago, to have carried a full dress suit with him to the training camp. That [illegible] hardly would have been permitted to return home alive, even had he been able to stand up under the scorching he would have been called upon to undergo at the hands of his mates.

To-day, however, it is different. During the formal balls, etc., held at the Eastman hotel in Hot Springs during our recent stay there, no fewer than eight of our boys appeared properly attired and qualified to take stand with any of the guests present—and there were some well known society men there, too.

Ball Tossers Good Dancers.

These ball players could dance as well as could the cotillon leaders present. They were well received by those with whom they came in contact and, I am proud to say, they were never unsuccessful in their efforts to command and retain the respect of the other guests.

The personnel of the present club is as good as any I have ever known to represent Pittsburg. I know that both President Dreyfuss and Mr. Clarke are jealous of their club's reputation and that neither wants any but gentlemen in the lineup. Ball players must be clean livers to succeed and there is no doubt in my mind that whichever players are retained for the approaching season, Pittsburg fans will have nothing to complain of as regards the personal conduct of the men going to make up the club.

BASEBALL FLIES.

Pitcher James twirled the seventh and eighth innings yesterday for the Braves, his first league game this season.

Fitzpatrick had a double for the Braves, and was again hit by the pitcher. He accepted four chances in the field and figured in a double play.

Joe Schultz, for Brooklyn, had two hits, scored three runs and stole a base. He had also two errors in six chances.

Chic Gandil, who has been out of the game with a sore arm, played his first league fixture for Washington yesterday, and celebrated his return by getting a double and triple in as many times at bat.

Only five Giants reached first yesterday on Chalmers of the Phillies. The latter only allowed two hits, and passed three.

SERGT. VICTOR IS IN THE HAMPSTEAD HOSPITAL

Writing to his Mother Here Wounded Peterboro' Soldier Tells of his Experiences—Injured Leg Had to be Opened in Five Places

GETTING GOOD CARE

Sergt. Peter Victor, who was wounded in the leg while in action with the Peterborough quota of the First C.E.F., in France, in writing to his mother, Mrs. Victor, Park Street, from the Hampstead Military Hospital, N.W. England, tells of the awful time he has had with his injured leg. He does not say anything about the circumstances under which he received the wound.

The letter in part is as follows:

Dear Mother,—I'll bet you have been worrying quite a bit, but I really couldn't write before, I've been so bad. I have had an awful time with my leg. Even now they do not know what to make of it. The bullet went through the leg four inches above the knee and splintered the bone. There was a lot of pus in the leg to be drained of, so I went under an operation and had the leg opened in five places. Then they put a rubber tube through the bullet wound to help drain it.

They are very good in the hospital, but strict. They take a lot of trouble with me (they don't get many bad cases here.) But since I came to England I have been lovely. We are getting some nice days here. I guess it's too early for you to have fine weather.

You might send the Examiner now and again so I can see what sort of war news you are getting. Take notice of the new address, dear, because I think I shall be here for a long time. I am the only one in our ward who has no visitors.

Don't let this worry you mother. Remember that while I am here I am not dead. A nurse has just washed me. Then another nurse tucked me up in bed. And yet another nurse came and gave me two oranges, so "I should worry."

Your loving son,
PETER.

morrow they say we shall be sick unto death with the drowsy numbness, which makes sleep welcome.

Go With the Second.

Some are biting hard on rubber pipestems to keep away the pain. But they are game, this battery. Their lieutenant has intimated that they are attached to the second contingent instead of the third, as was understood. It will be satisfaction for them that they went with the second. The further on these contingents run, so these boys reason, the more will their joining smack of conscription. In that respect the first Canadian contingent that went over the sea will ever hold a glory of its own. It will never have an equal; it will never have a rival.

Ptes. Sam. Rathwell, 387 Mark Street, and Wm. Richmond, corner of Erskine and Woodbine Avenue, who have been with the 39th Battalion at Belleville, have been given their discharge on account of illness, which unfitted them for miltary duty. They have returned to the city.

The Examiner received a field-service post card this morning from Harvey J. Staunton, of Peterborough, who is at the front with the 48th Highlanders. The card was written on April 6, and stated that the sender was quite well.

The recruits for the fourth contingent battalion are drilling every night at the armouries. Several new men joined the squad last night and it is expected that regular drill will commence next Monday. Just to show that a route march has no terrors for him, one of the recruits tramped to Hiawatha and back, yesterday, and turned up for drill as usual last night.

Among the sixty-four members of the second contingent of nursing sisters for overseas service who mobilized yesterday at Ottawa, was Mrs. H. T. Bell of Peterborough.

Police Court

The police had several people in Court this morning for cycling on the sidewalk. All were fined $2 each, without costs. The Magistrate threatens to ad costs to the fines for this offence in future.

Was Speeding.

Charles L. Ross, a chauffeur of Toronto, was exceeding the speed limit on Water Street. He was sent to this city from Toronto with an automobile which had been purchased by a local party. He was fined $5.

Patrick Lavery was assessed $6.85, being a fine and costs for drunk and disorderly conduct.

Howard McMaster was drunk in a public place and was separated from a $2 bill this morning.

DEATH PROMINENT METHODIST MINISTER

Rev. H. V. Mounteer Passed Away at Belleville After a Few Hours Illness—Well Known in Peterboro

BELLEVILLE, April 22—Rev. H. V. Mounteer, Methodist Pastor at Madoc, passed away very suddenly yesterday after only a few hours' illness from pleurisy. He was at Flinton yesterday attending a funeral, and was taken suddenly ill while there. He was brought home and grew rapidly worse. The attending physicians could do little for his relief, and later his heart action showed signs of collapse. He is survived by his wife and two sons.

Hedley V. Mounteer was born at Wesleyville, Ont., about 55 years ago. He studied at Wesleyan Theological College, Montreal, and was graduated after a brilliant course. He filled pastoral terms at Malone, Grafton, Smithfield, Cherry Valley, Cavan, Oronto, Cannington, and lastly Madoc, where he had almost completed a four-year period. He had accepted a call to Picton, and expected to move to that town this coming summer.

Mr. Mounteer was one of the athlest members of the Bay of Quinte Conference. He was Chairman of Madoc district and prior to that of Cannington district, and had been Secretary of the Bay of Quinte Conference for some time.

The funeral will be held to-morrow at 1.30 p.m., interment at Wesleyville from Port Hope on arrival of the 6.45 G.T.R. train from the east the same evening.

Deceased was well known in Peterborough and the surrounding district having preached here on different occasions. During his pastorate in Cavan he was a frequent visitor to this city.

Death Of Well Known Engineer

John Alex Culverwell Succumbs After a Brief Illness Was Interested in Development of Trent Canal

John Alexander Culverwell died yesterday at the residence of his sister, Mrs. G. A. Brayley, 92 Binscarth Road, Toronto, after a brief illness. Deceased was 49 years of age, and had attained considerable prominence as a hydraulic and electrical engineer. He was the only son of the late John T. Culverwell, of Toronto, and a grandson of the late Samuel Trent, Somerset, Eng. Deceased was born at West Flamboro on January 1st, 1867. He was educated at the Model School and at Upper Canada College, Toronto. In early life he was connected with the Hon. Peter McLaren in the Provincial and Natural Gas Company. Later he joined the Edison Company as Canadian representative. For some 15 years he had been deeply interested in the development of the Trent Valley Canal.

He was managing director of the Central Ontario Power Co., and as such purchased the Burleigh Falls Power and the Buckhorn Falls Power, also power on the Trent Canal. Later in 1906 he organized the Northumberland and Durham Power Co., of which he was president. In 1902 he married Jessie Houghton, daughter of James L. Hill of New York, and after his marriage resided at Port Hope, where he took a deep interest in philanthropic and social matter. He was a life member of the Engineers' Club of Toronto, and also a member of the Deep Waterways' Association of America. He was an active member of the Anglican church.

Deceased was well known in Peterborough, having appeared before the city Council on different occasions in connection with the proposed sale of water power at Burleigh Falls. For some time he resided in this city.

INVITATION TO THE ST. GEORGE'S SERVICE

The citizens are cordially invited to attend the St. George's service at St. John's church to-morrow evening. The Mayor and members of his Council will be present, as will other members of public bodies who are invited to attend. The relatives of men at the front are expected to be out in large numbers.

The sermon will be preached by Bishop Sweeny of Toronto, and special music will be provided by the amalgamated choirs of Anglican churches of the city. The service commences at 8 p.m.

$83,000,000 CONTRACT FROM THE RUSSIANS

Calls For Five Million Shrapnel and Howitzer Shells

Special Cable to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., April 22.—Details of the great 83 million dollar shell contract awarded by the Russian government to the Canadian Car and Foundry Company of Montreal, and Amherst recently, and of the sub-letting of this huge order to various Canadian firms, has become available here. The contract was secured through the Russian Commercial Attache, C. A. Medzekhovsky, and calls for five million shrapnel shells and howitzer shells at an average cost price of $17.85. It is stated unofficially that 40,000 18 pound shrapnel shells per day are now being turned out by Canadian foundries and other firms. The total profits are expected to be 25 per cent. It is further stipulated that the Canadian Company has an option on further orders placed by Russian from time to time.

COMMISSION WILL PURCHASE A CAR

For the Use of the Waterworks Department--Account With Power Co. is Disputed

Mr. R. L. Dobbin, Waterworks Superintendent, has been authorized by the Utilities Commission to purchase a roadster motor car, equipped with a truck body, at the price of $500. This will be used in connection with the department.

The Superintendent has reported that two of the lead services on Charlotte Street had been taken up and relaid. He was directed to use his discretion as to re-laying other services on Charlotte Street.

Must Be Paid.

A letter was read from the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Company, regarding an account sent them for power served to Wand's Planing Mill and claiming that they served the power and that it was only a matter of accommodation in using the city's line. The letter was referred to Mr. Fisk, Manager of the Utilities Commission, with instructions to reply that the Commission had paid the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission for the power, and must charge for it.

LOCAL WINDOW IN COMPETITION

Local people will be interested in the window display at the Peterborough Hardware Company store this week, when it is known that it had been photographed for a $2,000.00 prize in the Rice Leaders of the World Competition. Mr. Bert McClennan dressed the window which surely reflects great credit upon his ability in that direction.

Anyone going by the store would do well to take a look at the north window, which is the one dressed for the competition. It is filled with Carborundum stones with the banner of the Rice Leaders Association in a prominent place.

The Association gives, annually, $15,000 in cash prizes for window displays. The banner must be part of the window display, and it represents Honour, Quality and Strength. There are 463 prizes in all, and Mr. McClennan has the best wishes of his many friends who will watch with interest the result of the contest.

Roosevelt On the Stand

Special to The Examiner.

SYRACUSE, N.Y., April 22.—Col. Roosevelt to-day began his cross-examination in the libel suit of William Barnes. He began tamely, devoid of expected thrill. The Colonel divested himself of belligerency. Barnes' counsel did plunge into badgering tactics.

The Colonel took the stand about 11:30, and his examination was expected to continue all afternoon. He will be followed by his former secretary in the White House, William Loeb.

During the first hour's cross inquiry before the noon recess, the Colonel gave little important attentions to his testimony. He refused to get "riled."

He was calm, without bluster, almost to the point of lethargy.

At times he snapped back tart answers, sometimes they were tinged with humour. He pursed out his lips and bared his teeth, with his lower jaw projecting, when he hammered home the point, slapping the arm of his chair.

Tragic Death Of Lindsay Man

W. E. Jones' Body Found Mangled on Track at Brooklin—Was Fireman on G.T.R.

LINDSAY, April 22—W. E. Jones a G.T.R. fireman who resided on Georgina Street, here, was killed yesterday at Brooklin, Ont. He was fireman on No. 387 train, which was on its way to Whitby from Manilla, when the accident occurred. He had stepped down from the locomotive and gone between the tender and the first car. He was not missed until his body was found horribly mangled on the track.

He was an Englishman by birth, and is survived by his wife and three children.

EXERCISE AND GRECIAN BEAUTY

WHAT IT MEANS

Many thousands of women are nowadays paying attention to physical culture and the proper exercise of their body muscles, where, thirty years ago or fifty years ago there was no thought expended on this science, which is quite necessary to physical beauty. The reason the Greeks, both men and women, excelled in beautiful and symmetrical forms was because of the attention they paid to the proper exercise. Then, too, they were untrammeled by corsets, shoes and the inconveniences of clothing. To the minds of some women the idea of physical exercise conveys only the idea of hard fatiguing work. Mild exercise continued day after day is best for the body and spirits and health. Without proper exercise there can be no health, and without health there can be no real beauty.

There is no stronger proof of the sound remedial value of Dr. Pierce's Favourite Prescription than that it restores the wasted form to its wonted roundness.

The mighty restorative Prescription speedily causes all womanly troubles to disappear, removes pain and misery at certain times and brings back health and strength to nervous, irritable and exhausted women.

It is a wonderful prescription prepared only from Nature's roots with glycerine, with no alcohol to falsely stimulate. It banishes pain, headache, backache, low spirits, hot flashes, dragging-down sensations, worry and sleeplessness surely and without loss of time.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce, by letter, free. Address Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y. —Advt.

Dr. Pierce's medicines are manufactured in Canada at the World's Dispensary, Bridgeburg, Ont.

RUSSIAN DERIGIBLES DROP BOMBS ON ENEMY'S TRANSPORTS

British Airmen Penetrating Well Into German Territory

CARPATHIAN CAMPAIGN IS AT A STANDSTILL

Because of Melting Snow and Spring Rains---Czar on Visit of Inspection to the Russian Front.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PETROGRAD, April 23.—The Czar arrived at Lemberg to-day on route to inspect the Russian front in Galicia and the Carpathians. Because of melting snow and spring rains the campaign generally is at a standstill. Plenty of rifle and artillery exchanges but no attempt at general advance is possible at this time.

The centre of exchanges is still Uszok Pass, where additional fresh Russian troops have been brought up in the Carpathians and the Bukowina front. The Czar's troops are strongly entrenched in all their recently won territory.

RUSSIAN DIRIGIBLES BUSY.

PETROGRAD, April 23.—Russian dirigibles are now being used to harass Gen. Von Hindenburg's lines of communication. An official statement issued to-day shews that one of them bombarded German positions near Plock on Thursday, dropping fifteen bombs on the enemy's transports, badly damaging them. Several German boats on the Vistula also were sunk. Two other dirigibles dropped bombs on a railway station at Mlawa and on a German aerodrome at Banniky, causing great damage.

RUNNING WILD OVER TRENCHES.

LONDON, Eng., April 23.—British aviators are running wild over German trenches in Belgium.

Scores are penetrating well into German territory. A railway signal basis was bombarded successfully, interfering with German trains. Gen. French tells of an attack by nineteen British aviators who dropped bombs on an Zeppelin shed near Ghent.

He declares that a great explosion took place in the shed and it is supposed that two dirigibles inside of it were destroyed.

"WE HOLD THE ENTIRE CREST AND DOMINATE THE ENTIRE SECTION"

Says Sir John French in His Official Report To-day—Germans Attempting a Drive Against British Lines at Labassee

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, Eng., April 23.—(Special cable.)—"We hold the entire crest and dominate the entire section," proudly declares Field Marshall Sir John French in his official report to-day.

The Germans were attacking again to-day and were also attempting a drive against the British lines at Labassee and along the bank of the canal there.

In all of their operations along the British front in Belgium, the Germans are utilizing their sappers. It is plain from the vast number engaged, that various regiments on the eastern front must have been robbed of these trained experts, as mining operations are reported from the North Sea, well down into the territory between the Meuse and the Moselle.

It is understood here that newer units of the British expeditionary army, including Canadians, are now gradually receiving initial baptism of fire, Gen. French taking the present opportunity to season his volunteers without exposing them to the great risk that will come when the offensive is directed against miles and miles of German trenches which stretch like a gigantic spider web from the British front to the inside of German territory.

While interest in land encounters is intense, the nation is also expectantly listening for great news from the North Sea and the Dardanelles.

Health of the Canadians Is Excellent

LONDON, April 23. — A general just returned from France states that the health of the Canadian troops is remarkably good. There is not a single case of enteric, nor is any other disease prevalent.

No. 2 General Hospital is now open under Major McKee. The Canadians soon will have a total hospital accommodation of 7,000 beds. Another convalescent home has been established at Bromley by Harold Kennedy, of Quebec, and the Shorncliffe home soon will be ready.

No Canteens Dry or Wet at Military Camp

KINGSTON, Ont., April 23.— That there will be no canteens, either wet or dry at the military camp which opens at Barriefield on May 15, is the latest report. Kingstonians have asked for permission to conduct canteens, but no permits have been issued. Four thousand men will be at this camp and the grounds will be taxed to the limit.

The Same Result.

"How long have they been married?"

"About five years."

"Did she make him a good wife?"

"No; but she made him an awfully good husband."

CHILD KIDNAPPED BY ITS MOTHER

An Interesting Verdict—Mother Can Retain Her Child After Parting With Her

KINGSTON, April 23—Elisa Richardson, a young woman, was arrested for kidnapping her own child, a baby girl of three years, but Magistrate Farrell found that the young woman had not committed an unlawful act, dismissed the charge against the young woman and gave the child back to her.

On March 16 the mother gave the child into the care of Mrs. Helen Bearance, and had papers drawn up by a lawyer. On Monday last the mother went to the home of Mrs. Bearance, and on pretence of taking the child out to buy her some sweets, took her away and hid her at the home of a relative.

D. A. Givens, counsel for the accused, said that there was no law to prevent a mother from taking possession of her own child, and the magistrate held the same view.

BISURATED MAGNESIA

A well-known medical writer says: "I always first prescribe Bisurated Magnesia in every case of hyperacidity (sour acid stomach) that comes to me." ## To Hasten the Passage of the Straits

PARIS, April 23.—The best means for hastening the passage of the Dardanelles by the allies' warships was one of the principal subjects of a conference yesterday between Minister of Marine Augagneur and Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty. The conference was held in the north of France.

On his return to Paris, M. Augagneur told a representative of the Havas Agency that the public would be wrong in thinking that the operations in the Dardanelles had been suspended.

"The French navy," M. Augagneur added, "never has thought that the straits could be forced without preparation, but it has always believed and is more than ever convinced, that the undertaking is politically desirable, and before long the object so ardently desired will be attained."

M. Augagneur said the general naval situation of Great Britain and France was in every way very favourable.

A despatch to the Havas Agency from Athens says that the bombardment of Turkish positions on the Gallipoli Peninsula continues without interruption.

NEW PLOT TO KIDNAP HARRY THAW

NEW YORK, April 23.—Rumours of a new plot to kidnap Harry K. Thaw caused Sheriff Griffenhagen to take extraordinary precautions when the slayer of Stanford White was again brought into court to-day.

Ten deputy sheriffs surrounded Thaw when he left the tombs and scattered about the Criminal Courts building was nearly a score of detectives.

Eggs 25 Cents Each in France

And Butter 60 Cents a Pound Says Canadian Soldier.

TORONTO, April 23.—Corporal George Hall, of the 48th Highlanders, writes from France under date of April 4 to his mother in Earlscourt, as follows:

"This is Easter Sunday, and though I am away from home it did not keep some of us from holding it in somewhat usual fashion. He had two fried eggs each and some home-baked scones which were sent to one of the boys by his people in Scotland. Eggs bought here cost twenty-five cents each, and we generally have one fried nearly every morning when we are in billets, so we don't fare too bad at times. The food served out to us gets a trifle monotonous, so we buy all we can get and have as good a time as possible. Things in general are dear here—butter costing sixty cents a pound; large loaf, ten cents; candles, two cents each, and matches two cents a box. The last item we cannot do without.

"Early this morning we attended church parade. We marched a good two miles to a quaint old French village. The service was held in a temporary building.

"We have been getting plenty of hard work lately, making us fit for the heavy and dangerous work which lies ahead of us."

The population in Iceland increased last year by 5,000, the first annual gain in many years.

20,000 SHELLS FIRED OVER 400 YARD FRONT

Turned Woods Into an Inferno---Whole Forest Was Levelled ---Entire Hill Disappeared in a Cloud of Smoke.

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

PARIS, April 22.—An official statement issued by the Press Bureau to-day says: Since the month of September violent engagements have been delivered, accompanied by grenade and bomb-throwing, in the Brule wood and the Ailly wood. Infinitely small sections of ground were fought for foot by foot. Our troops were faced by a courageous and ardent foe, including contingents of Bavarian troops, perfectly disciplined and well equipped, thanks to the proximity of the Metz stronghold. The officers of these troops kept on telling them that the success of their efforts would bring about the fall of Verdun. As a matter of fact the German general staff gave up long since the attempt to invest that fortress, which was started in September, and it is now we who are threatening St. Mihiel.

ARTILLERY FROM METZ.

The Ailly wood is about three kilometres (two miles' from the town, and it was to stop all progress on our part on the southern crests in the Apremont forest that the enemy adopted this aggressive attitude. The Germans have used in these attacks light artillery and powerful material. Hand grenades were thrown without regard to the cost, and aerial bombs containing large charges of explosives were launched. They also brought up for use on the slopes pieces of heavy artillery from Metz. They defiled from the shelter of the wood and frequently displayed their guns by using the interseeting roads of the forest.

All winter we sustained the shock of the enemy, and while by little we were able to force him to relax up to the time when, renouncing his offensive, he was content to remain on the defensive, which, however, is still tenacious and stubborn. The initiative now belongs to us. Our attacks in the recent engagements carried out methodically and energetically have permitted us to realize a success of which our troops have reason to be proud—the capture of the summit in the Ailly wood.

The communique continues:—

"All the Ailly woods, which constituted a strong and well fortified support for the Germans, is now entirely in French hands, conquered for the most part by troops from the centre of France, after several days of systematic preparations by a heavy fire from 3-inch and big guns and by aerial torpedoes.

"At certain points the Germans had constructed in front of moats twelve yards wide spiked barriers extending about six feet above the level of the earth, surrounded by barbed wire entanglements, which were so intricate as to make them impervious to any tools.

WORK OF THE ARTILLERY.

"A concentration of artillery fire opened large breaches in this defence; parapets were sent crashing to the ground, and dismembered bodies were blown into the air above the clouds of smoke. The earth was strewn with overturned trees and branches.

Canadian Soldiers in Peterboro' Canoes on the River Thames

LONDON, April 20.—As a striking example of the raw material at hand for fresh armies, the attendance of forty thousand persons, mostly men and boys, at the big football match at Chelsea on Good Friday may be cited. The majority of those who cheered and encouraged the home team to eat up Bradford City, the opposing soccer heroes, were lusty young men all capable of handling rifles.

"Why, even the West End clubs, of whose emptiness we are always hearing, are half-filled with young 'nuts' in spats and one-buttoned coats who ought to be at the front," quoth an officer familiar with the inside of many of these luxurious places. "They don't seem to realise what we are up against."

EASTER IN LONDON.

The War Office having advised the railways to cut out cheap Easter fares this season was responsible for many Londoners remaining in town these holidays. But many blinds in many Mayfair and Belgravia mansions were drawn, the wealthy occupants not being affected by differences of a few shillings in the price of tickets being off in the country. Contiguous to these aristocratic districts, Hyde Park had, though far scantier than in times of peace, its parade of well-dressed people resplendent in Easter finery. Grey-haired retired colonels cantered fine horses along the sandy reaches of Rotten Row on Easter Sunday, while handsome women equestriennes, their men-folk mostly at the front, rode, attended by grooms. Wounded young officers hobbled across from nearby hospitals and subsided onto benches to watch the riders and enjoy the spring air as fresh in the broad green expanse of the big park.

TORONTO GIRL NURSES.

Even in the Green Park, adjoining bomb screen-protected Buckingham Palace, the War Office is erecting rows of little wooden shacks for officers. Passing here the other day a correspondent met two young Torontonians, a soldier an a nurse, to wit, Miss Barbara Blackstock and her brother Gibbs. Miss Blackstock, with Miss Margaret Geddes and several other Toronto young ladies are training for the London military hospitals.

CANADIANS EVERYWHERE.

Out at Richmond on Easter Monday Canadian soldiers were to be observed among the crowds of holiday makers. If the men in their khaki of distinctive cut and colour had not been distinguishable from this alone, their handling of the paddles in the Peterborough canoes on the Thames would have speedily revealed their nationality to a man from the Dominion.

Canadians everywhere. Even out at the Zoo one need not feel lonely. Some Canucks are permanently billeted there at the foot of the imitation concrete mountains where mountain goats gambol—in the bear den. Here Horatio C. Hocken's gift, Temagami Bruin, once a regimental mascot, is happy with expatriated grizzlies, exiled cinnamons and others of ilk, begging the odd bun and the elusive gum-drop from its generous public.

Hotel Clerk With a Record

For Last Theft He Goes to Jail—Too Old for Pen.

ST. CATHARINES, April 23—Four months in jail was the sentence passed upon J. Osborne, the sixty-five-year-old hotel clerk who committed a robbery at the Russell House, his age preventing his sentence to the Central Prison. Osborne, according to finger print records, has served three terms at St. Vincent de Paul, Montreal. Osborne was caught on the train at Belleville while trying to make Montreal on the train.

Striking It Right.

He (soulfully)—Don't you often sigh for the wings of a bird, Miss Charmer?

She (decidedly)—Indeed I do! I need some trimming for a new hat badly!

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment. Money Back If It Fails

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatment, we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general is Rexall Kidney Pills.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Pills are unexcelled, and that they will do all we claim, that we sell them with our own personal guarantee that they shall not cost the user a cent if they should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Pills, for kidney ailments that resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time, they will positively remove all symptoms and effect permanent relief.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Pils, and our generous guarantee should convince the most sceptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Pills at our risk. Price 50c. Sold in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store.

WANTS TO KNOW

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—Kindly allow me space in your valuable paper to ask a couple of questions with reference to our Police Department, questions which I have heard many times the last few months:

1. Is it necessary that our detectives should always travel in pairs?

2. Why are the merchants of Peterborough subjected to a special tax of $6.20 a year each, for night protection, when they already pay indirectly through their taxes for the maintenance of a police department for this same protection; and why do the city make it necessary for this special night watchman to go around and collect his own living in the day times when he should be in bed resting up for his night work?

A Taxpayer.

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irriration or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

The tense muscles of the prisoner relaxed and a shivering fit shook him from head to foot. He could see the blow that he had striven to avert falling while he stood impotent. He had taken every risk, made every sacrifice man could make, to turn it aside. Now he had been told that he had failed. It was not easy to admit defeat. His debonair courage had gone.

Sir Hilary Thornton laid a hand gently on his shoulder. "My dear Mr. Grell," he said, "I don't want to use the ordinary cant about duty and all the rest of it. We may sympathise with you—personally, I admire the attitude you have taken, though perhaps I shouldn't say it—but our own feelings do not matter the toss of a button. Nothing you can do or say will swerve us from what we judge to be the interests of justice."

"Let me alone for a little while," answered Grell dully; "I want to think."

They sent him back to the detention-room where, with a constable seated opposite to him, he was to spend the night. Foyle rested one arm on the mantelpiece and kicked the fire viciously into a blaze.

"Ours is an ungrateful business, Sir Hilary," he grumbled, "but I've never come across a man who put so many difficulties in the way of being saved from the gallows as Mr. Robert Grell."

Thornton took a long breath that was almost a sigh. "Poor chap," he said reflectively. "Poor chap!" And then, after an interval, "Poor girl! Couldn't you have dropped a hint, Foyle?"

The introduction of sentiment into business was a folly that Heldon Foyle seldom permitted himself. With a shrug he pulled himself together. He shook his head. "We've got to be more certain yet. I daren't tell him too much—for my idea may prove to be wrong. You must remember that it was undoubtedly Eileen Meredith's finger-prints on the dagger. At present it is only surmise of mine how they got there. Finding the prints on her blotting-pad, which I showed you, corresponded with those on the dagger you gave me, was one of the biggest surprises of my life. But we may clear it up now."

"H'm," said Thornton. "Well, we shall have to [illegible]."

A thought struck Foyle. He stood rigid as a statue for a moment, and then slapped his knee with sudden energy, "By God! I believe I've got it!" he exclaimed, and jumped for the telephone.

"Put me through to the Yard. . . . Hello! I want Mr. Grant. . . . That you, Grant? . . . About the Grosvenor Gardens case. Tell me. Might the finger-prints on the dagger have been caused by some one withdrawing it and replacing it after the murder had been committed? Would the second handling have obliterated first prints? . . . Blurred them. I see. But if the person who first handled the dagger wore gloves? Thanks. That's what I wanted to know."

He replaced the receiver and turned triumphantly on Thornton. "That bears out my idea, Sir Hilary. Will you excuse me while I see if Bolt's on the premises?"

Without waiting for a reply, he darted from the room. The Assistant Commissioner's brow puckered and he thoughtfully replaced the upset furniture. By the time he had finished Foyle had returned.

"Just caught him," he said. "I've sent him to collect all the men he can find to make some fresh inquiries."

"I'm a little bewildered," confessed Thornton, jingling some money in his trousers pockets and turning blankly upon the superintendent. "Do you think you'll be able to do it—to bring this crime home to the Princess Petrovska?"

"I think I can," replied the superintendent. "I was a blind ass not to see it earlier. Lola's alibi—which is proved to be false, if what Grell and Abramovitch say is true — helped to blind me. I was thrown off, too, by the finger-prints on the blotting-pad, which corresponded to those on the dagger, and also to those on the typewritten warning which Ivan sent me. The only plausible motive for Grell's actions, if he was not guilty himself—and that we are fairly certain of—was his desire to shield some one else. There could be only one person for whom he was willing to make such a sacrifice—Lady Eileen Meredith."

"Yes, I understand that. But the finger-prints on the warning?"

"They puzzled me for a while. But that was made clear when I talked to Ivan. He had typed it on the blank half-sheet of a letter given to him by Grell. That letter—it is only an assumption of mine—was one that had been written to Grell by Lady Eileen. That clears that point."

"Still, I don't see how you have anything against Lola more than you had before."

"There is this. The weak link in the chain of evidence against Lady Eileen Meredith was the lack of motive. That was why I did not have her arrested immediately I found that it was her finger-prints upon the dagger. The strongest point against the Princess is the motive. She was married to Goldenburg, but was not on the best of terms with him. She was bought by Grell to play the part of Delilah to the blackmailer. My theory is this—bear in mind that it is only a theory at the moment. Grell, for some reason, left her alone with Goldenburg in his study. There was a quarrel, and she stabbed him. It must have been all over in a few seconds, and there was no outcry. You will remember that the body was found on a couch in a recess, and you may have noted that curtains could be drawn across to shield it from the rest of the room. Petrovska may have drawn the curtains and slipped away before Grell returned. She is a woman of nerve and would at once set about manufacturing an alibi."

"All this is very ingenious, Foyle," remarked Thornton, "but I don't know that it sounds altogether convincing to me."

"It is pure surmise, Sir Hilary. Its chief merit is that it fits the facts. Of course, Lady Eileen may be the murderess after all. I am only working out an alternative. To carry it on a bit further. When Lady Eileen came, Ivan showed her up to the room. No one answered his knock. She went in and shut the door after her. It is my idea that there was no one in there when she discovered the dead man. She was dumbfounded at first, and probably the body being in the shade did not permit her to see the face clearly. She placed her hand on the hilt of the dagger, intending to withdraw it, but could not bring herself to use the necessary force."

"Why didn't she call out?" demanded Thornton. "It seems to me——"

"There is no accounting for actions arising out of sudden emotions. Lady Eileen Meredith is as extraordinary a woman in her way as the Princess Petrovska in hers. She had found a man murdered in her lover's study—and she may have had a shrewd idea of the reason why she was summoned here. You follow me? Probably as she stood there, hesitating what to do, Grell returned. I think it likely that he stood by the door, took in the situation quietly, and stole away with the impression that she had killed Goldenburg. If she was bending over the dead man, that was what he might naturally think.

"It is likely that he would make up his mind in an instant. To him the fact that she had raised no outcry would be significant of her guilt. She, let us suppose, stole away, having made no attempt to examine the body closely and not daring to summon any one, for fear that Grell should prove to be the murderer. He watched her go, already determined to destroy the scent by taking the blame on his own shoulders.

"By the time she reached her own home reflection had shown her that there was one possible chance that Grell might not be guilty. She rang up the St. Jermyn's Club and asked for him. Fairfield answered, declaring that his friend was in the club, but busy—too busy to talk to the girl he was to marry next day, mark you. It is idle to suppose that she did not appreciate the excuse as a flimsy one — one manufactured perhaps for the purpose of an alibi. She must have gone to bed filled with foreboding.

"All this is hypothesis. I am supposing that she never closely inspected the features of the dead man. The next morning she is informed that Grell was the victim. At once the lie that Fairfield told her assumed a new aspect. She denounced him as the murderer. She dared not say that she was the first to discover the body, for that would have meant revealing that she knew he was being blackmailed.

"Then the Princess Petrovska paid her a visit and told her that Grell was not dead but in hiding. There was nothing for it, in default of any explanation, but to revert to the thought that he was the murderer. She went to extreme lengths to help him—even to forgery. She believes him guilty still; he believes her guilty."

"But Petrovska?" objected Thornton.

"I was coming to that. She is a clever woman. When Grell got in touch with her the following day she may have had many reasons for assisting him. She most likely had a shrewd idea of the situation and resolved to profit by it to avert suspicion. While Grell was suspected she would be safe. But it may have occurred to her that if we laid our hands on him and he told us anything, we might get on her track. Suppose that to be so, it is not difficult to see why she should take a prominent part in assisting him. She would still have a certain amount of money, for he paid her to come to England, and she, as we know, would stand at nothing."

"It all sounds very interesting," commented the Assistant Commissioner, "but it looks to me as though it may be a tough proposition to get evidence bearing it out."

Foyle pulled out his watch. "My idea may all tumble to pieces as soon as a test is applied. I can't pretend to be infallible. But we can try. I am going back to Scotland Yard now, sir. It is ten o'clock. I expect to be at it all night. Are you coming back?"

"No, I don't think I can be of any assistance to you. I shall be glad if your theory does come out all right this time. The alternative suspicions are horrible. Good night, Mr. Foyle."

THE MASTER KEY

By John Fleming Wilson

By special arrangement for this paper a photo-drama corresponding to the installments of "The Master Key" may now be seen at the leading moving picture theatres. By arrangement made with the Universal Film Manufacturing Company it is not only possible to read "The Master Key" in this paper, but also afterward to see moving pictures of our story.

CHAPTER III.

The Runaway Car.

MANY a man writes down on paper the things he cannot articulate. Thomas Gallon, dreaming of two women, taciturn and silent as he was, wrote down the thoughts which he could not express in speech. His diary, well thumbed, held the history of many a lonely night, but of all these nights there was one that stood out in his mind.

It was the darkness inclosing a woman on a bed. He still heard her whispered cry, "You speak of God, Tom, but I have no religion but motherhood." Before his closed eyes came the vision of a lamp lit, then almost an apparition—the face of his daughter. One life had fled, possibly appalled by the horrors of a world that recks not of our poor humanity. Yet there was in the dead woman's arms a child, grotesquely asleep, as if unawakened to the sorrows this mother had known.

"Ruth!" he cried. There was no answer from the still woman in the darkness, but thus he had christened his only child.

It seemed to him as if that echo still reverberated from the moon washed hills which marked the site of "The Master Key."

"I am getting old," he thought as he turned the pages of the diary as if unconsciously counting the years since a woman had leaned over his shoulder.

"Ruth!" he murmured again.

The problem before him was no longer dim and vague, as it had been in the days of his prime, but absolutely distinct and clear—what was to become of Ruth when he died? With his trained business intelligence he set himself to solve this question.

He reviewed in his mind all the men and women he had known. It was a strange procession. They marched before his sharpened vision, old partners, fresh young girls, mature women, men with check books in their hands, men dying of thirst on the desert—and Wilkerson. He sternly put out of his mind the thought of his former partner—the man—was he dead? If he had not died that night in the gulch, if he were still alive, knowing the secret of "The Master Key," who would save Ruth from his vengeance?

Then there rose before his mind the straight, strong, almost austere figure of his mining engineer, John Dorr—youthful, of course, but he had proved himself wholly competent in almost every task that had been given him.

The old man thought more deeply. He recalled his own former years. He himself had broken down the iron barriers of a cold world for the sake of a woman whose image Ruth was. He had seen in John Dorr's eyes the growing flame of love. Long experience had taught the old man that there is no passion so dependable in this world as love.

John Dorr loved Ruth. It needed no monetary bond to assure his fidelity to her interests, and with the sudden, swift, alert step of a man who had made his final decision he went out on the porch and called, "John, John!"

Within the interior of the little house down the hill the engineer of Thomas Gallon's mine had abandoned his blueprints to study the letters on a little pennant which represented his first victory, a touchdown on the football field within the last ten seconds of play. He knew better than any one that his mission to Valle Vista was futile. Using every resource at his command, he could find no paying ore, and yet—there was the pennant, the emblem of victory hard fought and hard won. Should he give up now? He heard a clear, stern call from up the hill—"John, John!"

"I'll win out yet for Ruth's sake," he said as he answered that imperious cry.

Other ears heard that call, and as John hastened down the hill he saw Ruth's figure by the side of the bungalow, and as if by the opening of a shutter he once more saw the lights of Broadway and a table spread with linen, two people sitting there—his evil geniuses.

In this complex and highly organized civilization of ours no man can be assured that at any moment some other man possibly thousands of miles distant is not planning an act whose portent would never occur to him.

At a table in a New York restaurant a man and woman were sitting with the words "Gallon," "Dorr" and "Wilkerson" on their lips.

"Harry Wilkerson has found Tom Gallon," she said quietly. "I wonder what will happen?"

Her companion laughed. "Gallon? I had a college mate named 'Dorr,' who is working for a man named 'Gallon' somewhere out in the mines."

The woman's dark eyes lit up, and she seemed more strikingly handsome as she allowed her sudden passion to flood her somber face with color.

"There is money in that mine, George Crane!" she said. "But this man Dorr—what sort of chap is he? You mining stockbrokers usually have information as to all these engineers."

The slender man with the shrewd face seated opposite her dropped his eyes. "To tell you the truth, Mrs. Darnell, I never liked John Dorr."

"Neither does Harry," she put in quickly.

The stockbroker looked at his plate a moment and then pulled out his memorandum book. "Listen, Jean," he said in a tone she recognized as utterly businesslike. "Shall I buy 'Master Key' stock?"

"There is a girl back there"— she went on intensely.

Crane looked up swiftly. He caught a glint of the jealousy in the woman's eyes. For his own purpose she was most useful, so he snapped the rubber band around his memorandum book, put it back in his pocket and said with finality, "Jean, I'll buy 'Master Key' stock at any price!"

* * * * * * *

Mastering the cry which had come to him from Thomas Gallon's bungalow and realizing that in it was a tone he had never heard before, John Dorr strode down the hill. As he crossed the gulch he saw the door of the bungalow open, and Ruth appeared.

"I thought I heard your father call," he said awkwardly.

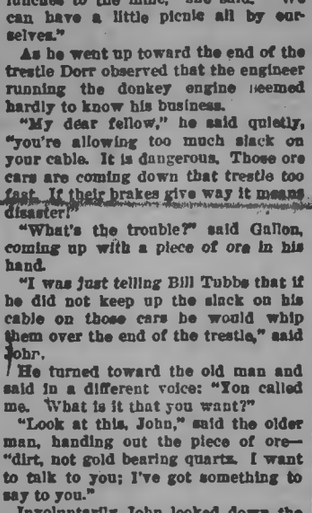
"He was calling you," she answered quietly, "but he went over toward the dump. I think he wants you there."

Ruth laid her little hand on John Dorr's brawny arm. "John," she said, the swift color rising in her cheeks, "I don't want to say anything to make trouble, but father is worried. He trusts you; but, you know, we haven't recovered the lost vein."

John looked her straight in the eye. "Leave it to me."

Her appealing hands crept up his arms, and for one moment she allowed him to read her soul. She made a potent plea, directed by the instinct of a woman who is loved. "John, look after him. He is doing it for me."

Dorr hesitated a moment. It was the first thing Ruth had ever asked him. He felt that he ought to respond to this appeal in some most convincing way, but he could formulate no phrase that would express at once his determination to do everything in his power to help her father and his gratitude that she had taken him into her confidence, so he merely smiled, waved his hand and went down the hill toward the dump beneath the head end of the spraddling trestle.



"Leave it to me."

She called him back. "I forgot it was lunchtime," she said shyly.

"I must get down to your father," he said rather brusquely.

"Then I'll bring you both down your lunches to the mine," she said. "We can have a little picnic all by ourselves."

As he went up toward the end of the trestle Dorr observed that the engineer running the donkey engine seemed hardly to know his business.

"My dear fellow," he said quietly, "you're allowing too much slack on your cable. It is dangerous. Those ore cars are coming down that trestle too fast. If their brakes give way it means disaster!"

"What's the trouble?" said Gallon, coming up with a piece of ore in his hand.

"I was just telling Bill Tubbs that if he did not keep up the slack on his cable on those cars he would whip them over the end of the trestle," said John.

He turned toward the old man and said in a different voice: "You called me. What is it that you want?"

"Look at this, John," said the older man, handing out the piece of ore—"dirt, not gold bearing quartz. I want to talk to you; I've got something to say to you."

Involuntarily John looked down the street. He saw Ruth coming, swinging the lunch basket in her hand. He remembered her shy appeal that he would do the best he could for "The Master Key."

"I think we had better go into the mine; we can talk there," he said.

"They are setting off a blast," Gallon remarked.

Dorr looked up at the car roaring past them overhead and said suddenly: "Before anything else you ought to fix that trestle. Some day a car will go over on the dump."

Gallon looked up and then glanced at Dorr. "I guess you're right, John; I've thought of that myself. Things have kind of gone at loose ends. Now I'll see to it myself with your help, because I have something to say to you."

"There comes Ruth with a basket of lunch," said Dorr.

"Oh, yes. When I am away from the house she often picnics with me here in the mine. Say, I'm going up on the trestle. Have another talk with Tubbs. He is all right, but he has got careless. Tell him to keep up the slack of his cable. I tell you, John, I have wanted to talk to you for a long time, but first I'm going to look after that cable, because I can see you are right and we might have a bad accident."

As the old man started into the mine, putting one foot after the other with that carelessness characteristic of men becoming decrepit, a man ran out of the mouth of the mine waving his arms. Almost instantly following him came a puff of gray-blue smoke, which soared upward and spread out as if it were the blossom of a cloud warmed into full bloom by the hot sunlight pouring down into the valley.

Ruth Hastened Toward the Entrance of the Mine.

Ruth let fall the lunch basket and stared upward at that dark, murky hole in the hill. Was John there? Was her father there? She knew that that bulky cloud blooming into the heavens meant death beneath the ground. Unwittingly she cried "John!" Then she remembered her filial duty, and her next word, whispered toward that billowing, eddying mass of vapor was "Father!"

Thus do maidens confess to God the secrets of their heart, but let us see how they conceal from men these same sacred mysteries.

Ruth hastened her pace toward the entrance of the mine. The shale gave way under her little feet, but she struggled upward until she reached the trestle. Having lived all her life in a mining camp, there was no terror for her in anything but falling rock. That effusion of smoke floating over the hillside seemed to speak of disaster. She knew the peril of a premature explosion, and she also knew every working of "The Master Key." And again she wondered whether it was John Dorr or her father or both who were stifling for air within that dark tunnel.

She did not see John Dorr talking to the engineer below her, nor did she see the miner who had just left the mine and was scrambling down the ladder. Her thought was that during this noon hour, when both shifts were off duty, her father had gone in and accidentally set off a blast. What blasting was done in "The Master Key" usually took place during the nooning, but owing to carelessness it was sometimes the case that all the blasts were not set off. She had seen men belched out of that dark hole before furious gusts of gas. And yet why was the ore car inside? That, too, spelled disaster.

She dropped the lunch basket and pulled out the pocket electric light which she always carried. It burned only a tiny hole in the billowing smoke. She rushed blindly in, trusting to her long familiarity with the tunnel to find her father.

Thus it was that father and daughter passed each other in the darkness; Gallon grimly but silently cursing the awkwardness of his men, Ruth trying to choke out the names of the two men she loved. Suddenly she came into the free air. The little beam of her lamp showed her nothing but an ore car and the tools dropped by the last shift when they had quit for dinner.

"Father!" she cried, peering into the darkness beyond.

"John!"

She stepped on into the shadow and called again. Her foot slipped on the rough floor of the tunnel, and as she tried to save herself her lamp fell. A moment later she saw a trickle of fire running along toward the heading. It was a fuse leading to a blast that had not yet been shot. With all light gone except that blue flicker, penned in as she was by the ore car, standing there with set brakes, what hope had she? How long would it be before that little gust of flame reached the powder?

"The Master Key" Mine.

Thomas Gallon was old fashioned in many ways. Instead of using 60 per cent dynamite everywhere and detonating it by electricity, he still insisted on using old fashioned powder and tamping it with a fuse, a sign of his obstinacy.

She climbed into the ore car and tried to unset the brakes. It was her only hope. Then she realized that the cable was still attached. She climbed down by the light of the now flaming fuse and unhooked the heavy shackle. A moment later she was again in the car with her little hands firmly on the lever. With strength bred of desperation she managed to release it.

The heavy car slowly creaked away down the dark tunnel. Then it came over Ruth that she was not strong enough to stop its momentum on the long trestle that led to the dump. She was fleeing death by fire and gas and rock only to be hurled headlong over the lofty end of the track. A vision rose before her of being flung through the bright California air right at her father's feet. Behind her she heard the sputtering of the last few inches of the fuse. She crouched in the car. Just as it emerged from the tunnel's mouth it was as if a huge hand thrust

Why Not Telephone?

If you telephone him first you may not have to go at all!

If you would just remember to observe this rule of first using the Long Distance Telephone, you would save yourself and your staff many tiresome trips, unnecessary disappointments and much expense.

Many progressive business houses have found that by a systematic and persistent use of the Long Distance Telephone travelling expense can be reduced anywhere from 20 to 80 per cent.

Why not adopt this principle in your business? Telephone first! Try to figure out where the Long Distance Telephone can save you precious time!

Could Not Get Rid of Them Until She Used

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

When the blood becomes impure the first symptoms which manifest themselves are a breaking out of the various forms of skin trouble such as boils, pimples, abscesses, ulcers, etc., and the only treatment you can use is some sort of a good blood cleansing remedy which will put the blood into a perfect condition, and thus eliminate all the different poisons from the system which cause these different eruptions to occur.

The best blood cleansing remedy on the market to-day is Burdock Blood Bitters. All we ask you is to try it and be convinced. Thousands have used it during the past forty years, and have nothing but praise for its curative powers.

Mrs. John Fitzgerald, Plantagenet, Ont., writes: "I am one woman who cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. I was covered with boils, and could not get rid of them. I was advised by a friend to try B.B.B. which I did, and I can truthfully say that it completely cured me. I have never had a sign of a boil since."

See that our name appears on both the label and wrapper as there are many imitations placed on the market which are said to be "just as good."

Burdock Blood Bitters is manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

The Unexpected.

"Did you hear about Scootleigh?"

"No."

"He woke up in the night and went to the wall cupboard for the bottle of Jamaica ginger. He was in such a hurry he didn't stop to feel for the electric light button, but chanced it."

"Dear, dear!"

"He grabbed a bottle that he thought was the right one and took a swallow of the stuff."

"My, my!"

"It burned him painfully."

"Oh, that's too bad! What was it?"

"The Jamaica ginger."

The story of The Master Key will appear each Friday and Saturday in the Evening Examiner, and will be shown in Photo Play at the Red Mill Theatre on Monday and Tuesday of each week.

AGREEMENT REACHED.

Britain and Holland Guard Against Goods Reaching Germany.

WASHINGTON, April 22. — Arrangement have been made between the British and Dutch Governments whereby, through embargoes or other measures, the possibility of supplies reaching Holland by water, being transhipped to Germany, is eliminated. Official notice was given yesterday that not only conditional contraband, such as food supplies, but even goods on the contraband list of the British Government, may be given on the passage to Holland through the blockade lines. The British embassy issued this statement:

"1. Shipments of wheat, wheat flour, and meal, destined for consumption in Holland, should be consigned to the Netherlands Government.

"2. Shipments of all other articles on the British contraband list, destined for consumption in Holland, should be consigned to the Netherland Overseas Trust.

"3. The Netherlands-American, the Royal Holland Lloyd, and the Royal Steamship Co. have instructed their agents that shipments of cocoa, coffee and tobacco must also be consigned to the Netherlands Overseas Trust."

Canadian Officers Wounded.

OTTAWA, April 22.— Three Canadian officers, Lieut. H. G. Anderson, 7th Battalion, who comes from Vancouver, Lieut. A. T. Thompson of Port Credit, Ont., attached to the Winnipeg battalion, and Lieut. F. M. Gibson, 15th Battalion, son of Sir John Gibson of Toronto, figure in the casualty list as having been wounded on April 19.

Military Honours Paid to Victim of Accident.— Pte. W. R. Dobson was a member of the Edmonton Fusiliers, but was transferred to the Auto Machine Gun Battery the day of his death. He will killed when the machine in which he was riding collided with another truck.

BERLIN JOURNAL HEAPS ANATHEMA ON THOSE WHO DECEIVED GERMANY

The Paris Matin reproduces the following article from the Berlin Tex, a conservative newspaper, according to the Eclaireur de Nice, of March 29th:

"We have been deceived in all our calculations.

"We expected that the whole of India would revolt at the first sound of the guns in Europe, but, lo! thousands and tens of thousands of Indians are now fighting with the English against us.

"We expected that the British nation would crumble to pieces, but the British colonies have united as they have never done before, with the mother country.

"We expected a victorious revolt in British South Africa, and we see there only a fiasco.

"We expected disturbances in Ireland, and Ireland sends against us some of her best contingents.

"We thought the peace party all powerful in England, but it has disappeared amid the general enthusiasm that the war against Germany has aroused.

"We reckoned that England was degenerate and incapable of being a serious factor in the war, and she shows herself to be our most dangerous enemy.

"It was the same thing with France and Russia. We thought that France was corrupt, and that she had lost the sense of national solidarity, but we now learn that the French are formidable adversaries.

"We thought that Russia could do nothing; we believed that her people were too profoundly discontented to fight in favour of the Russian government; we counted on its rapid collapse as a great military Power; but Russia has mobilized her millions of men very rapidly and very well. Her people are full of enthusiasm, and her force is crushing.

"Those who have led us into all thes calculations, all these mistakes about our neighbors, and their affairs, have assumed a heavy burden of responsibility."

Gold and silver mines that have been worked for more than three centuries, still form the principal resources of the Mexican state of San Luis Potosi.

A CHILD'S LAXATIVE IS "SYRUP OF FIGS"

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has caught cold or is feverish or has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs," to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given to-day saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

Farmer Fatally Injured.

APPLETON, Ont., April 22.—Jas. Wilson, a prominent farmer, was fatally injured by being run over by a seeder, from which he was about to unharness his team. The wheel of the machine passe over Mr. Wilson's head.

Britain's Land Strength.

LONDON, April 22.—An attempt was made in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon to satisfy the keen public interest regarding the official figures of Great Britain's land forces, and the result of recruiting, but it met with a definite refusal from the War Office.

Harold J. Tennant, Parliamentary Under Secretary for War, stated that the Government had no intention of disclosing the strength of the British army in the field or in training, as it considered that such disclosure would be detrimental to the public interest.

French Knots.

To make French knots, knot the thread and bring it up through the material; then take an ordinary short backstitch and before bringing the needle entirely out of the material wind the thread two or three times around the needle (according to size of knot desired), and, holding the coils down with the left thumb, draw the needle through. Then insert the needle over the edge of coils in the same hole, making the knot secure. Carry the thread on the wrong side of the material on the next knot without cutting.

Suppose.

Suppose the weak have just as good a chance to draw from the box the ablest lawyer as the powerful, then there would not be one case go to trial where now ten are tried, there would not be one case tried where now hundreds are brought, and for every case that is now bluffed out and that does not get into court nor reach a settlement of any kind, there would be a very strong probability of a fair and amicable settlement. — R. S. Gray in Journal of the American Institute of Criminal Law.

DON'T WASH YOUR HAIR WITH SOAP

When you wash your hair, don't use soap. Most soap and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drugstore and a few ounces will last a whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

THE MARKETS

CHICAGO, April 21.—British effects of foreigners buying options in an unusual extent on the delivery of wheat here in September were sharply offset at times today by news that a land attack was being directed against the Turks west of the Dardanelles and that Italy had begun withholding steamships for use in transporting troops. The market closed unsettled at 1-4 to 1 1-8 c net advance. Corn finished with 1-8 to 3-8c gain, oats 1-2c off to 1-16c up and provisions varying from 7 1-2c decline to a rise of a shade.

Manitoba wheat—Bay ports, No. 1 northern, $1.68¾; No. 2, $1.67¾; No. 3, $1.64¾, track, Goderich; winter storage, Goderich, ½c per bushel extra.

Corn—New, No. 3 yellow, 85½c, Toronto freight, all rail; for opening of navigation, No. 2, 82½c, c.i.f.; No. 3, 81½c.

Ontario flour—$5.80 to $5.90 nominal, seaboard.

Peas—No. 2, $1.75.

Rye—No. 2, $1.45.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 21.—The local market opened steady. Later there was a general advance in wheat, and at noon May was $1.59¾, July $1.53¾, and October $1.24.

Cash was very quiet, demand being poor. Spot wheat in poor demand. Oats quiet. Flax firmer, but barley quiet.

Wheat futures closed ½c up, to ¾c down; cash ½c lower, oats ¾c lower, and flax ⅞c to ¼c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 21.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable today was quiet, owing to the fact that prices bid for both were 2d per quarter lower; but, in spite of this, there was a fair demand from local exporters for Manitoba wheat, and sales of 25,000 bushels of No. 2 northern were made at $1.60, and 85,000 bushels No. 3 at $1.53¾ per bushel c.i.f., bay ports. There was an improved demand from local buyers for oats, and sales of 35,000 bushels Manitoba No. 1 feed were made at 67½c per bushel, c.i.f., here, for shipment from Fort William. Manitoba barley was firm. Flour was unchanged, Millfeed firm. Butter fairly active and firm. Cheese easy on increased receipts. Eggs in good demand.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, April 21.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 720 cattle, 2076 hogs, 63 sheep and lambs and 69 calves.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice butchers' steers and heifers sold at $7.25 to $7.70; good steers and heifers at $6.90 to $7.15; medium steers and heifers at $6.50 to $6.90; common at $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; good cows at $6 to $6.25; medium cows at $5.50 to $5.75; common cows at $5 to $5.50; canners and cutters at $3.75 to $4.75; bulls at $5.50 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Feeders, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $6.25 to $7; feeders, 600 to 800 lbs., sold at $6.25 to $6.90; stockers, 500 to 600 lbs., at $5.50 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

Choice fresh cows and forward springers sold at $50 to $85 each, and medium to good at $50 to $65; common at $40 to $50.

Veal Calves.

Choice veal calves, $9 to $10; good, $8 to $8.50; medium, $7 to $7.50; common calves, $4 to $5.50; bobs at $2.50 to $3.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $7 to $8; heavy sheep and rams, $4.50 to $6; yearling lambs, $7.50 to $10; spring lambs at $4 to $10 each.

Hogs.

Selects fed and watered sold at $9 to $9.10, the bulk selling at the former price

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 21.—At the C. P. R. live stock market, in sympathy with the stronger feeling in the Toronto market yesterday, the tone was firmer, but prices were unchanged. The supply was small, with demand fair, and sales of choice steers were made at $7.75 to $8; good at $7.35 to $7.50, and the lower grades from $6 to $6.50, while butchers' cows brought from $4.50 to $6.50, and bulls from $5 to $7 per cwt.

The feature of the small-meat trade was the activity in calves, there being a good demand for all the offerings at prices ranging from $7 to $9 each, according size and quality. There was no change in the sheep and lamb market. A few small lots of yearling lambs sold at $9.25 to $9.35, and ewes at $5 to $6 per cwt. Spring lambs brought from $3.50 to $8 each.

Hogs firm under a fair demand and small offerings, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.50 to $9.60 per cwt., weighed off cars, and in one or two instances as high as $9.75 was paid for a small lot.

HAKHAILAH OCCUPIED.

British Force In Mesopotamia Is Following Up Turks.

LONDON, April 22.—In Mesopotamia, the British are chasing the defeated Turks, and have occupied Hakhailah, from which place the Turks fled last week. The Turks are also being attacked from the Black Sea, the Russian fleet having again been out and destroyed ten Turkish supply vessels and bombarded Arkhava.

Turkish prisoners to the number of 515, including six officers, were taken by the British troops in the fighting in Mesopotamia last week, according to an official report issued by the India Office last night.

The report adds that the British pursuing party found the Turks everywhere in disorganized retreat, both by road and by river in Arab craft. Twelve of the Turk boats were overtaken and captured or sunk.

"Our advance cavalry," the report says in conclusion, "occupied Hakhailah, 19 miles northwest of Zobeir, on the 17th, and there are now no enemy nearer than Rattabi, 50 miles from Basera."

TRIED TO LAND IN ENGLAND.

German Invasion Headed Off Some Time Ago, Says Jane.

LONDON, April 22.—F. T. Jane, a well-known naval expert, addressing a meeting at Liverpool last night, said that it was not generally known that the Germans tried to land an expeditionary force in England, and that it was the British navy that made them go back to the harbor again. The navy saved the country, and there was never a word of it in the newspapers.

British and French Airmen Busy.

LONDON, April 22.—From every side comes news of the activity of the air fleets, which have been busy bombarding towns and military stations behind the lines of the armies. The British claim to have damaged the German airship harbor at Ghent.

The official report says: "A bold and successful attack was made on the enemy's airship harbor and shed at Ghent. The extent of the damage [illegible] has been considerable."

The French official report is: "Our aeroplanes have bombarded in the Woevre, the headquarters of Gen. von Strantz, and a number of convoys in the Grand Duchy of Baden, as well as an electric power plant at Borrach."

Hungary Refuses Money.

LONDON, April 22.—A Paris despatch to The Central News says that the opening session of the Hungarian chamber was a gloomy sitting. The chamber refused to vote the new military credits demanded by the general staff. The attempts of Count Tisza, the Premier, to break down the opposition was futile.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GREY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody Will Know

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural colour dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and abundant. Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old recipe which can be depended upon to restore natural colour and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two it becomes beautifully dark, glossy and abundant.

MOHMANDS DEFEATED.

British Force Quells Troublesome Tribe o. Pathans.

LONDON, April 22.—The ancient and war-like Pathan people known as Mohmands, inhabiting eastern Afghanistan and the northwest frontier province of India, have been giving serious trouble to the British troops stationed in that remote corner of Asia. An official announcement issued by the press bureau last night on behalf of the India Office says:

"A Mohmand tribal gathering of 4,000 men, under a fanatical Mullah, theratened the British frontier opposite Fort Shab Kaar, on the northern border of the Peshawar valley in Peshawar. A movable column under Maj.-Gen. Young moved out of Peshawar to protect the menaced frontier on the 18th and engaged the Mohmands in the direction of Hafiz Kor.

"The fighting was severe and lasted several hours. The enemy suffered heavily. The Mohmands have now retired to the hills and are reported dispersed. Our losses were 70 killed and wounded. Further details later."

The most significant factor in the fighting has been the success of the Afghan officials in restraining the Afghan Mohammedans from participating.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Sayt Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief — no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

TOTALLY DISCOURAGED BY NERVOUS PROSTRATION

After Many Weeks of Doctoring a Friend Recommended Chase's Nerve Food, and She Was Cured

There is nothing more discouraging than Nervous Prostration. Because of the exhausted condition of the nervous system, weakness and helplessness take possession of the body. The faculties of the mind as well as those of the body are affected and hope and courage disappear.

The patient, often appearing well, gets little sympathy, and few doctors understand diseases of the nerves well enough to treat nervous prostration intelligently. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is founded on the prescription of a great nerve specialist, and hence its wonderful success in curing ailments of this nature.

Mrs. Edith May Williams,, Tilsonburg, Ont., R. R. 3, writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I suffered for years with my nerves, and at one time I was confined to my bed with nervous prostration for several weeks. I cannot just explain my feelings, but I was weak and helpless and so discouraged and despondent that I thought I would lose my mind. I doctored with several doctors and received but little benefit. At last I became very much discouraged and thought I would never get better. A friend advised me to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and before I had finished the first box I knew that it was helping me. It took several boxes of the Nerve Food to make me well and I can truly say that it is a wonderful builder-up of the nervous system."

It is only wise to prevent such dreaded diseases as Nervous Prostration, Paralysis and Locomotor Ataxia by keeping the nervous system in good condition at all times. When you cannot sleep well, have headaches and indigestion, be warned of approaching dangers and restore the nervous system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. 50 cents a box, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Limited, Toronto.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

STYLISH MILITARY BLOUSE.

By Anabel Worthington.

For wash silks or lingerie materials this design is very practical. It is plain yet smart, having the stylish military air secured by the double row of small buttons that continue up to the chin, according to the latest mode. These buttons preferably match the blouse as to material, although for some silk and the majority of lingerie blouses pearl buttons are used. There are shoulder pieces to which the front and back are gathered, except the centre front, which is left plain in vest effect. This is not a separate piece, however. The collar turnover is not the least important detail of the design, for these little affairs have become prominent features of the newest waists.

The hemstitching makes a pretty finish for the seams and tucks, but is not essential. For medium size 2½ yards of 36 inch material would be required. The pattern, No. 7,117, can be obtained in sizes from 34 to 44 inches bust measure.

When ordering remember to give number and size of pattern required and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25c.

PAINS IN THE SIDE, CHEST OR BACK ACHING MUSCLES CURED QUICKLY

Even Doctors Marvel at the Penetrating Power of Good Old "Nerviline."

Pains anywhere—in the chest, neck, side, back or muscles—they are always a discomfort.

If the inflammation is severe, the pain will be intense. If allowed to continue, complications will follow.

Physicians say one of the best remedies is "Nerviline"—it can't help curing, because it penetrates through the sore tissues, carrying healing properties that destroy every symptom of pain.

In case of colds, sore chest and pleurisy, there should be a good hard rubbing with Nerviline and, of course to prevent the trouble coming back, it's advisable to put on a Nerviline Porous Plaster, which, by absorption through the skin, draws out all congestion.

For general household use, for curing the ailments of the young and old, for destroying all pain, outward or inward, nothing can excel Nerviline; thousands testify to this effect.

For nearly forty years Nerviline has been a renowned and trusty remedy in thousands of homes where practically no medicine is needed.

Nerviline is safe to use. For children's coughs, colds and sore throat nothing can be used with more certain results.

Get the large 50 cent family size bottle to-day. It is more economical than the 25-cent trial size, and is sure to keep down the doctor's bill and cure a host of minor ills that arise in every household.

All dealers sell Nerviline, or direct from the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Canada.

British Have Lost Some Ground In Front of Ypres

Germans Claim Success in This Locality—At Other Points Allies Have Made Splendid Gains and Success of the Foe is Only a Local One, Giving No Occasion For Anxiety—Counter Attack Won Back Some of Ground.

NEW YORK HEARS OF COMING SEA BATTLE

Special to The Examiner:

A GERMAN CLAIM

LONDON, April 23.—The German war office this afternoon issued an official statement claiming that the German forces have captured the Anglo-French positions in Belgium at Langemarck, Streestaate, Hetsas and Hilken, taking 1600 prisoners and 30 guns.

Langhemarck is five miles directly north of Ypres. The German statement says that the allied defenders lost very heavily in killed and wounded. This success breaks a line through the Anglo-French frontal trenches north of Ypres, according to the German statement, and opens a way for a renewal of the operations in the angle formed by the Yser river and the Yser Canal. It is hinted that before long another attempt may be made to hack a way through toward Dunkirk. It is generally supposed that the Canadians are in the neighborhood of Dunkirk.

PARIS, April 23.—The French official communique says:

The charge that the Geramns are again using explosive bombs was made to-day which says that north of Ypres the allies were compelled to give away in the direction of the canal as a result of the effects of them which were felt for a distance of two kilometres behind the battle line. Later a vigorous counter attack made it possible to regain some of the ground and also to take many prisoners.

The Belgian army is again figuring in the operations. To-day report says that at the bend of the Yser the Belgians repulsed an attack upon Chateau Vicogne, north of Dixmude, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. At the forest of D'Ailly, near St. Mihiel, the French have captured seven hundred metres of German trenches and took 100 prisoners, including three officers.

FLEET IS AUGMENTED

LONDON, April 23.—The great fleet battering at the Turkish positions which block the gate to Constantinople, has been augmented by several new warships, the chief of which being the Warspite, equipped with 16-inch guns. The orders to the land and sea forces are that the Straits must be forced, and it seems certain now that the offensive again has been begun.

A SEA BATTLE IMMINENT

NEW YORK, April 23.—A cable to The Herald from London this morning says: A great battle in the North Sea, the most titantic engagement in the history of naval warfare, may be a question of hours. All commercial shipping has been cleared from the old German Ocean, and all preparations are now complete for a trial of strength between the British fleet and the German grand fleet, supported by the Heligoland fortress.

VAGRANTS GOT SIX MONTHS IN REFORMATORY

Three Local Men Had No Visible Means of Support and Were Sent to the Prison Farm at Guelph

TO-DAY'S POLICE COURT

It was "Vags' Day" at the regular session of the Police Court this morning between the hours of 10 and 11 o'clock, when three "old-timers" were sent to the Reformatory Farm for six months each.

John Donaghue was the first. He had only been out of jail since Wednesday last. He had been unable to get work and had no visible means of support and no place of abode.

"Six months at the Reformatory Farm will do you good, you will come back a better man," came from the bench.

"Good Heavens, it's no use sending me there," returned John.

Would Be Lonesome.

His Worship thought Donaghue would be lonesome without Benjamin Hobson, and sent him along for six months. Hobson was also charged with vagrancy.

Goes With the Rest.

"You will go up with the rest of the gang," was the verdict in the case of John Irwin, also a "vag." Irwin had been before the Court on several occasions.

"We are tired of you fellows around here," remarked the Magistrate.

He Was Begging.

Joseph Clarke was begging in East City according to a police officer. He said he came from the Old Country, but had been in Toronto for four years. He wanted a chance to go out on a farm where he expected a job was open for him.

Upon the request of Chief Thompson, the accused was allowed a week's adjournment.

"If he comes back he will go to our own farm," was the parting rejoinder from the Magistrate.

John Wrightman, supplied Wm. Anthony, a blacklister, with liquor, and was fined $25.00 to be paid forthwith, and in default 20 days.

Wrightman came back to the city after four years' absence and was going to work with Anthony. They started out by getting some liquor and by last night they were fairly drunk.

SOMETHING WE CAN DO FOR OUR SOLDIER LADS

The Examiner's reference to Sergt. Peter Victor last evening met with a ready response. We knew of a number of people who had sent encouraging letters, and of others who have already written friends in London, telling them of the case and asking them to visit the wounded Canadian. These kind spirits may be sure that they have done something to make the Peterborough boys condition more tolerable. Sergt. Victor is the first, but unfortunately there will be others, and it is to be hoped that none will be forgotten in this regard. The Examiner will publish as soon as obtained, the hospital addresses of other wounded and sick Peterborough soldiers so that the people of the city may have an opportunity of showing them that they are not forgotten by the home folk. And then there are the boys at the front who are not wounded, but who are eager for news from home. Don't let them be forgotten. Their friends and chums should write as often as possible. Don't wait for an answer to your letters—the Maple Leaf lads have not always the facilities or the opportunity to write—but you may be sure that every letter received by them is prized. Many "Examiners" go to the boys in the trenches, and from the letters they send home, our lads at the front devour every word. They are hungry to hear from their friends. Don't let them be disappointed— they are doing so much for us.

DID GOOD WORK

Special Cable to The Examiner:

LONDON, April 23.—Ontario's artillerists and infantrymen from the Western Canada provinces took a prominent part in the assaults by shrapnel and cold steel which captured new positions in Belgium for the British arms during the last few days and brought about General French's official statement, "We have taken and will hold important crests in Belgium and new command a large section of new territory." Participation by the Canadians in this costly but valuable victory for the allies' cause is emphasized both by despatches reaching here to-day and the wounded arriving at Canadian hospitals. From what can be gleaned and pieced together of the various reports it was the first and third Canadian Artillery Brigades which rained a storm of shrapnel on the German entrenchments with fearful accuracy and devastation, and when "cease fire" was ordered for the Canadian artillery, it was the second infantry brigade, including well known Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia units which assisted the British regiments in the assault which gained the position. The casualities so far have not been officially announced, but it is evident that some units were not heavily hit though others suffered severely. Canadians in London are elated at the news that the first contingent has again struck a drive blow for the Empire.

..Editor—The First Artillery Brigade mentioned above had headquarters at Ottawa and is commanded by Lieut. Col. E. W. B. Morrison, former director of the Canadian Artillery, who gained in D.S.O. in South Africa. Lieut. Harold Matthews of Peterborough, is with this brigade. The Third Artillery Brigade is from Toronto and Western Ontario, and is commanded by Lieut.-Col. J. H. Mitchell. The Second Infantry Brigade also mentioned above, is commanded by Brigadier General Currie of British Columbia.

PETERBORO' MEN HURT

Pte. Curson in Hospital in France—Driver Arnott Injured at Kingston—Dr. Frederick's Services Are Accepted

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

Word has been received in the city that Pte. Geo. Curson, who went to the front with the 57th Detachment in the 2nd Battalion, is now in hospital in France, and it is thought by his friends here that he has been wounded. His letter does not definitely say so, but he remarks: "I got a little too curious," which apparently would indicate that he had been hit. He resided at 309 McDonnel St. Pte. Shuretyfi formerly of Peterborough, and a brother of Sergt. Fred Shurety, of the 8th C. M. R., is in the same hospital.

Peterborough Man Hurt.

KINGSTON, April 22.—Driver Arnott, of Peterborough, sustained a very bad rupture, being kicked by "Lazy Liz," the most vicious horse in the stable. The accident will undoubtedly prevent him from going to the front.

The 26th Battery has been attached to the Second Contingent of the 6th Brigade. The 25th Battery, in training at Ottawa, which is also for the most part composed of 'Varsity men will be in the 7th Brigade. This announcement was made here yesterday and the statement was also made that the 26th Battery would be under canvas, probably at Barriefield, within the next two weeks. This means that the Battery will complete their training on English soil.

So far we have had no actual work on real guns, although it is said we will have two 18-pounders shortly for instruction purposes. The noncoms. commence a six weeks' course at the R. S. A. next Monday, and the entire Battery will likely sail for England shortly after this course is completed.

Gone With Remount Depot.

We will be supplied both with guns and horses in England where it is said the Battery can be equipped with better satisfaction. We are replacing the 6th Brigade in the Second Contingent, they having been used as reinforcements for the First Contingent sailing for Europe during the winter months as a separate unit.

Several of the Peterborough men received their honorable discharge and left to-day for St. John's, going on to England immediately to be used in camp there for breaking in remounts.

Time for Sport.

Despite our heavy work, we still find time for considerable sport. Last Saturday our indoor baseball team defeated the R.C.N.A. 19 to 8. Lieut. Lawton, who is very popular with the men of the Battery, lined up with the team, and proved a tower of strength.

A soccer game has been arranged for Saturday afternoon with the 21st, and the following Saturday D'Arcy Smith's baseball nine will try conclusions with a picked team from the 21st.

The right wing recived their first inoculation yesterday afternoon, and are off duty for 24 hours to get over

A SET-BACK FOR HOSPITAL SCHEME

PTE. REG. MURDUFF
Lakefield boy with the 21st Battalion, Kingston. He at one time played hockey with the Lakefield team in the City League, and is a brother of Mr. Robert Murduff, 598 Patterson St.

Canadian Government Notified by Imperial Authorities that no More Hospital Units Are to be Accepted for the Present.

DOCTORS NEEDED, HOWEVER

The Peterborough Base Hospital proposal, upon the details of which the local Medical Society had been working for some time, received a set-back yesterday, when it was learned that the Canadian Government had been informed by the Imperial authorities that no base hospital units could be accepted for the present at least. This means, of course, that the scheme will be dropped for the time being, although the local physicians will be prepared to take up the matter later on if the unit is needed.

Dr. Cameron was in Ottawa yesterday interviewing the Director General of Medical Services in regard to the hospital scheme, while a deputation composed of Drs. Greer, McPherson and Sutton journeyed to Lindsay last evening and went into the matter with Major-General Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia. While the latter was sympathetic with the proposition and appreciative of the patriotic spirit shown by the Peterborough doctors, he regretted that the Canadian government had been notified by the Imperial War Office that for the present no additional units were required. The hospital service was thoroughly organized, and the chief need at the present time was individual doctors. Major-General Hughes informed the deputation that a similar offer from Winnipeg had also been refused on the same account.

At Ottawa Dr. Cameron was given similar information in regard to the proposal.

Peterborough doctors will be well represented at the front, nevertheless. Drs. Young, Kelly and Garnet Greer have already gone, and the services of Dr. McPherson and Dr. Frederick have been accepted, and they will leave shortly. It is expected that other local doctors will also offer themselves for service overseas.

CHIEF THOMPSON WAS THE FIRST WITNESS CALLED

Case Against Thos. W. Whalley, Proprietor of the Review, is Proceeded With at Police Court This Morning.

COMPLAINS OF LETTERS

The preliminary hearing of the defamatory libel case, in which Mr. Thomas W. Whalley, Managing Director or Proprietor of the Daily Review, is the defendant, was commenced at 10 a.m. to-day, before Magistrate Dumble, in the Police Court.

Mr. Ruddy is acting in behalf of Mr. Whalley, and Mr. G. W. Hatton for the prosecution. In behalf of his client, Mr. Ruddy neither elected or pleaded, this morning.

The charge, as read, was as follows:

"Without legal justification or excuse you did publish in the newspaper, known as "The Daily Review," of which you are Managing-Director, or Proprietor, that Daniel Thompson, Chief Constable of the City of Peterborough, was permitting friendly relations between the Peterborough Police Force and the management of the Brock Street Rink and owner of the "Underworld," which is likely to injure his reputation by exposing

Comforts For Boys Overseas

Canadian Kitchener League Has Already Sent 1417 Pairs of Socks

A large box was sent yesterday by the Canadian Kitchener League to the boys overseas, containing 128 pairs home-knitted socks, and a quantity of handkerchiefs, stationery, peppermint, salve, and reading matter.

Since the organization of this League it has sent 1417 pairs of socks to our soldiers, as well as other knitted articles, and the League is very gratified for any help rendered to accomplish such success.

WILLIAM SHAKSPERE

Born April 23, 1564 (St. George's Day) — Died, as to the body, April 23, 1616

"Shakspere is the most modern writer in our language. It would seem that in one fruitful moment the genius of England gave birth to a poet, who interpreted his country to itself and to the world, once and for all time; his thought and language being the everlasting mind and utterance of his race at its highest."

THIS IS ENGLAND'S DAY

There is no land like England
Where'er the light of day be;
There are no hearts like English hearts,
Such hearts of oak as they be.
There is no land like England
Where'er the light of day be;
There are no men like Englishmen,
So tall and bold as they be.

There is no land like England
Where'er the light of day be;
There are no wives like English wives,
So fair and chaste as they be.
There is no land like England
Where'er the light of day be;
There are no maids like English maids,
So beautiful as they be.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

St. George's day of the year of grace, 1915, has a special significance; as it falls upon the most stressful times in the history of the world; and because of the share England is taking in the titanic struggle with the powers of oppression against the principles of human freedom. This is the anniversary of the patron saint of England, one of the trinity of nations that have had the deepest influence for the good of the human race, in religion, civilization, literature, science and all the influences they are capable of exercising. While England, Scotland and Ireland have each contributed, to the progress of, and achievement in, these things, England from circumstances has held a leading place, or if the patriotism of the other members of the group protest, England has been at least, primus inter pares. It has been the good fortune of England to lead in many things, especially in the development of parliamentary institutions, the base of the civilization and human enfranchisement, that have made British institutions, the British spirit, and the British genius of government, a compelling influence in a world-wide civilization, that could not be possible without such influences. What this civilization represents is at stake now, and England and Englishmen are in the forefront of the fight. Thus the Englishman's love for England and what England stands for, has a special significance this year; and the observance of the day has a new solemnity. Canadians of other national origin or affiliation can, and do join with, and sympathize with Englishmen on this day, and are one with Englishmen on this occasion as we are all one in helping on the fight whether England, as the centre of the United Kingdom and the Kingdom in connection with the Empire, is waging with all her material strength, and what is better as an inspiration, with all her mighty spirit.

Under the circumstances, the celebration of St. George's day in Peterborough takes the form of an intercessory service at St. John's to-night, a recognition of the divine power to which England and the Empire owe the tremendous influence they wield, and the mighty sway they exercise.

BILINGUALISM.

Our evening contemporary, the Review, occupies a good deal of its valuable space to get a "whack" at the French-Canadian people and the French language. To show "what bilingualism means," it reproduces an advertisement of the Town of Sturgeon Falls, in which bills for water service are printed in both English and French, thus "doubling the cost of printing and advertising." This is truly awful, and especially awful as coming from the supporter and champion-of-a government that has nearly doubled the national expenditure in the short space of less than four years.

But as to bilingualism. The selection of Sturgeon Falls by our contemporary is rather unfortunate. Let us see. It was at Sturgeon Falls in the election of 1911 that that eminent French-Canadian, Mr. Henri Bourassa, the arch enemy of British and Imperial interests, spoke from a Conservative platform in the interests of the candidate of the party of loyalty. The champion of the French language, and of bilingualism, spoke for the party that was carried into power by much flag-waving, and much hollow protest of loyalty. This pre-eminently pro-British party gained power, and the first act of the new premier was to take into his cabinet three French-Canadians—not good loyal Canadians—but Nationalist French-Canadians, whose pet foe was "shooting holes through the British flag to breathe the air of liberty." One of these contemptible disloyal members of an exclusively loyal district, was Hon. Mr. Pelletier, Postmaster-General, who soon taught us "what bilingualism means," by having the legend on the Canadian postal card printed in both English and French. He went a little further in changing the names of some of the post offices in Canada from English into French.

Now what does all this harmony-disturbing fuss about bilingualism, on a water-service bill, or a postal card amount to?. We don't condemn the Nationalist Postmaster-General for having postcards printed in both French and English, nor the municipality of Sturgeon Falls for doing the same in respect of its water bills. There are thousands of good citizens in Canada who can't read English, but can read French. Isn't it just and reasonable and proper to have public documents addressed to them printed in the language the receiver can read? Even the manufacturers of patent medicines, baking powders, etc., and seedsmen, have the directions on their parcels printed in English, French, German, Italian and Spanish, so that people who can read these languages, but can't read English, may be informed. All this solicitude about the poor menaced English language is not so much solicitude for that language, as a solicitude for the party interest that can be promoted by attacking the language of a large and important section of our population. It is another form of the bogus loyalty campaign, that masquerades as loyalty, but in effect masks boodle, graft, taxation of British goods, a general election in war time, and all the inconsistent practices that contradict in action, a flaunting parade of professed loyalty and Peck sniffian patriotism.

AN ELECTION AND THE WAR.

If there is one thing that is pre-eminently unneeded, inopportune and, in effect, treasonable, it is a general election at this time of national and imperial stress. Our Canadian patriots who frantically wave the flag—for partisan purposes—who arrogate to themselves and their party all the loyalty and devotion to the Empire, are proposing an election contest that will absolutely divert for the time being, and at the most critical time, the united energies of our people from the great work of helping Great Britain in her time of greatest need. These patriots claim to admire Great Britain and to accept her as a model. If they were as loyal as they pretend to be they would follow Britain's example now.

In Great Britain, the people of both political parties from the highest to the lowest, are "playing the game"; intensely cooperating in the work of carrying on the war. Both parties are making this aim, this work, the supreme object to which every other consideration yields second place, or no place at all for the moment. The very last thing thought of is a general election, though in Great Britain a general election is due this next summer, (while a general election in Canada is not due for a year and a half.) All political differences have been set aside so that the united nation can concentrate its undivided attention upon the work of carrying on the war. Yet our political patriots propose something that will put an end to this work, that will sharply divide into two hostile camps, the two equal party halves of Canada, now working nobly, and if not prevented, will continue to work nobly and unitedly, in helping Britain in her supreme time of need.

We all know how a general election will destroy all this concord and interrupt war work. The members of the Government will be necessarily neglecting the work of their departments, they will be in the political field fighting for their political lives, while they neglect their work in the interest of the Empire fighting for its life. Partisan bitterness will put an end to all work, especially cooperative work; where now nobody knows or thinks of party, there will be a hostility and drawing apart. How an election will bedevil the patriotic attitude of citizens, is shown by some of the Conservative campaign literature issued. The present Government, waited into office by a flag-waving campaign, has issued lying literature charging disloyalty and indifference to Imperial interests against the leader of the Opposition. The Conservative party leaflet containing a gross untruth, charging the Opposition leader with disloyalty, concludes with the buncombe appeal — "Vote Conservative, for Borden backs Britain." How can he be backing Britain if he brings on an election that will paralyze the aim of the first of the dominions in its work of helping Britain in the war. That's one way "Borden backs Britain." Another way is by raising the tariff tax against British goods coming into Canada; and other ways in which "Borden backs Britain" are comprised in the scandals in the provision of war supplies, which by impairing the efficiency of our soldiers, to that extent prevents Canada giving her best to Britain in the carrying on of the war. If to these things be added the crime of a general election at this critical time, one can't find words to fittingly qualify the impudence of the party guilty of claiming to be the friends of Britain and the Empire, and loyal guardians of the good name of Canada.

On the roof of a bank in Montevideo there has been installed a powerful searchlight which illuminates every part of the city.

Waste, Not War, The Cause of Canada's Mis-called War Tax

No more important duty lies before the Liberal Press and Liberal speakers, if Canada is forced into a premature general election, than the exposure of the reckless prodigality of the Borden Government. The money of the people of Canada has been spent during the past four years with no thought of the morrow. Now that the sources of revenue hitherto tapped fail to yield enough to keep up the pace set by the gentleman from the Maritime Provinces who urged the Borden Government to "dash away," the country is confronted with a demand for the payment of pretended "war" taxes. The Globe has shown that in the last year of the Laurier Administration seven and a half million Canadians paid $80,835,000 into the national Treasury in the form of taxes. In the year ending March, 1914, before the Borden Government had been quite three years in power, the sum collected in taxes from eight and a half million Canadians was $127,478,000. The taxation per head was increased in three years from $11.90 to $15.

Practically every Government department and office from one end of the country to the other has been engaged in the orgy of spending. A general statement of that nature, however, does not carry conviction. The Government Press replies that there has been great expansion and that progress means increased expenditures. There has been no great expansion of the number of Indians under care of the Government, yet the expenditure of the Bureau of Indian Affairs in the Interior Department increased from $1,499,000 in 1911, to $2,182,000 in 1914. The political workers of the Government in the West find shelter in the Indian and Dominion Lands Bureaus, and naturally the cost of the administration of Dominion lands has increased from $1,804,000 in 1911 to $3,286,000 in 1914.

To make a comparison that cannot be met by the expansion cry, Post-office revenues and expenditures are probably the most useful. There the revenue gives the measure of the expansion for which provision must be made by increased expenditure. The Globe has no doubt at all that the "war stamp" on the letters of the Canadian people is designed in part to hide a return to the era of deficits in the Postoffice which Sir William Mulock's careful administration changed into a long succession of surpluses. If the reader will scan the following official figures as to Postoffice revenue and expenditure under Liberal and Conservative rule he will see that whereas before 1896 the Conservatives on a general letter rate of three cents to points in Canada and five cents to Great Britain had an annual deficit ranging above $700,000, Sir William Mulock made revenues and expenditure almost balance in his second year. Then he cut the rate for domestic letters and letters to Great Britain to two cents, and once more speedily wiped out the deficit by careful oversight of the service. The figures tell the story:

| | Revenue. | Expenditure. |
|---|---|---|
| Conservative Rule. | | |
| 1893-1894 .. | $2,809,000 | $3,517,000 |
| 1894-1895 .. | 2,792,000 | 3,598,000 |
| 1895-1896 .. | 2,964,000 | 3,665,000 |
| Liberal Rule. | | |
| 1896-1897 .. | 3,208,000 | 3,789,000 |
| 1897-1898 .. | 3,587,000 | 3,575,000 |
| *1898-1899 .. | 3,196,000 | 3,603,000 |
| 1899-1900 .. | 3,205,000 | 3,758,000 |
| 1900-1901 .. | 3,441,000 | 3,931,000 |
| 1901-1902 .. | 3,918,000 | 4,023,000 |

* Two-cent postage established.

Between 1902 and 1911 the Post Office under Sir William Mulock and Mr. Lemieux yielded a surplus of almost eight million dollars. Before the Laurier Government went out a good beginning had been made in rural mail delivery, which has been extended materially since 1911, but not to such a degree as to wipe out the Post Office surplus had the administration been in careful hands. The following table shows how in three years a Liberal surplus of over a million had been reduced to $132,000 under Conservative rule:

| | Revenue. | Expenditure. |
|---|---|---|
| Liberal Rule. | | |
| 1909-1910 .. | $7,988,000 | $7,215,000 |
| 1910-1911 .. | 9,146,000 | 7,954,000 |
| Conservative Rule. | | |
| 1911-1912 .. | 10,492,000 | 9,173,000 |
| 1912-1913 .. | 12,051,000 | 10,882,000 |
| 1913-1914 .. | 12,954,000 | 12,822,000 |

When the Postoffice revenue and expenditure for the year just ended is made public it will probably be found that for the first time in more than a decade it cost more to operate the service than was obtained in revenue. Liberal administration, therefore, means, in regard to the Postoffice, cheap postage and a profit to the public till. Under Conservative administration it has already meant increased postage following on the disappearance of a surplus that has reached the vanishing point. The case of the Postoffice finance is typical. The other departments of the public service have been operated in the same spirit. And the result, the inevitable result, foreseen so long ago as 1912 by those who noticed how expenditures were shooting up above revenues, is that Canada is paying "war taxes," although every dollar spent upon the war is being borrowed in Great Britain, and added to the national debt of the Dominion. The Postoffice figures for a period that ended months before the declaration of war, prove conclusively that the war did not cause Canada's war taxes.—The Globe.

Daughters of the Empire Meeting

Business Transacted at Regular Gathering Yesterday Afternoon.

The regular monthly meeting of the 57th Regt. Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Recreation Room of the Armouries on Thursday afternoon.

In the absence of both the Regent and First Vice-Regent (Mrs. E. B. Clegg and Mrs. Jos. Mills) from the city, the Second Vice-Regent, Mrs. Duncan Walker, presided. After opening the meeting Mrs. Walker said how much we would all miss our Regent, who has gone to join her husband, Lt.-Col. Clegg, in England. The best wishes of all members go with her. She also told the members of Mrs. Clegg's disappointment in not being able to personally thank the members of the Chapter for their kind thought of her in sending her a handsome travelling rug and shopping bag on the eve of her departure. This and the address sent with them were much appreciated.

The following committees reported:

Hospital Committee—Flowers had been sent to 5 members, including Major Davidson, and acknowledgments were read from them.

Visiting Committee reported 14 visits paid and several new members to join.

Knitting Committee reported 144 pairs of socks made during month and 100 pairs sent to Kingston for our men in the 2nd Contingent. The rest to be kept as reserve supply.

An interesting letter was read from Miss Arnoldi, acknowledging a cheque sent from the Chapter for comforts for our men under Major Bennet. It is as follows:

Canadian Field Comfort Commission,
Ashford, Kent, April 7, 1915.

Dear Mrs. Gemmell,—Your cheque for twenty dollars from the 57th Regt. Chapter I.O.D.E. has been received, and we would thank the members very much for the same. It shall be expended as your desire and forwarded to Major Bennett. So many things are asked for every day now. Little luxuries like candles, cocoa, soup tablets, notepaper and various other trifles of necessity, but which mean a great deal to our brave fellows. The officers write that the appearance of a bale is hailed with delight, and the men so much appreciate this fact that the things come from the women at home. Everyone has so much praise for the Canadians; it makes one prouder than ever of our splendid First Contingent. We are so anxious to be able to keep up the supply fairly regularly, and we can only do this if the money and supplies come from home to us. Socks are continually called for, also underwear.

We will let Major Bennett know the donors of the gift.

Yours faithfully,
JEAN S. ARNOLDI, C.F.C.C.

Also a letter from Capt. Grey at Kingston, acknowledging $50 sent towards a field kitchen for the Second Contingent.

It was decided by vote "That owing to existing circumstances, it would be unwise for the Chapter to send a delegate to the annual meeting in Halifax this year."

Empire Day will be observed this year in the usual way, committees having been appointed to place flags on the graves of soldiers in our cemeteries.

The Red Cross Branch brought a message from a special meeting held by them yesterday regarding the part the women would take in helping with a base hospital to be offered the Government by the Peterborough Medical Association. The Peterborough Red Cross have guaranteed $50 a month for this purpose for as long as the war lasts, and the I.O.D.E. will guarantee $10 a month and will undertake any work necessary for supplies.

Mrs. Neal read several patriotic poems, and after tea and a social half hour, the meeting adjourned.

Voice of The People

Supervised Play-grounds.

Sir,—It is with much satisfaction that one sees the matter of supervised play-grounds receiving attention in Peterborough.

The Local Council of Women, in pushing this movement, is doing much for our national manhood which is being so disastrously depleted at the present time.

[illegible] of patriotism. It is equally criminal to neglect the rising generation as it is to neglect our sick and wounded. The public for years has been calling upon the City Council for proper bathing facilities for both boys and girls, but the cry still goes up. Let us endeavour to support the Local Council in this project that it may be possible for it to have at least one ground in working order by July 1st.

Five hundred dollars is not much for Peterborough to spend upon the public welfare of her children, and the scheme which the Local Council has devised for the raising of that money is such that it will not overtax anyone.

Interested Parent.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—With your kind permission I would like to have a little space in your much read paper, to answer at least, to some extent, a letter from a Minnesota subscriber. I, too, like him, have been receiving your valuable paper; also, like him, the Examiner always makes everything homelike. But, unlike him, I must say that times are real good here; beautiful weather and plenty of the best to eat, and everything that anyone could wish for. There is one item which appears in your weekly paper, under the heading, Pastor Russell's Lecture Bureau, for which I thank God, and as long as you, Sir, publish that sermon of Pastor Russell's I will have one dollar to pay, in advance, for your weekly issue. And I say in all kindness and sympathy that your Minnesota subscriber is simply judging Pastor Russell by himself, for he knows very well that if he said what Pastor Russell says that he, himself, would be a wolf in sheep's clothing, and that of the deepest dye. And as for being the Pastor of Brooklyn Tabernacle, which, he says he is not, we will leave that to the Tabernacle congregation to answer. He says that he was born in Ontario. 'Poor Ontario!' I am sure that he needs the citizen papers he speaks of, alright. The war has changed his mind, and he would not send troops out of Canada. The war might change more than his mind if no troops went out of Canada. Of what use would his Munro Doctrine be to Canada; too bad that he is not at the head of Dominion affairs. He wishes to ask about Ireland and so well he might, for it is quite evident that he knows nothing about Ireland. I wish to inform your Minnesota subscriber that there is no religious persecution in Ireland. Every man is free to serve God as he sees fit, as far as the Government is concerned, and if there is any famine or starvation it is because the people spend their money for something else than food, and who ever heard of the Limerick treaty? I wonder what it is like. Please, Mr. Dalton, tell us. I want to say that the Home Rule bill passed by the present Government is a good thing for Ireland. Of course there is no Munro Doctrine in it, but nevertheless it will satisfy the Irish people.

But, enough of this, Mr. Editor. Your Minnesota subscriber needs to learn a little about Canada, and Pastor Russell, and black sheep, and Ireland, and Home Rule, but, of course, he is one, and it takes all kinds to make a world. Please, Mr. Minnesota subscriber, think it over a little more next time, before you say anything.

Please, Mr. Editor, let this appear in your next issue.

Yours very truly,
James Gregg,
Leduc, Alta. R.F.D.

BACKACHE

WAS SO BAD

COULD NOT SWEEP THE FLOOR

For backache, lame or weak back one of the commonest and most distressing symptoms of kidney inaction there is no remedy to equal Doan' Kidney Pills for taking out the stitches twitches and twinges, limbering up the stiff back and giving perfect relief and comfort to all poor, suffering women who suffer so much from a weak lame back.

Mrs. Blackburn, R.R. No. 1, Fish burn, Alta., writes: "I take pleasure in writing you stating the benefit I have received by using Doan's Kidney Pills About three years ago I was terribly afflicted with lame back, and was so bad I could not even sweep my floor I was advised to try your kidney pills Before I had used one box there was a great improvement as my back was much better. However, I kept on taking them until my back was completely cured. I highly recommend these pills for lame back."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50c per box, or 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

When ordering direct specify "Doan's."

A Bar To Progress

Truths That Genuine Christian Scientists as Well as All Sincere Followers of Christ Should Remember

The following has been handed in with the request for publication in the Examiner:

For the guidance of members of Christian Science, their Manual teaches that—

"They should daily watch and pray to be delivered from all evil, from prophesying, judging, condemning, counselling, influencing or being influenced erroneously."

Unreasonable criticism and complaint darken one's dawning sense of spirituality and stunt one's own growth in Christian advancement. The children of Israel were brought through the water on dry ground, but up to that time, although Moses proved to the people that God was leading them, they were afraid to take the next step because they could not see how God could lead them over that expanse of water. And when Moses would have cried unto the Lord because of all the doubt and fear, God said, "Wherefore criest thou unto me?' speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward." To stand still with a sense of lack and limitation does not give one a sense of progress, but rather just the opposite sense and the complaint will be voiced that he is not making a demonstration over the false claims arising from lack of understanding.

Miriam and Aaron criticized Moses, who had risen to a higher plane of thought than they themselves had done, and they were punished for their sin and foolishness, but the whole congregation were at a standstill until this thought was healed, and no progress was made until the error was eliminated from the camp. This should teach us to avoid the mistake of criticizing and condemning others, who may possibly have risen to a higher plane of thought than that which we ourselves have attained. It is the complaining and limited thought which leads one to criticize and thus bring himself and others into darkness."

There is no error that can withstand "the universal solvent of Love" (Science and Health, p. 242), and there can be no truly Christian Science service which has not this Love as the dominant theme.

We read in Science and Health p. 466) that "God selects for the highest service one who has grown into such a fitness for it as renders any abuse of the mission an impossibility. The All Wise does not bestow His highest trusts upon the unworthy. When he commissions a messenger, it is one who is spiritually near Himself."
—Communicated.

LIBERAL PROFITS ON WAR ORDERS

25 Per Cent. Net Trade on Order For 600 Million Cartridges

In figuring profits on orders that are being received in practically unlimited amounts by American companies which can manufacture munitions of war, a New York financial journal says that a more liberal margin may be allowed than on any such business ever done before.

Orders are probably all firm, namely, not subject to cancellation in the event of the war ending at an early date. There is no reason why they should be taken on any other basis, for all the ammunition that any company can turn out in over a year can be sold firm

The U. S. Cartridge Co., for instance, took an order from the British Government for 600 million cartridges — more than it can turn out in a year—under an agreement that Great Britain could have shipments stopped at the end of a year by paying the company the profit it would make on the undelivered balance.

One who has been in touch with the figuring of prices on one of the largest recent shrapnel orders says that the allowance made in that case by the Company's experts was for 25 per cent. net profit over and above liberal cost allowances. The total cost of new machinery installation necessary for manufacture on large scale was charged at a round outside figure against the purchaser. For that reason the total profit is expected to be over 25 per cent. on the order.

THOUSANDS ARE AILING FROM CONSTIPATION

The commonest cause of appendicitis is constipation. Every doctor says so. When you require physic, don't use a cheap drastic pill—get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are made from the private formula of one of the greatest physicians. Dr. Hamilton's Pills strengthen the stomach, regulate the bowels and prevent any tendency to appendicitis. In one day you feel the tremendous benefit of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. By purifying the blood and cleansing the system they prevent headaches, lift depression and drive away weariness. No medicine so successful as Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Sold everywhere in 25c. boxes, with yellow cover; get the genuine.

Shrewd Shoppers will find this season's D & A & La Diva Corsets compare more favorably than ever with imported ones.

The war tax adds about fifty cents on every dollar to the cost of imported corsets, yet adds nothing to their merit.

Hundreds of thousands of the best dressed women in Canada have for years been buying the D & A and La Diva Corsets which give perfect satisfaction. They are sold everywhere.

THERE ARE MORE young looking women to-day past 40 than there ever were. Gossard Corsets claim their share in helping older women to look young. Wear Gossard Corsets. They lace in front.

WE MAKE all size window shades to order in all qualities at very moderate prices and make them right.

TO MAKE your curtains and draperies look their best and hang correctly, you must have the new rods. We sell all the "new kinds" at very little prices.

NOW IS THE TIME for you to replenish your supply of underclothing. We carry all styles and shapes in any weight you could possibly mention—all cotton, all wool, part wool and cotton, part silk and wool, lisle, balbriggan, porous knit, mercerized and silk, all sizes. A special feature is that every garment is a first quality and will fit perfectly.

DON'T YOU THINK your hall would look more furnished with a pretty Persian stair carpet on the stair? Plain hardwood stairs are very cold and bare looking as well as noisy and much harder to walk up and down than when carpeted. We show many designs and colourings in new stair carpets at very reasonable prices.

THOSE NEW "Buttons" that are so hard to get—"we have them" in our well assorted stock. Suit, dress, waist and trimming buttons in dozens of designs and colourings. All the new styles and at the prices you want to pay.

YOU MAY BE interested to know that the Hall store has just received the new Khaki Wash Suiting, for boys' Summer suits and ladies' wash suits. It comes in three weights and widths and is marked to sell at per yard 28c, 25c and 35c.

WE DON'T SIMPLY make Draperies but we make designs to suit each individual window. Ask our experts to suggest a design for your window.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

Commission Will Visit Each Town Once a Year

Mr. J. O. Flavelle Chairman of the New Central License Commission Thought it a Duty to Accept Post—Liquor for Soldiers

CANNOT SATISFY ALL

Speaking of the exclusion of clause twelve from immediate operation which leaves the veto power in the hands of the Government and also leaves with the Provincial Secretary's Department the issuing of the brewers and wholesalers' licenses and the collection of the five per cent. tax on bar receipts, Mr. Flavelle, chairman of the new Central License Commission, said he believed it would be rather a help instead of a hindrance to the commission. It was feared that when the licenses are issued on the first of May by the present commissioners there might be some licenses issued of which the Government did not approve. While the new commission could not take away a license without showing cause for its action the Provincial Secretary could, if he saw fit, take away a license without giving any explanation. In this way the Government would be able to deal in short order with licenses which are issued without sufficient justification by commissions just going out of office.

Mr. Flavelle declined to talk in his official capacity as he said the commission did not come into being until May 5, and he had not yet met his conferes. He said that he was in favour of the three-fifths' majority for the carrying of local option. His reason for his attitude he said, was [illegible] Act.

Not Afraid of Criticism.

Mr. Flavelle is not afraid of newspaper criticism as long as they do not hit below the belt. A man occupying a public position such as the one he has been called to, must expect criticism. Mr. Flavelle said that he had accepted the position of chairman he felt that it was his duty. He had been asked by the Government which represented the people to serve them and he did not feel that he should decline, although his selfish interests might have dictated such a curse. While he said he was not a wealthy man, the salary had not been an inducement, although he did not believe that men should be asked to give their time to the people without proper remuneration.

Liquod For Soldiers.

Mr. Flavelle naturally declined to discuss the question prohibiting the sale of liquor to soldiers.

The work of the commission, he expects, will take up the best part of eight months out of the year, and will necessarily mean a great deal of travelling, as they will have to visit all the county towns at least once a year and held what will be virtually a court. They will have to spend several days in their sittings in the larger centres.

Cannot Satisfy All.

Mr. Flavelle said it was hopeless to attempt to satisfy both the liquor people and the so-called temperance cranks. He hoped he did not belong to the latter class, although he had always been an active temperance worker. He could say nothing as to the staff which the commission would have, as they were all to be appointed by the Government. He expressed the opinion, however, that many of the men now in the service would probably be retained.

Jail Breaker Is Still at Large

Police Have Been Asked to be on Look-out for Fred Kelley.

The police have received a wire from Orillia to be on the look-out for a man by the name of Fred Kelley, who is wanted at Orillia for breaking jail. Kelley is described as being of slight build, about 25 years of age and wearing a grey coat with a black velvet collar. Also wearing a grey peak cap. He is clean shaven.

INTERESTING CASE IN COUNTY COURT

Will be Heard Next Week—Suit For $1,500—Dynamite Cap Exploded.

A special sitting of the County Court will be held on Tuesday, April 27th, when the case of White versus Thompson and Jordan will be heard. William White has entered an action on behalf of his son, Wesley White, to recover damages to the extent of $1,500 and costs for personal injuries said to have been sustained by Wesley White when he entered upon the land owned by Jordan and found some unexploded dynamite caps, one of which exploded, with the result that White lost two fingers and a thumb of his right hand, and suffered other injuries. It is alleged that Thompson was employed by Jordan to undertake some rock blasting on his land, and that he negligently left some unexploded dynamite caps lying around, knowing the land to be frequented and alluring to children. The accident occurred on May 17th, of last year. The child who was injured is between six and seven years of age. Both parties to the action reside near Campbellford.

The Cause.

"Dear me! Poor woman!" said Gaddes, reading his morning paper. "It says that Mrs. Gidde has just lost her husband."

"Really?" cried Mrs. Higglea. "What was it —— typhoid or appendicitis?"

Claim Against Bennett Estate

To the Extent of $490 With Interest —Case in Surrogate Court.

William H. Walkey of Peterborough is being sued as executor of the estate of the late William James Bennett of Otonabee by Mary Head, who claims the sum of $490, with interest, from the third day of August, 1912, for services rendered to deceased dating from the first day of September, 1911, to the third day of August, 1912. Compensation is fixed at ten dollars per week.

The case will be heard in the Surrogate Court.

Site for Sewerage Disposal Plant

Will Come Up For Consideration on Friday, April 30th.

On Friday, April 30th, the Provincial Board of Health will deal with the question of a site for the sewerage disposal plant that is to be installed by the city some time within the next year or two. The site, as selected in Otonabee, is objected to for various reasons, so that it will remain for the Provincial Board of Health to adjudicate upon the matter. Both the city and [illegible] ships will be represented.

School Arbitration Goes Against Hastings

Difference of Opinion Over Question of Taxation—Will Take it to Minister of Education.

HASTINGS, April 23.—An arbitration board composed of Inspectors Lees, East Peterborough; Boyes, East Northumberland, and Messrs. Bert Boyes, John Brackenridge, and B. F. Doxsee met in the Council Chamber here in regard to the changing of the boundaries of the Hastings school section, or rather in regard to adjacent territory in the adjoining townships, which were included in Hastings for school purposes.

A number of residents of Percy had requested to be transferred from Hastings to Percy for school taxes, and had been assessed by the Percy assessor for that purpose. The Hastings board objected hence the arbitration. The Hastings board also requested that some territory adjacent to the village which had once been in this section be returned. The finding of the board was against Hastings.

It is understood that the matter is to be taken to the Minister of Education.

ORGANIZING THE TRENT VALLEY DISTRICT

Meeting of Hydro Radial Supporters to be Held in Belleville—Peterboro' to be Represented

The appended letter has been sent out by Mr. T. F. Matthews. It refers to the meeting that is to be held in Belleville on Tuesday, May 11th, when matters concerning the developments of the Hydro Radial Scheme will come up for consideration. All the municipalities in the district have been asked to send delegates.

The letter reads as follows:

"The Hydro-Electric Railway Association of Ontario is an Association formed for the purpose of developing a system of railways in the Province of Ontario, owned by municipalities, and constructed and operated for them by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, under the Hydro-Electric Railway Act. The railways are intended to benefit the farmers by giving them more ready and cheaper access to markets, and supplying them with electric power for use on farms adjacent to the lines, and to benefit the urban communities by placing them in closer touch with the producers.

At the last meeting of the Association the Province was divided into a number of districts, one of them being the Trent Valley District comprising the Counties of Frontenac, Lennox Addington, Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Peterborough.

A meeting of representatives of the municipalities in this Trent Valley District will be held in the City Hall Belleville, on Tuesday, the 11th day of May, 1915, at 1.30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Every municipality in the district is requested to be represented by one or more delegates. The matter of the organization of the district, or of its division into two or more districts, and other matters of importance will be brought before the meeting for consideration.

Western Ontario is being rapidly organized to have radial electric railways constructed, and Eastern Ontario should take immediate action in order not to be left behind. Permit me again to urge that your municipality be represented at the meeting in Belleville.—T. F. Matthews, Vice-President, Trent Valley District."

Peterboro' Girl Taken to Shelter

Will be Kept There Until Prospective Employer Arrives.

CHATHAM, April 23.—A 15-year-old girl from Peterborough arrived in Chatham on her way to the home of Wilfred Seaman, Chatham township. In some way Mr. Seaman failed to meet the girl and her predicament was brought to the attention of the Children's Aid authorities. She was taken to the Shelter on Park Avenue and will be kept there until Mr. Seaman can be notified of her arrival.

The Business Girls' Shower Successful

The Members and Their Friends Responded to Call for Sheets and Towels for Wounded Soldiers.

Sixty-three sheets, eighty-seven towels, and six wash cloths, besides $20.37 in cash, was the result last evening of the "Sheet and Towel Shower" by the Business Girls' Club of the city for one of the Hospitals at the front. The Y.W.C.A. gymnasium took on a gala appearance for the occasion, being decorated with flags by Messrs. J. J. Turner and Sons and the Peterborough Floral Company sent flowers. Two of the members of the club ably filled positions as Red Cross nurses.

The following very interesting programme was rendered:

Piano Solo—Miss Florence Gladman.
Recitation—Mr. Lynch (encored.)
Vocal solo —Miss Florence Emmerson.
Recitation—Miss Georgie Mowat.
Violin Duet—Misses Lora Logan and Edwina Palmer.
Speech—Dr. Moir.
Solo—Mr. Douglas Carlisle.
Speech—Dr. Frederick.
Piano Solo—Miss Ruby Carr.

The young ladies have some cash to spend now and they were very much disappointed when none of the merchants of the city were present last evening.

The thanks of the Business Girls' Club are extended to Mr. Reg. Turner for an illuminated sign which he placed in the "Y", to Mr. J. M. Greene for the use of his Edison Diamond Disc phonograph, which he kindly loaned for the evening, and also for hemming the sheets, to Mr. Hetherington of the Peterborough Laundry for laundering the sheets, to the Peterborough Floral Co. for flowers, and Mr. Ed. Reid for cartage, as well as the Y.W.C.A. for use of the gymnasium.

ULTIMATUM TO AUSTRIA?

Italy is Reported to Have Sent a Final Demand

ROME, April 23.—A report reached Rome from Petrograd yesterday to the effect that Italy had sent a note to Austria, which virtually amounted to an ultimatum. The note is said to embody the minimum terms upon which Italy will consent to conclude an agreement with Austria. It is impossible to confirm this report here.

General opinion in Rome is that an agreement may still be reached. Nevertheless military preparations are being continued with the greatest energy along the frontier, where Austria is concentrating troops.

In connection with the approaching departure from Petrograd of Michel de Giers, the newly-appointed Russian Ambassador to Italy, newspapers of Rome comment upon the fact that M. de Giers will make visits at Bucharest, Roumania, and Nish, Serbia, on his way to this city, but will pass through Sofia, Bulgaria, without stopping. This is interpreted as a possible indication of a lack of good feeling between Russia and Bulgaria.

Word has been received from Ancona that an Austrian aeroplane was seen Wednesday night scouting the Italian coast along the Adriatic Sea. The aeroplane was equipped with strong searchlights. The authorities are attempting to identify the aeroplane.

Italian transatlantic liners have been ordered to cease running in order that they may be available for naval purposes, and agents have been ordered to refund all passage money.

The Compagnia di Navegazione Generale Italiania states it has been informed by Swiss agents that the steamer America, which should have left Genoa on April 20 for New York, was prevented from sailing, owing to instructions from high quarters.

British Troops Go Ashore At Enos In The Aegean

Frankness of Government Regarding Forces on Continent Gives Rise to Belief That Supreme Effort Against Germany Will Begin at Once—French Marine Minister Meets Churchill.

LONDON, April. 23.—The London Daily Mail's Sofia correspondent, in a despatch dated Tuesday, says:

"Fugitives from Enos say that following a bombardment by the allies, the British landed a force at Enos, and the Turkish commandant ordered an evacuation of the port."

Enos is Turkey's most southwesterly port on the Aegean Sea. It lies just in the east of the new boundary line between Turkey and Bulgaria, and is 12 miles southeast of Dedeagatch, Bulgaria.

The story of the landing is in part confirmed by Berlin reports and by a report from Salonika.

A despatch from Paris says: The best means for hastening the passage of the Dardanelles by the allies' warships was one of the principal subjects of a conference yesterday between Minister of Marine Augagneur and Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty. The conference was held in the north of France.

On his return to Paris M. Augagneur told a representative of the Havas Agency that the public would be wrong in thinking that the operations in the Dardanelles had been suspended.

"The French navy," M. Augagneur added, "never has thought that the straits could be forced without long preparation, but it has always believed, and is more than ever convinced, that the undertaking is perfectly feasible, and before long the object so ardently desired will be attained."

M. Augagneur said the general naval situation of Great Britain and France was in every way very favorable.

The frankness of the British Cabinet Ministers in making known the number of men at the front and the reports that reach London from various sources have convinced the people that at last the big effort against Germany and Turkey is about to commence. Both in the Aegean and North Seas there are signs of increasing activity. From to day all steamboat communication with Holland is stopped by order of the British Government.

The text of the Admiralty report follows:

"All shipping between Holland and the United Kingdom is stopped for the time being. No ships will leave the United Kingdom for Holland after to-day. Ships from Holland will not be admitted to the United Kingdom after to-day.

"It is hoped shortly to resume limited cargo and passenger traffic. Special arrangements have been made for the transfer of mails."

Taken in connection with the news from Berlin that British submarines have been in the Bight of Heligoland, where the German Admiralty lays claim to having sunk one and perhaps more, this is believed to foreshadow some movement in the North Sea; while there is no longer any endeavor to hide the fact that a big Anglo-French force is prepared to go, as Gen. d'Amade, the French commander, has said, "to any point where it is required."

THE KAISER IN ALSACE

German Emperor Reviews Guard and Visits Vosges Trenches

GENEVA, April 23. — Emperor William during the last few days has been visiting the German battle front in Alsace. Near Muhlhausen his Majesty reviewed the Prussian guard, which fought at Hartmannswellerkopf, and from Colmar he visited the trenches in the Vosges Mountains. At Strassburg the Emperor promoted Col. Reuter, of Zabern fame, to the rank of major-general.

The Emperor had no receptions and the newspapers were prohibited from mentioning the movements of the imperial party.

Trains arriving at Basel from Germany since Wednesday are many hours late. French aviators have seriously damaged the main railroad line near Strassburg.

The German Government has transported 2,200 more French maimed officers and men to Constance, where they are waiting to be exchanged for German wounded. Then they will return to France by way of Switzerland.

Guarantee Fifty Dollars a Month

Local Red Cross Society Will Give Supplies and Money.

At the regular meeting of the Peterborough Branch Red Cross Society it was decided to guarantee $50.00 a month in supplies and cash to the proposed base hospital to be given by the Peterborough Medical Association to the government. This branch of Red Cross has sent an average of $100 per month, as well as a large bale of supplies, to the headquarters in Toronto since last September. Mrs. F. L. Roy is treasurer, and the Branch hopes the public will give all possible help to their Tag Day to be held on Saturday, May 22nd.

Rural School Course In Peterboro' County Schools

Will be Taken Up During the Summer Months by Representatives of the Department of Agriculture—Forty-five Schools Interested.

Peterborough county representatives Miles and McDowell, of the Department of Agriculture, have a large programme before them for the summer months in connection with the rural school course in agriculture. The work is to be taken up in forty-five schools in Peterborough county, and about one thousand pupils will be engaged. The potato war plot idea is getting with much favour and about four hundred children will grow plots of potatoes this summer. The rural school course in agriculture has rapidly spread over the province and it is gratifying to note that our county is not behind in this movement. Three years ago the course was started in Peterborough county with only eight schools and now forty-five schools are enrolled. This is a splendid advance, but no more than the work merits. To long the curriculums in our schools has been lop-sided with no attention paid to the particular study of agriculture which is the vocation that the majority of the rural pupils follow. Indeed we would like to see the movement extend to the village schools, where doubtless many pupils would be anxious for the privilege of learning something of Canada's basic industry, and the results might be the inducing of quite a number to choose such as their life's work. Whether the movement will be thus extended or not, it is as it now stands, deserving of our heartiest support. The rural school boys and girls of our county now growing up must be equal in their standards to those of other counties, and it should be our pride to see that it is so. Parents will appreciate it in after years, while the teachers and representatives will be thankful now for the assistance you can and ought to give them in their efforts.

CALGARY, April 23—A heavy fall of snow Wednesday interfered with the horse show, but delighted everybody, as it will furnish moisture needed to start pastures growing and furnish additional moisture for grain.

Peterboro' Girl Going to India As Missionary

At the meeting of the Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church held yesterday afternoon the following foreign mission appointments were confirmed: Dr. W. H. Colwell, of Toronto University, and Dr. C. M. Scott, of Queen's, both as physicians to India; Rev. C. S. Donald, of Knox, missionary to India; Dr. S. H. Martin, of Queen's, a native of Newfoundland, to Korea; Miss Agnes Dulmage, of Toronto University, whose home is in Palmerston, but who is at present teaching in the High School in Midland, to Formosa as evangelistic missionary; Miss Ada Ross, B.A., of Toronto University, and of this city, to Honan, China, as evangelistic missionary; Miss Helen Millar, of Toronto, also to Honan as evangelistic missionary; Miss Mary Hugill, of West Toronto, to South China as educational missionary; and Miss Helen Shearer, of Peterborough, to South China as a nurse.

The party will leave Canada in the autumn.

Did Not See Gen. Hughes

Mayor Butler and the Reporters Were Ready for Him at Station

Examiner Special:

Major-General Sam Hughes was to have passed through Peterborough yesterday afternoon and a deputation composed of the Mayor, several aldermen, a number of physicians and newspaper men gathered at the C.P.R. station, only to be disappointed by not getting a chance for an interview with Canada's War Lord. It had been intended that the physicians would consult the Minister of Militia in regard to the hospital scheme, but a 'phone message was received from him that he was going to Lindsay via the Millbrook-Omemee line. This news did not reach all the doctors or the rest of the deputation, hence their appearance at the station.

Picture of Late Lieut. Galaugher for the Club

Mr. Fred Heaslip, Secretary of the Belmont Club, has received a group picture of the officers of No. 1 Battalion of the first Overseas Canadian Contingent, including the late W. N. Galaugher, who was a member of the club for several years. Lieut. Galaugher was shot at the front a few weeks ago. The picture was received from England, through Mrs. Fred Howarth.

CAREFUL DOCTOR.

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

Some truly scientific physicians recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist—and, as a last hope, sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually began to have colour in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food."

LONDON, April 23.—Lord Beresford, who has been embarrassing the government through the nature of his criticism of the lack of severity to the Germans, will launch a new campaign next Wednesday. It was announced to-day that he intends to demand of the Prime Minister whether England is paying the Krupps a royalty under the iron-clad agreement made previous to the war of a shilling each for the right to use the Krupp patented shell fuses. He will ask if money is being set aside for payment after the war. He will also demand how much is owing the Krupps on the expenditure of ammunition at Neuve Chappelle alone.

SOME GROUND LOST

LONDON, April 23.—The military critics, after analyzing the French and German official statements to-day admit that it is apparent that the British troops were compelled to give some ground in Belgium, but at other points made splendid gains. Apparently the Germans acted very determinedly against Ypres but their local success will not likely compensate them for the loss of hill sixty and there is no occasion whatever for British anxiety.

BUSY ON WARSHIPS

LONDON, April 23.—The ship building yards around the coast of Great Britain are more and more engaged on warship construction, and the output of mercantile vessels is thereby decreasing. At the Barrows works of Messrs. Vickers Limited, an increasing number of girls have been employed in the various departments recently. An army of them now pass in and out of the works daily.

TRADE UNIONISTS FOR SERVICE

OTTAWA, April 23.—The Trade Unionists in Canada have supplied 3,498 men for the Canadian overseas forces up to the end of January of the present year, together with 417 British army reservists, who returned to join their regiments, making a total of 3,915 members of Canadian Trades Union organizations who have gone to the front.

The Death of Dr. Geo. J. Potts

Is Reported From Clinton—Was Formerly Coroner of Peterboro' County.

CLINTON, April 23.—The death occurred yesterday of George Jerrald Potts, M.D., M.R.C.S., formerly of Toronto and Belleville, in his eightieth year. Dr. Potts was for some time editor of The Toronto Daily Leader, the organ of the Conservative party in Ontario in the days of the Sandfield Macdonald Ministry. As a young man, he joined the Canadian Militia and later he saw considerable active service with the British Imperial forces. He was surgeon to the British Consulate in Siam when the Indian mutiny began, and was ordered to India, where he served till the close of the troubles there. He then went to China with the Anglo-French expedition and witnessed stirring scenes in that campaign. Having resigned from the British service he joined the United States Federal forces and served through the Civil War with the rank of Surgeon-Major, being appointed by President Lincoln himself. At one time he was coroner of Victoria, Northumberland, and Durham counties and later of Peterborough county. He had travelled in nearly every country in the world, and was a Freemason of high degree.

He is survived by three sons and two daughters, Macdonald T. Potts, Secretary of The Journal, Portland, Oregon; Murray C. Potts of Victoria, B.C.; Mrs. Chas. Clarke, Victoria, B. C.; Miss Jessie Potts and Rev. Jerrald Potts of St. Paul's Rectory, Clinton, where his death occurred.

The funeral service will be held at St. Paul's church, Clinton, on Sunday at 4 p.m., interment at St. James' cemetery, Toronto, on Monday.

Appeal Dismissed With Costs

Decision of His Honour Judge Hoycke Was Sustained---Appellant Can Continue Drilling Operations

The appeal against the decision of His Honour Judge Hoycke, which was given in the County Court on Wednesday, March 31st, in the case of William Edwards versus James Edwards, of Otonabee, was dismissed with costs in Osgoode Hall this morning.

The case concerned an action to recover the sum of $122.50 as costs alleged to have been incurred in the drilling of a well on a farm in Otonabee, which is owned by Mrs. Dickson and leased to James Edwards. The action was dismissed without costs and without prejudice to the plaintiff, William Edwards, who is at liberty to go ahead and continue drilling operations under the terms of the alleged contract. The pump which was put in the well, it is said without the consent of the defendants, will be returned to the plaintiff. This figured in the claim to the extent of $50.00. The remaining $100 represented the cost of drilling a fifty foot well at two dollars a foot.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted for William Edwards, and Mr. J. E. L. Goodwill for James Edwards.

Paving Being Destroyed.

Chief Thompson Was First Witness Called

him to hatred, contempt or ridicule, or designed to insult him, contrary to the Criminal Code."

The article objected to was published in the Review on Monday, April 5, 1915.

At 12.45 p.m. an adjournment was made until 3 o'clock, p.m.

Chief Thompson went into the witness box at the opening of the hearing and his cross examination was not finished when the case was adjourned for lunch.

The Chief testified that after the publication of the article in question, in the Review, he had been approached by a number of prominent citizens who condemned it and who expressed themselves as being of the opinion that such an article should not be allowed to go out to the public about the Peterborough Police Department without proof of its truth. Among those who had taken occasion to discuss the subject with him were Messrs. Roland Denne, R. Winch and Rev. J. R. Webb.

The Chief said he had received some complaints about conditions at Brock Street Rink from some parties residing on Brock Street, but though he had detailed men in plain clothes several times he failed to get any evidence of anything improper going on there.

Several times convictions had been secured for rowdyism and improper conduct of me on Brock Street, in the vicinity of the rink, but some of these convictions had any connection with the rink.

Mr. Ruddy brought out some of the history of the Police Department during the time Mr. John Meharry was a constable, and also operated the rink. The Chief had made an objection to the Police Commissioners allowing Meharry to be in business at the same time he was in the pay of the city as a constable. At that time there was no rule in the Department regulations to deal with this matter, but the Chief was successful later in having the permanent rules of the Force provide that a policeman could not be engaged in any business.

The Chief will be in the witness box again when Court resumes at 3 p.m.

PETERBORO BOY INVALIDED HOME

Arrived in the City This Morning — Has a Brother With Mounted Rifles

Private William McKnight, 694 Concession Street, has been invalided home. He arrived in the city this morning after an uneventful passage across the seas. Private McKnight was a member of the 57th detachment of the first Canadian Contingent. While at Salisbury Plain he contracted what was diagnosed as influenza and for some time was confined to the hospital. He remained behind when the contingent moved over to France, and together with a number of others was invalided home. A brother, Private McKnight, is with the Mounted Rifles, Ottawa.

Around the Theaters

THE TIZ-IT.

The Trey O' Hearts is continuing after a brief lapse resulting from the big fire in Toronto which destroyed $75,000 worth of films. This serial will be seen as usual at the Tiz-It. A big three-act Warner feature entitled "The Follies of Youth" is one of the best films seen at the Tiz-It this spring. In addition there are several good comedies, "The Big Stick" and "Heinie's Outing," the latter featuring Max Asher a leading movie comedian.

THE EMPIRE.

Edward Abeles is back at the Empire in "After Five," an interesting comedy based on the play of the same title. Theodore Roberts and Betty Ewing are included in the cast. Ted Ewing, a young New Yorker, is the guardian of Nora Hildreth, with whom me is in love. He invests her fortune of $60,000 and an equal amount of his own money (constituting almost his entire property) in a stock exchange speculation. When this speculation apparently fails he seeks to reimburse the girl by taking out a life insurance policy in her favour and then killing himself. But, as the policy had a clause invalidating it in case of suicide, he has to arrange an "accidental death" for himself, and, to this end, enters into an arrangement with the chief of the S. S. S., a blackmailing society which has already threatened his life.

The humorous complications really begin when it develops that the money has not been lost but doubled, so that Ted, instead of wishing to die, has every reason imaginable for wishing to live. It is, however, almost impossible to break his sworn pact with the S. S. S. and his own Japanese valet, to whom he gave the money to pay for his death, refuses to divert the money from the one use to which it has been pledged.

The manner in which Ted manages to escape from his own plots against his own life, and the details of his romance with Nora form the concluding episodes of this highly amusing photodrama.

AT THE ROYAL.

The feature film at the Royal is a recently released two-part drama. "The Shanty of Trembling Hill," showing Francis X. Bushman. This is an Essanay production, adapted from the story in Munseys' magazine. The list of comedies includes a lon laugh, "Cabman Kate," with Kat Price in the lead, and 'Onthe Ros to Reno." The vaudeville at t Cow an and his posing dogs. he pres agent call it a 'Marvel of Canine Art and it is a really clever act wit splendid looking white setters. Thi feature has a special appeal t children and all dog fanciers. Th programe is bright and attractive fo the week end.

A Proposal From the West

Comes to Mayor Buller in the Form of a Communication—Labour Situation in Peterboro' is Improving.

Mayor Buller has received a message from the Mayor of Winnipeg drawing attention to the seriousness of the unemployed problem in Canada at present. Every city, said the message, is face to face with an acute situation, and immediate steps will have to be taken to provide work for the large body of men that have been unemployed during the winter months.

It is proposed to hold a conference of Mayors of the various towns and cities in the Dominion in Ottawa to consider the problem, and Mayor Buller was asked to express himself regarding such a conference.

His Worship stated to-day that while Peterborough has not been seriously affected by the unemployed question dring the winter months he finds there are a large number of able-bodied men who are seeking employment.

The paving of Hunter Street will provide work for a number of unemployed. This, together with a number of other works that are contemplated, will do much to alleviate the situation. Mayor Buller is not over enthusiastic about the Winnipeg Mayor's proposal.

A Letter From The Trenches

Pte. C. Mongour of Peterboro Writes to his Parents.

Mr. A. Mongour, 414 Dublin Street, has received a letter from his son, Pte. C. Mongour, who is at the front with the 57th detachment in the 2nd Battalion. Writing on April 4th, Pte. Mongour says: "We are getting lots of work to do. I've told you we've been in the trenches several times, and we have been pretty lucky so far. I guess you have heard about Sergeant Victor of the 57th getting wounded. The Germans spotted him and turned a machine gun on him and fired seventeen shots. The eighteenth shot caught him in the hip and fractured the bone.

You would laugh if you could see our lot. We were billeted in a barn, and the man kept several hens, but he didn't get many eggs while we were there. The fellows would wait till the hen laid and then make a mad rush for the egg. We don't have a bad time of it. It was a bit rough and cold when we first came here, but now the warm weather is coming we don't mind it so much. They gave us about three spoons of rum at night and the same in the mornings, in the trenches. If we hadn't have got it we would have frozen, and I tell you it warmed us up a bit. It wasn't very nice to take but we had to take it. We don't get any out of the trenches. While in them we get biscuits (army ones) and cheese, a bit of jam, and some tea to make, but we had to go about a mile for water. That was nothing when you're hungry and thirsty. We get bread once in a while. It is a treat to get some chocolate. Don't forget to send me some. You can't get chocolate around here; it is just like chewing brick dust.

STRAWBERRIES AND TOMATOES AT—PER

New strawberries at 25 cents a box, and new tomatoes at 25 cents a pound, are fruit and grocery store specialties received this week in the first fairly large quantities. The quality is said to be exceptionally good, and the price naturally arises out of the long haul and border tariff. Those who can afford them will find these and other new goods most appetizing after the somewhat monotonous fare of winter.

"No-Hit" Game Pitchers' Aim
List of The Distinguished Ones

When Rube Marquard pitched that no-hit game against Brooklyn at the Polo Grounds on Thursday last he did something which is the ambition of every pitcher who ever twirled in the major leagues. It is no easy task and a no-hit game in the major leagues to-day is a deserving credential for admission to the baseball hall of fame. Is is a more difficult task to pitch a no-hit game nowadays than it was years ago. Batsmen, while they don't hit any harder and in many instances not as much, are smarter and tickier. The feat is performed occasionally in the minor leagues.

In the list of no-hit games in the major leagues in the past dozen or more years, it is a significant fact that four of the Giant pitchers have realized this ambition. Mathewson stands unique among the National League pitchers as being the man to pitch two no-hit games. He pitched the first in 1901 against St. Louis and again in 1905 he twirled a no-hit game against the Chicago Cubs.

George Wiltse, the veteran southpaw, who is now manager of Jersey City, pitched a remarkable game against the Phillies in 1908, when he travelled 10 innings without allowing a hit. Big Jeff Tesreau got into the charmed circle of pitchers in 1912 in Philadelphia when he shut out the Phillies. Red Ames pitched against Brooklyn for nine innings in the opening game in 1909 without allowing a hit, but he lost the game in the tenth inning.

"Nap" Rucker of Brooklyn, who pitched against Marquard when he made his record on Thursday, has a no-hit game to his credit. In 1908 Rucker didn't allow Boston a single hit. Last year the performance of young George Davis, the Collegian of the Boston Braves, when he pitched a no-hit game against Philadelphia, was a remarkable piece of pitching for a novice.

"Smoky" Joe Wood of the Red Sox, of course, is among the no-hit pitchers. Wood pitched his no-hit game against St. Louis in 1911. Big Ed Walsh pitched a no-hit game against Boston in 1911, while Chief Bender, formerly of the Athletics, let Cleveland down without a hit in 1910. Two members of the Chicago White Sox team, Scott and Benz, both have no-hit games to their credit. Benz pitched his classic against Cleveland in 1914, and Scott pitched his against Washington last season.

Earl Hamilton of the St. Louis Browns pitched a no-hit game against Detroit in 1912, while George Mullen, the former Detroit twirler, made a no-hit game record for himself against St. Louis in 1912.

One of the great pitchers of the present-day game who has never been able to pitch a no-hit game is Walter Johnson, the Washington speed king. It is difficult to understand why Johnson has never been able to get within the charmed circle. He has come very close to it a number of times, but has [illegible] that little bit of base-ball luck which helps out on such momentous occasions.

Yesterday's Games In The Big Leagues

NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Philadelphia, April 22—Philadelphia defeated Boston in the opening game of the National League season, here, to-day, by a score of 8 to 4. Alexander and Hess battled for seven innings with the score even. A muff by Cravath enabled Moran to score in the eighth. Then the home team rushed five runs over the plate on five hits, two stolen bases, a base and errors by Gowdy and Hess. The score:

| | R | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Boston | 0 | 1 | 0 |
| Philadelphia | 0 | 1 | 0 |

Batteries—Hess and Gowdy; Alexander and Killifer.

Dodgers Beat Giants.

Brooklyn, April 22—Brooklyn opened its home season with a 4-to-4 victory over New York, batting Marquard out of the box after Rucker had met the same fate earlier in the game. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| New York | 0 | 6 | 2 |
| Brooklyn | 6 | 11 | 0 |

Batteries — Marquard, Ritter and Meyers; Rucker, Dell and Miller.

Pirates Downed Reds.

Pittsburg, April 22—Pittsburg opened its home schedule to-day with an 8-to-2 over Cincinnati. Timely hitting by the Pirates and steady pitching by Adams, brought defeat to Cincinnati. Douglas was knocked out of the box in the third inning. Brown, who succeeded him, was hit hard also. Catcher Clarke was spiked in the left foot when Wagner slid home in the fifth inning. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cincinnati | 2 | 9 | 2 |
| Pittsburg | 6 | 9 | 0 |

Batteries—Douglass, Brown, Dale, and Clarke and Wingo; Adams and Gibson.

Cubs Lose to Cards.

St. Louis, April 22—Errors by the visitors and bunched hits off the opposing pitchers helped St. Louis to win the opening game of the local National League season from Chicago this afternoon, 9 to 5. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Chicago | 5 | 5 | 3 |
| St. Louis | 9 | 9 | 1 |

Batteries—Vaughn, Standridge and Bresnahan; Meadows, Doak and Snyder.

AMERICAN LEAGUE.

Cleveland, April 22—Cleveland lost its opening game to Detroit, 5 to 3, a bad inning for Mitchell allowing Detroit to bunch four hits with the pitcher's own errors, producing four runs. With Hagerman pitching, Detroit scored another in the ninth on Cobb's single and Veach's double. The game started in the rain, which ceased after three innings were played. Score:

| | R | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Cleveland | 3 | 7 | 2 |
| Detroit | 5 | 9 | 0 |

Batteries: Mitchell, Hagerman and O'Neill; Dubuc and Baker.

Murphy Made Costly Error.

Boston, April 22—The Red Sox won in unexpected fashion from the Athletics to-day, 7 to 6. Victory came in the ninth, with two men out, two runs needed to win and Boston runners on second and third. Wager popped an easy fly to Murphy, playing third base for Philadelphia. The ball dropped plumb into his hands, and out again. With it went the game, as the two runners scored. Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Philadelphia | 6 | 15 | 6 |
| Boston | 7 | 9 | 0 |

Batteries: Wyckoff, Shawkey and Meloy; Shore, Comstock and Cady.

Highlanders Lost at Home.

New York, April 22—The New York Americans opened their home season here to-day by losing to Washington by a score of five to one. Shaw, the visiting pitcher, was wild, but the Yankees could not hit him with men on the bases, their only tally being Boone's homer. The Washingtons made their hits count against McHale and Brown, and took advantage of the locals' errors.

Mayor Mitchell started the game by throwing out the first ball. Score:

| | R | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Washington | 1 | 11 | 0 |
| New York | 0 | 4 | 3 |

Batteries—Shaw and Henry; McHale, Brown and Sweeney.

White Sox Won in Ninth.

Chicago, April 22. — A thrilling ninth inning batting rally produced five Chicago runs and brought a five to four victory over St. Louis after six straight defeats in the opening of the American League season here to-day. In the ninth five hits off Wellman, including triples by Roth and John Collins, and a passed ball, tied the score at four. Lowdermilk took up the burden then and the second ball he pitched to Weaver was a wild pitch, on which J. Collins dashed home with the winning run. Williams' home run in the third followed two bases on balls and caused Jasper's retirement. Score:

| | R | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| St. Louis | 4 | 8 | 0 |
| Chicago | 5 | 6 | 0 |

Batteries — Wellman, Lowdermilk, and Agnew; Jasper, Faber and Schalk.

LAWN BOWLING

MILLBROOK, April 23.—The annual meeting of the Millbrook Bowling Club was held in the Council Chamber. Mr. John Dawson, president, was in the chair. Plans were discussed and arrangements made for a brisk season's play. Election of officers resulted as follows:

President—John C. Kells.
Vice-President—Robt. Deyell.
Sec.-Treas.—G. W. Sayles.
Match Committee—S. E. Eakins, John Steele, H. B. Allen.
Membership Committee — R. J. Doak, W. S. Given, R. Deyell.
Management Committee—Thos. Miller, R. Deyell, T. H. Bradley, S. E. Eakins, G. W. Sayles and W. S. Given.

MR. LALLY LEAVES LACROSSE WITH LOCAL FRIENDS OF GAME AND BOYS

Joe Lally left last night for Lindsay and Orillia, feeling quite satisfied that there are warm supporters of lacrosse here who will advance the game if any opportunities are offered. He arranged with Mr. H. P. Morgan to handle lacrosse sticks. Mr. Morgan offered to provide the school boys with sticks, but Mr. Lally strongly urged him not to take this step.

Speaking to an East City man, he said: "If you ordered 100 dozen lacrosse sticks, which I knew you intended to give the boys who might take up the game, you wouldn't get a single stick — not from me. If we can't get boys to play lacrosse with the old spirit of their fathers we don't want them at all. Give a boy a lacrosse, hockey or baseball outfit and he will not take care of it. Experience has proved this time and time again. When we were young we bought our lacrosse sticks and took care of them, but to-day there is a tendency to pamper the boys. Let them buy their own sticks or gloves, make a sacrifice if necessary to that extent, and they will take proper care of them."

Mr. Lally said he had met Mr. Mowat, public school inspector, and had secured permission to visit the schools. With Mr. Carson, of the Y.M.C.A., and Dr. Sutton, he visited the South Central yesterday morning, giving the boys a little talk on moderation in sports and reasons why they should play lacrosse. In conversation with several of the principals it was decided not to visit every school, but to let the whole matter rest with the teachers. Some of the men in touch with boys who are understood to be interested in lacrosse are: Mr. Carson, Geo. Robertson, Bay Best, Morris Park, S. J. Keyes of the Normal School, Mr. Colling, Mr. Voaden and others.

In the afternoon Mr. Lally called on Rev. Father Phelan, who played lacrosse until his seminary days, and still retains a liking for the game. It is likely that any lacrosse movement among the Separate Schools will be inaugurated by the Total Abstinence Societies. The school grounds are very limited in extent, and the societies are to decide next week what they will do for utilities among the boys and young men.

Why It Was.

Here are the particulars why the Middlesboro' v. Oldham game on 3rd inst. was prematurely stopped:

The game was stopped by the referee soon after change of ends, when Middlesborough were leading Oldham Athletic four goals to one. Cook, of Oldham, fouled Carr, and Tinsley scored from the resultant penalty kick, but when five minutes later Cook again fouled the same player, he was ordered off by the referee. Cook, however, refused to go, though urged to do so by his captain, and the referee, after giving him a minute in which to leave the field, stopped the game.

A New Ranger.

Glasgow Rangers F. C. announce that they have secured the transfer of Andrew Cunningham, of Kilmarnock. Cunningham, who plays either inside left or inside right, is a Scottish International. The transfer fee, which has not been divulged, is stated to be the highest ever paid by a Scottish club for a Scottish player.

PANAMA PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

A trip to California will afford the traveller an infinite variety of attractions. The C. P. R. is ticketing passengers via Chicago, and the many routes thence to San Francisco returning via Vancouver and their own Line, or passengers can go via C. P. R. and return via Chicago. The quick trains to Chicago via the C. P. R. and the Michigan Central have the most modern C.P.R. equipment, so that everything necessary to make travelling comfortable is assured. In addition to the visit to Chicago passengers can travel via Omaha and Denver, or via Kansas City. The route via Salt Lake City or via Williams, whence the Grand Canyon of Arizona is visited, can be chosen. The Orange groves at Los Angeles and San Diego are well worth a visit at this season of the year, and the Coast Line to San Francisco can be taken through Santa Barbara and Monterey. San Francisco is an interesting City, but probably the Exposition is the greatest attraction at the present time. Of the numerous buildings the Americans and all visitors claim that the Dominion of Canada is the handsomest and most attractive, while the exhibits from all over the world are interesting. A visit to Victoria and Vancouver, thence through the Canadian Rockies, is the most magnificent of all railway journeys, while the Company's hotels, which are built in the most attractive spots, have everything that the traveller can desire.

the effects. The actual inoculation did not prove as severe as was expected, and very few of the boys were ill, though there are many sore ars in the outfit this morning.

Anticipation.

The left section get theirs on Friday, and the tales or horror told by those who have been inoculted have the men of the left section in a state of delightful anticipation. Every time a left section man appears on the scene, those who have been inoculated immediately take sick. Men fake faints, and are doing the best they can to give the uninitiated a good time.

The boys are all tickled with the possibility of leaving for England shortly, or are working hard to be ready when called.

Dr. Frederick Accepted.

TORONTO, April 22.—Lieut.-Col. Edmund E. King has received the acceptance by Ottawa of the selections made from Ontario doctors for service in the Royal Army Medical Corps of the Imperial Service. Ontario's contribution consists of thirty-five experienced medical men who are liable for immediate service anywhere in Europe. The doctors selected will enjoy the rank of lieutenants while in the service.

Those who have been selected include Dr. E. F. Frederick, of Peterborough.

It is understood that Dr. Frederick will go to the front shortly, and may possibly be transferred afterwards to the Peterborough Base Hospital.

The Barriefield Camp.

Kingston, April 22. — During his visit of inspection here to-day Hon. Sam Hughes confirmed the announcement that Barriefield camp would open on May 15th, with these overseas units: 38th Battalion, Ottawa; 39th Battalion, Belleville; 8th Regiment, C.M.R., Ottawa, and Universities Company, Montreal.

Lindsay, April 22.— Major-General the Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia and Defence, with his aides, arrived here by special train this afternoon. He was met by the local detachment of the 45th Regiment and the men who are mobilized here for the third contingent. The procession headed by the band of the 45th Regiment, proceeded to the Armoury, where the men were reviewed by the General, who congratulated them on their efficiency. He said they were required for active service and would soon leave for the front, and he felt certain that they would distinguish themselves.

Early yesterday morning the 8th Mounted Rifles issued forth from their barracks at Lansdowne Park and entered upon the first stage of a Field Day. The men, accompanied by a soup kitchen, marched to Hog's Back, where tactical manoeuvres were carried out during the entire day. Dinner was sent out at noon by transport. The entire regiment, save those on duty at the barracks, attended the outing. Lieut.-Col. Munro was in command.—Ottawa Journal.

Peterborough Man Led.

The following are the results of the shooting by the 21st Battalion at Kingston: Team shoot, M. G. and signallers, total 1,026, 1st prize, of $18; Depot and H.Q.S., 869, 2nd prize of $12; No. 3 company, 928, (disqualified—infringing rules); No. 2 company, 861, disqualified.

No. 3 company total points, 719. Individual shooting, Corpl. Milby, of Peterborough, total points 108, 1st prize, $3.50; Pte. East, 95, 2nd prize, $2.50; Corpl. Copt, 93, 3rd prize, $2.

Four prizes at $1.50 each—Sergt. Maj. Gilbert, 92; Pte. Manners, of Peterborough, 90; Pte. Cudders, 90, and pte. Lynch, 87.

Six prizes at $1 each—Pte. Withroy, 87; Q.M.S. Scott, 87; Pte. Endersby, 85; Pte. Ingram, 85, and Pte. Comego, 85.

Lieut. J. Erroll Boyd of the Queen's Own Regiment, has been transferred to the Royal Flying Corps of the Imperial Army and has sailed for England. He is a nephew of Mr. W. H. Dunford, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Commerce, and a grandson of the late Martin Dunsford of Peterborough.

Corp. G. Harris, 195 Park Street, of the 8th C. M. R., who has been home on leave, returned to Ottawa on Thursday.

A SATISFACTION TO U. S. A.

U. S. military men find gratification in the fact that the country is able to supply munitions of war so expeditiously. It is a revelation of their possibilities, they say, should a similar need be felt at home.

LOCAL MAN APPOINTED

ST. THOMAS, April 22.—R. M. Hinman, of Peterborough, has been appointed assistant in the Elgin branch of the Department of Agriculture at Aylmer. Mr. Hinman succeeds Stanley Vanevery, who resigned and returns to his farm in Welland.

Resided in Peterboro' Over Seventy Years

Mrs. John King One of the Reported Heirs to the Van Vliet Millions Came to Peterboro' When Little Girl of Four Years.

One of Peterborough's oldest continuous residents passed away at the family residence, 610 Bethune Street at 8.45 o'clock last evening in the person of Mrs. John King, aged 75 years, after an illness of a few months' duration.

She is survived by her husband, one brother, Mr. Mark Spenceley, one sister, Mrs. Chatten, of this city, also one son and seven daughters.

The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock from the late residence, 610 Bethune Street, interment in Little Lake cemetery. Rev. R. G. Peever will conduct service at the house at 2.00 p.m.

The late Mrs. King was born in Yorkshire, Eng., 75 years ago, the eldest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Spenceley. When she was four years of age she emigrated to Canada with her parents, brothers and sisters. Her father paid five pounds each for the children's passage and seven pounds for himself and Mrs. Spenceley. The pioneer family arrived at Rice Lake after a stage journey from Port Hope. They proceeded up the Otonabee river to the straggling hamlet at Peterborough, making the trip on a scow. Arrived here, Mrs. King's father placed the remnant of his savings in the Robert Nicholls bank. His deposit was 25 sovereigns.

After forty years' residence in Canada, Mr. Spenceley passed away on July 12th, the anniversary of his arrival in Peterborough. He was always an active member of the Orange Order and was in the first parade held in Peterborough. In the early days the women also participated in the parades. Fifty-four years ago Mrs. King walked with her husband. There were not more than twenty in the procession on that long day ago.

stricken with pneumonia and when she recovered she was troubled with rheumatism, which seriously crippled her in her latest years. Mrs. King was never out of Peterborough three months altogether during the past 72 years. She saw the city grow practically from its rudest outlines to a well laid out city. She remembered the first doctor here, the first factory, the latter Jonathan Newton's woollen mill on the site now occupied by G. Walter Green's plant.

Mrs. King was mentioned as one of the heirs to the Van Vliet fortune, which has not yet been officially apportioned.

ENTERTAINMENT AT ST. JOHN'S SCHOOL

Notwithstanding the rain of last evening a considerable number of enthusiasts attended the variety entertainment given at the school house of the Anglican church of St. John, by the members of the Young Men's Bible Class, assisted by some of the members of the Women's Bible Classes.

The programme consisted of vaudeville sketches, combined with instrumental and vocal musical selections.

The chair was taken by Mr. F. Soward who, after an overture, played by Miss E. Pollard and Mr. Hartshorn, announced that the proceeds arising from the entertainment would be devoted to the St. John's Athletic Club which, from figures quoted, appeared to have come out very well last season in their sports.

The performers all appeared to do their level best in their respective roles. It would be invictious in an amateur performance to specialise any names; suffice it to say that their endeavours met with hearty applause.

In the sketch "Honesty is the Best Policy," it certainly appeared that there is still some truth in the old proverb, although, now-a-days it seems to be largely considered that honesty is a stock paying but very small dividends.

The following was the programme submitted to the audience:

Overture.
Piano and violin selection— Miss E. Pollard and Mr. F. Hartshorne.
Song, "The Veteran's Song"—Mr. E. V. Morphet.
Sketch, Nice Quiet Morning—Young Men of Class.
Recitation—Mr. J. John.
Song, "The Deathless Army"— Mr. Hartshorne.
Selection—Piano and violin.
Sketch, "Honesty is the Best Policy"—Ladies and Young Men's Classes.
Song, "The Sentinel"—Mr. T. Ward.
Specialty Act—The Hartshorne boys.
Song (comic)—Mr. C. Coleman.
God Save the King.
Accompanists—Miss E. Pollard and Mr. F. Hartshorne.

HOSTILE DRIVE IN EAST EXPECTED SOON

Canadians Bore Brunt of The Fighting in Recent Drive

HINDENBERG EXPECTED TO COMMENCE NEW OFFENSIVE SITUATION REMAINS UNCHANGED

Lull in the Carpathian Campaign—Czar Decides to Establish the Finnish Army on its Former Basis

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 24.—Only scattered action along the great eastern battle front of 1,000 miles was reported in the official news from Petrograd and Vienna last night. Field Marshal von Hindenburg's expected new offensive movement, whether it is to be from Cracow eastward across Galicia or southward in Poland from the East Prussian frontier, has not yet materialized. That such an offensive, however, may not now be long delayed is indicated by the following despatch received yesterday from Berlin and transmitted with the approval of the German censors:

'The headquarters bulletin issued to-day again says. 'The situation in the east is unchanged.' The report from the Russian front has been in this exact wording every day for a fortnight. It has been several weeks since any fighting between the Germans and Russians has been reported, but various indications point to a resumption of activity in the eastern theatre of the war shortly. Just what form the new campaign will assume or in what locality of the long front it will be staged is one of those mysteries which von Hindenburgian strategy is so accomplished in masking, even from the Germans, and speculation regarding it and concerning the present whereabouts of the Field Marshal can be heard in every coffee-house and beer garden.

GERMANS BUILDING DEFENCES.

"The latest Russian newspapers, received in Berlin to-day, report that the Germans are busily engaged in fortifying in the vicinity of Suwalki and Augustowo. It is asserted that they have completed two strong lines of entrenchments on the eastern side of the swamp belt, which is presumed here to indicate that it is the German intention to remain on the defensive before the East Prussian frontier.

"Heavy spring rains are falling in the Carpathians, making aggressive operations in this region most difficult. The reports from correspondents in the Carpathains generally are to the effect that important movements of Russian troops are taking place behind the Russian front, indicating that the Muscovites are making new dispositions of their forces to meet an unexpected German blow or to launch a new offensive."

The Russian official statement last night says that "nothing of great consequence' happened during Thursday, and that on the whole there is no change in the situation in the eastern war theatre. It is announced, however, that part of the enemy's position on Hill 1,001 has been taken by assault, and that a hostile offensive immediately undertaken to regain the lost ground failed everywhere, the Russians repulsing the Austrians and Germans with enormous losses. Hill 1,001 represents the highest altitude in the Carpathians where fighting has occurred so far. The Russians still are below the level of the French in the Vosges, where operations are proceeding at a height of over 1,200 metres above sea level.

'The general situation is unchanged," also is the summing-up statement of the Austrian official report, though it is claimed that the Austro-German artillery secured the mastery over Russian big guns at several points in the mountains. Vienna states that quiet reigns in the region of the Uszok Pass, to the east of which, it is asserted, a strong vantage point has been wrested from the Russians.

The Copenhagen correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph says it is stated that the Emperor of Russia has decided to re-establish the Finnish army with the same constitution as pervious to 1905. It is said that the Emperor will take this action on the advice of Grand Duke Nicholas, commander-in-chief of the Russian forces, who has been impressed by the brilliant strategic work done by Finnish officers serving in the Russian army during the present war.

"A strong column of Russian cavalry again has invaded East Prussia ws' Petrograd correspondent, "and laws' Petrograd correspondent, 'a'nd is threatening the German's left flank."

TUMULT UNSPEAKABLE IS RAGING ROUND HILL NO. 60 BOMBARDMENT IS TERRIFIC

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

LONDON, April 24.—A correspondent of the Daily News sends the following from Northern France:

All throughout Thursday tumult unspeakable raged around Hill No. 60. For many hours we hung on grimly against the most terrific bombardment ever experienced. The Germans brought the whole of their heavy artillery to bear upon the hill. It was nothing more nor less than a sheet of flame and fury, shattered and smashed and spurting flame and blinding dust. It was more like what one would imagine a volcanic crater in full eruption to be than anything else, was the description of one observer.

Yesterday afternoon the battering was deafening and the view of everything near and far obscured by blinding dust and whirling smoke. Some ideas of the tumult and terror of these hours may be imagined when it is stated that the major in charge of the battery section of our men had to shout his orders to the gunner standing at his side through a megaphone and even then it is doubtful if the gunner heard.

Our infantry, our best shots, drawn from many regiments, fought lying prone on their faces. There they lay for hours in open, fighting until their rifles got too hot to hold, but they would not give in.

Their courage and their staying power amid all this hell were sublime. Shrapnel burst over them continually, and hundreds were wounded in the back. Still they fought, and wherever there was a chance of a charge or a slight rush forward they took it with magnificent nerve.

Aeroplane warfare was continued, and the enemy, flying high over the hill, flung hundreds of incendiary bombs upon our temporary entrenchments. By nightfall Hill 60 was a spectacle undescribable. Thousands and thousands of shells had been rained upon it.

BOBMARDMENT WITHOUT PARALLEL.

The Daily Mail correspondent telegraphs as follows:

"The second battle of Ypres," he says, "is in progress, and the front is beginning to extend on both wings. The Germans have made strong outflanking movements from the south ridge to the north, and Ypres itself has been bombarded much more violently than at any other time during the war. The thunder of artillery has been so overwhelming that even seasoned soldiers have found it difficult to keep clear wits.

"The Germans are thought to be using their big 16-inch guns and 'Jack Johnsons' trained almost exclusively upon Ypres. The aeroplanes on both sides have been active to an almost unexampled degree in connection with the definite action and co-operation of the engaged troops. The clearness of the air is supreme and the wind is no more than sufficient to clear away the smoke of the heavy guns. Some of the incidents of the battles of the rival aircraft would be worth a long description on a less crowded day.

"The battle does not show any immediate sign of ending. It seems certain that the Germans have brought up supports from parts of their lines further south as well as from rest camps located a considerable distance behind the lines.

'Throughout the attacks and counter-attacks in the fighting the quality of our men has never been more conspicuous. The Germans have pressed their attacks with an impetuosity to which they have been strangers during the last three or four months.

"The vigor of their onset is the measure of the importance of the ridges which fringe an almost unbroken plain fifteen miles deep."

"OVERSEAS CONTINGENT WAS OUTNUMBERED AND WAS FORCED TO GIVE WAY" SAYS WRITER

Took Important Part in German Drive Across the Yser Canal—Prevented Enemy From Penetrating Main Anglo-France-Belgian Line

SPECIAL MORNING CABLE:

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, Eng., April 24.—The Canadian contingent bore the brunt of the fighting in the latest German drive across the Yser Canal, according to an announcement by the war office to-day. The "overseas" contingent, outnumbered and forced to give way, covered themselves with glory and admittedly saved the day, preventing onrushing Germans penetrating the main Anglo-French Belgian line. They lost very heavily, the war office admitted, but their conduct is praised in the warmest terms.

When the Germans charged forward positions along the line from Steenstaate to Langemarck, the Canadians were forced to fall back in order to avoid complete annihilation. Outnumbered and subjected to bombardment by enormous German guns that threw explosive shells and shells filled with most deadly gases, the Canadians fell back on their main supports, abandoning four of their guns. Reforming under fire they developed a surprisingly strong counter attack, recapturing the cannon and taking many German prisoners, including one colonel.

The Canadians then withdrew step by step, fighting hard over every inch of ground. They took with them all their guns and supplies, finally making a stand at an agreed on point, until their supports reached the scene. The fighting along the line from Ypres to the junction of the canal and the river continues with unabated ferocity. The Germans are bringing up heavy reinforcements and are plainly endeavouring once again to hack a way through to the sea. The ground over which the fighting is progressing is low and it is almost impossible for troops to take cover. In consequence losses on both sides are admittedly the heaviest since the original fighting of last August.

Gen. French has sent reinforcements to the scene and every effort is being made to check the German offensive.

The Germans had plainly been preparing for the present assault for several days. Many of their troops who are now engaged are Prussians of the first line who have been withdrawn from Von Hindenburg's army on the East Russian front.

They are well supplied with artillery, including heavy field guns and great Austrian automobile guns. It is reported that many of the members of the Kaiser's personal staff are at the front along this new battle line, which is held to indicate the importance the Germans are attaching to the fighting.

The statement of the war office to-day admits that the Germans were able to take the Steenstaate Langemarck lines, but does not give any details of the new battle line.

One Sinking And the Other Is On Fire

LONDON, Eng., April 24. — The Danish steamer "Helmsmarch," which arrived in the Tyne, to-day, and reported having sighter the Norwegian bark Oscar in a sinking condition, and the Norwegian bark "Eva" on fire in the North Sea, says both crafts are believed to have fallen victims to German submarines, and the fate of the crews is a mystery.

THE HAGUE, April 24.—Holland, dissatisfied with the German position assumed in connection with the sinking of the steamer Zevenbergen, has asked the German Government to reopen its investigation.

Trainman Finds $15,000 in Gems

Lady Had Lost Bag of Jewels in Her Travels

GARDEN CITY, L.I., April 23. — Mrs. Eugene A. Philbin, wife of Justice Philbin, of the Supreme Court, left a bag containing $15,000 worth of diamonds and other jewels on board a Long Island train when she alighted here. The jewels were in a bag, which she did not miss until she reached the Garden City Hotel. County and house detectives set out at once to find the jewels, as Mrs. Philbin was not sure that they had been left on the train.

Walter Breck, a ticket collector, saw the bag just as the train pulled into Hempstead. He opened it and was amazed at the contents. Purposing to turn it over to the lost and found department of the railroad in Brooklyn, he took a train leaving Hempstead at half-past four o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Philbin asked the train crew if they had seen the bag when the train passed through this place, and Breck returned the bag to her, receiving a reward of $50.

HIGHER WHEAT PRICES QUOTED

CHICAGO, April 24—Wheat prices advanced quickly yesterday owing to Liverpool reports that supplies there were not meeting requirements. Argentine offerings were said to be very small, with prices for India cargoes rising, and already as high as $2.03 a bushel.

According to a leading authority no European country and yet purchased a normal quota. After opening 5-8 to 2 cents up, the market here scored fudther gains, re-acted sharply, and then resumed a moveemnt up grade.

One Toronto Entry For "Leipsie Fair"

LONDON, April 23 — Although the latest date for entries from Canadians was extended for 40 days for the coming "Leipsic Fair" here, only one entry has been made, it being from a jewelry manufacturer in Toronto. The fact that the only exhibit at the fair will be of china, cutlery, jewelry and fancy and light goods, largely rules out Canada as a considerable exhibitor. The fair is likely to become an annual institution, but London and Birmingham are quarrelling as to which will have it.

FOR THE KIDNEYS

A Guaranteed Treatment. Money Back If It Fails

Kidney diseases are more prevalent than is generally supposed, and are not always recognized as such. What was at first but a slight derangement of the kidneys often results in indigestion, rheumatism, anaemia, chronic and very painful headache, neuralgia, eye weakness, and other diseases of a most aggravating type. Therefore it is highly important and absolutely necessary that the kidneys and the urinary system be kept in an active and healthy condition.

After a thorough experience with the most successful forms of kidney treatment, we are confident that the one remedy which embraces the most desirable, safe and efficacious curative qualities, so necessary to the successful treatment and positive eradication of kidney diseases in general, is Rexall Kidney Pills.

We are so positive that Rexall Kidney Pills are unexcelled, and that they will do all we claim, that we sell them with our own personal guarantee that they shall not cost the user a cent if they should fail to give entire satisfaction.

We particularly recommend Rexall Kidney Pills, for kidney ailments that resist ordinary treatment. We believe, if taken according to directions with regularity and persistency for a reasonable length of time, they will positively remove all symptoms and effect permanent relief.

Surely we could not more strongly demonstrate our faith in Rexall Kidney Pils, and our generous guarantee should convince the most sceptical that we would not dare make such a statement except we know what we are talking about. We urge you to try Rexall Kidney Pills at our risk. Price, 50c per box. Sold in this district only at our store,—The Rexall Store.

What Cures Eczema?

We have had so many inquiries lately regarding Eczema and other skin diseases, that we are glad to make our answer public. After careful investigation we have found that a simple wash of Oil of Wintergreen, as compounded in D. D. D. Prescription, can be relied upon. We would not make this statement to our patrons, friends and neighbours unless we were sure of it — and although there are many so-called Eczema remedies sold, we ourselves unhesitatingly recommend D. D. D. Prescription. All druggists have D. D. D., 25c, $1.

Drop into our store to-day, just to talk over the merits of this wonderful Prescription. Ask also about D.D.D. Soap.

Further Indications of "Certain Liveliness in the North Sea"

LONDON, April 24.—Further indications of "a certain liveliness in the North Sea" were forthcoming from various sources yesterday, and London continues in a state of expectation of a naval battle. A Berlin despatch gives the following statement issued by the German Admiralty:

"The German high seas fleet recently has cruised repeatedly in the North Sea, advancing into English waters, without meeting the sea forces of Great Britain."

So far there has been no comment on the foregoing from British official quarters.

Unconfirmed reports from Blyth and other points on the northeast coast, telling of a Zeppelin cruising over the country, are connected here with German naval activity rather than with the idea of another aerial raid. It is thought likely, of German airships are in the vicinity of Great Britain that their mission is one of recommaissance in connection with fleet movements.

A report from Rome last night declares that the commanders of all Italian naval squadrons are being instructed to put to sea as soon as sealed orders, despatched by special couriers, have been delivered to them. It is stated also that sailors in the Italian navy have been warned against mentioning the movements of their ships in letters.

ANOTHER TRAWLER SUBMARINED.

The Grimsby trawler St. Lawrence was torpedoed and sunk in the North Sea Thursday by a German submarine. Two members of the crew were killed. Seven survivors were dangled yesterday by the trawler Queenstown, whose skipper reports that the submarine fired on his vessel while engaged in rescuing the crew of the St. Lawrence.

The officers of a Danish steamer which arrived at Tyne last night report that on Thursday morning they encountered the Norwegian barques Eva and Oscar, the former on fire and abandoned and the latter in sinking condition with its boats missing.

"THE GRELL MYSTERY"

By Frank Froest

CHAPTER LIII.

With his mind revolving the strength and weakness of his theory, Heldon Foyle returned to Scotland Yard. He paused for a moment at the door of the night-inspector's room.

"Anything for me, Slack?" he asked. "Has Mr. Bolt come in? Ah, there you are, Bolt. Come down to my room." He led the way down the green corridor, the divisional inspector following.

"Well?" asked the superintendent sharply, as he seated himself in his office.

"I have seen the manager, a hall-porter and a chamber-maid at the Palatial, sir. They repeat what they said in their statements before. The Princess left the hotel at about ten o'clock. No one can fix the time precisely, but it was certainly not before ten. She made up her mind very suddenly, the manager tells me."

Foyle was rummaging with some papers. "Thanks very much, Bolt. Stand by in case I want you. Tell Slack if he hears from Mr. Green to ask him to leave things and come up to me."

He concentrated himself on the neat bundle of documents in front of him, and gave his mind with complete detachment to the study of several of them. The investigation had narrowed itself. Whoever was guilty was in his hands. The choice lay between Robert Grell, Lady Eileen Meredith, and the Princess Petrovska.

The reconstruction of the crime for the benefit of the Assistant Commissioner, Foyle had purposely made provisional, but he was becoming more than ever convinced in his own mind that, in spite of appearances, Lola was the person at the bottom of the matter. She had left the Palatial about ten. If, he argued, she had left Grosvenor Gardens immediately after the murder it would have been possible for her to get to the Palatial by that time and to immediately make arrangements to leave. But for all that his intuition told him he was right, he could see no way of fixing the guilt on her.

He placed the dossier back in a drawer and, lighting a cigar, paced up and down the room puffing furiously. Half an hour after midnight Green came in.

"Yes, it's worth trying," soliloquised Foyle aloud.

"What is, sir?" asked the chief inspector, stopping with his hand on the door-handle.

"Ah, Green. I was just thinking aloud. Everything all right in Berkeley Square?"

"Everything quiet, sir."

"Well, things have been happening since I last saw you. I want your opinion. Sit down and listen to this."

Green selected a comfortable arm-chair by the desk, while the superintendent went over his interview with Grell. The chief inspector made no comments until the story was finished. Then he sat in silent thought for a while.

"I've got faith in your idea, sir," he admitted at last. "It may be right as anything. But I am doubtful if we shall be able to get any admission from the Princess."

"One never knows," retorted Foyle. "She's not under arrest yet—only detained. We're entitled to ask her questions to see if she can clear herself. But our best chance is to take her off her guard. We might go along and wake her out of her sleep now and chance it."

. . . . . .

The Princess Petrovska had been allotted a couch in the matron's room of Malchester Row police station, partly to spare her the ignominy of a cell, partly to ensure that she should be under constant supervision. Her sleep was troubled, and she woke with a start when the matron roused her.

"You must dress at once. Some gentlemen are waiting to see you."

"Waiting to see me? Who are they?" she asked. Her nerves were still quivering, but her voice was steady and her face composed.

The matron had received her instructions. "I don't know who they are," she replied, in a tone that did not invite further questioning.

Lola, for all her iron will, found her mind dealing with all sorts of possibilities as she dressed herself mechanically. It was not for nothing that Foyle had chosen that hour for his visit. The sudden summons at such an hour, amid unusual surroundings and the speculation as to what it would be for, had upset the woman's balance.

She was taken by the matron into the same room where Grell had been questioned an hour before. Foyle and Green sat at the table and, to her imagination, there was something of judges in their attitude. A chair had been placed at the other side of the table facing them, and the lights were so arranged that while her face would be fully illuminated, theirs would remain in the shadow.

"Sit down, will you," said Foyle suavely, when the matron had gone, closing the door behind her. "We're sorry to trouble you at this hour, but matters of urgency have arisen."

She strove to read their faces as she seated herself, but the light baffled her. "I am quite at your disposal, Mr. Foyle," she said, hiding her uneasiness under an appearance of flippancy. "What do you want?"

The superintendent balanced a pen between his fingers. "Mr. Green has already explained that you are not under arrest," he said, in a quiet, cold voice. "We are detaining you. Whether you will be the subject of a grave charge depends upon your answers to the questions we shall put to you. You must clearly understand, however, that you are not bound to answer."

"That sounds serious," she laughed. "Go on, Mr. Foyle. Put your questions."

"Very well. Do you still deny that you visited Mr. Grell's house on the night that the murder took place? I think it fair to tell you that we have had statements both from Ivan Abramovitch and Mr. Grell that you were there."

He eyed her sternly. She made an expressive gesture with her white hands, and her rings sparkled in the electric light. "I'll not dispute it in the circumstances."

"You went there with Harry Goldenburg, your husband, in connection with a scheme of blackmail he had conceived. You were to get certain letters from him for Mr. Grell if you could?"

She bowed. "You are correct, as usual."

"Mr. Grell left the room for some reason, and during his absence you had an altercation with Goldenburg."

One slender hand resting on the table opened and clenched. She contemplated her finger-nails absently. "Oh, no," she said blandly. "We were always on the most amicable terms."

Foyle leaned over the table, his face set and stern, and gripped her tightly by the wrist. "Do you realise," he demanded, and his voice was fierce, almost theatrical in its intensity, "that you left your finger-prints on the hilt of the dagger with which you killed that man—indisputable evidence that will convict you?"

She shuddered away from him, but his hand-grip bruised the flesh of her wrist as he held her more tightly. He had timed his denunciation well. The strain she had put on herself to meet the situation snapped with the sudden shock. For a brief second she lost her head. She struggled wildly to release herself. His blue eyes, alight with apparent passion, blazed into hers as though he could read her soul.

The superintendent's hand opened. The storm of passion on his face died down. The woman, now with a full realisation of what her panic had done, was staring at him in an ecstasy of terror. Green was writing furiously.

It was Foyle who broke the stillness that followed. "That will do, I think," he said in an ordinary tone of voice, as though resuming a dropped conversation. "Have you got that down, Green? Mrs. Goldenburg"—he gave her her real name—"you will be charged with the wilful murder of your husband. It is my duty to warn you that anything you say may be taken down in writing and used as evidence against you."

A hysterical laugh came from the woman's lips. She flung her hands above her head and went down in a heap, while shriek after shriek of wild, uncanny laughter echoed in the room.

CHAPTER LIV.

The blaze of electric lights under their opal shades in Heldon Foyle's office became dim before the growing of the dawn. The superintendent, a cigar between his lips, was working methodically over half a dozen piles of papers. At the other side of the table Green puffed furiously at an old briar as he compiled from the documents Foyle handed him a fresh list of witnesses and their statements to be submitted to the Treasury solicitors.

All night the two men had toiled without consciousness of fatigue. Their jigsaw puzzle was at last righting itself. The fragments of the picture had begun to shape clearly. Their efforts had at last been justified. That alone would be their reward. The trial would show little of the labour that the case had cost—only the result. The hard labour of many scores of men would never be handled outside the walls of Scotland Yard. They had nothing to do with the guilt or innocence of the Princess Petrovska. When the case was handed over to the Treasury it would be entirely straightened out, and it would be for them to present the simple issue to the judge and jury at the Old Bailey.

Foyle flung away the remnant of his cigar, and drew out his watch. It was nine o'clock. Sir Hilary Thornton, who had heard of the woman's confession by telephone, might be expected at any moment.

"That ought to do, Green," said the superintendent, as he strung tape around the discarded bundles. "We'll have the lady brought up at the afternoon sitting of the court. That'll give us time to talk it over with the people from the Treasury. Yes, whis it?"

A man ha tapped and opened the door. Before he could reply, a slim figure pushed by him. Green rose to his feet and hastily pushed his pipe into his pocket. Foyle raised his eyebrows and stood up more slowly. Lady Eileen Meredith confronted them with wild eyes and pallid face. She swayed a trifle, an the chief inspector with a quick movement placed his arm round her waist and helped her to a chair.

"You are not well, Lady Eileen," slipping to her side. "Shall I do something?—send for a doctor"

She waved a slim hand in an impatient negative. "I—I shall be all right in a minute," she gasped. Her throat worked. "I wanted to see you, Mr. Foyle. I wanted to tell you—to tell you——"

Her voice trailed away in piteous indecision. Heldon Foyle whispered a few words to Green, who nodded and passed out. The superintendent took a decanter from a cupboard, poured something into a glass, and added some water.

"Drink this," he said sympathetically. "You will feel better afterwards. That's right. Now, you wanted to tell me something."

A little colour returned to the girl's pale cheeks. Her hands opened and shut convulsively.

"The paper—this morning!" she exclaimed incoherently. "It said—it said——"

Foyle rubbed his chin. "It said that we had detained a man in Sussex," he said encouragingly.

She pulled herself together a little, but her whole form was trembling. "It was Mr. Grell?" she asked eagerly.

He inclined his head in assent. "Yes, it was Mr. Grell."

Her face dropped to her hands and her frame shook. But when she raised her head she was dry-eyed. The emotion that possessed her was too deep for tears. She gazed in a kind of stupor at the immobile face of the detective.

"You have made a ghastly mistake," she said, and her voice was level and dull. "Mr. Grell had nothing to do with the murder. I killed that man. I have come here to-day to give myself up."

A twinkle of amusement shot into the blue eyes of Heldon Foyle. The girl, oblivious to all save the misery that enwrapped her, noticed nothing of his amusement. But his next words aroused her.

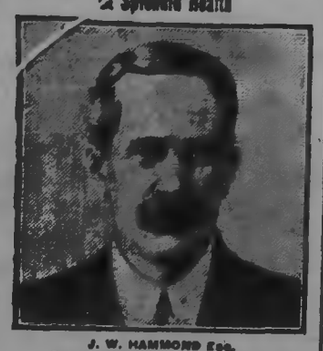
"Fruit-a-tives" Keeps Young And Old In Splendid Health



J. W. HAMMOND Esq.

SCOTLAND, ONT., Aug. 25th, 1913

"Fruit-a-tives" are the only pill manufactured, to my way of thinking. They work completely, no griping whatever, and one is plenty for any ordinary person at a dose. My wife was a martyr to Constipation. We tried everything on the calendar without satisfaction, and spent large sums of money until we happened on "Fruit-a-tives". I cannot say too much in their favor.

We have used them in the family for about two years and we would not use anything else as long as we can get "Fruit-a-tives".

Their action is mild, and no distress at all. I have recommended them to many other people, and our whole family uses them".

J. W. HAMMOND.

Those who have been cured by "Fruit-a-tives" are proud and happy to tell a sick or ailing friend about these wonderful tablets made from fruit juices.

Throngs Watch Surgeon Cut Off Truck Victim's Leg

Boy's Foot Held Fast by Automobile Chain, and Operation is Necessary.

NEW YORK, April 22.—With a silent, awe-stricken, and heart-touched gallery of more than 10,000 persons, forming a sort of amphitheatre about a surgeon and his operating table in the Delancey Street plaza of the Williamsburg Bridge, Seymour Richman, eight years old, was supported by several men while Dr. Lemorosa, of Gouverneur Hospital, amputated his foot. It had been crushed between the driving chain and the sprocket wheel of an automobile truck.

Although the police reserves were out, they had no disorder to contend with. Every heartbeat for the little fellow, who heroically bore up under the ordeal and who only asked, when told that the foot must be cut off at once, that his mother be sent for.

Every window in a hundred tenements was filled with the faces of women and children who looked down upon the spectacle, and the only noise in the crowd was the sighing and sobbing of these and children as they watched the surgeon work beneath a brilliant arc light at the corner.

Seymour and his brother Milton, ten years old, has been sent to Manhattan from Brooklyn on an errand by their mother and were starting back when they saw a large five-ton automobile truck of the New York Bedding Company turn from the Bowery into Delancey Street. They believed it would carry them across the Bridge to Brooklyn. They hopped on, but at Attorney Street, just before entering the Bridge, the driver, Samuel Weiss, started to turn south. The boys hurried to hop off. Milton went off the end safely, but Seymour jumped off the side. He struck against an automobile at the kerb, and bounded back against the truck.

He fell, and one leg went up in the air. It was that foot that was caught in the heavy driving chain of the truck and carried around into the small sprocket wheel which sends the power to the rear wheels of the truck. Weiss heard the boy's cries and stopped the truck, but by that time the crushed foot was at the farthest side of the wheel.

For a few minutes there was much excitement and shouting. While Policeman Namick telephoned for an ambulance another man called Hook and Ladder Company No. 8 from its station near there. For twenty minutes Lieut. Duane and Firemen Wall, Dow and O'Sullivan battered the chain with sledge hammers, but could not break it.

Little Boy is Brave.

All this time the crowd was becoming greater and the boy's pain more acute, but there was hardly a whimper from him. Finally Dr. Lemorosa told Seymour he must cut his leg off, and would give him something to deaden the pain. As he was applying the hypodermic injection, the boy sobbed:

"I'd like to have my mother come."

Some one hurried for the mother. While the surgeon worked Seymour's body was supported by Policeman Namick and the firemen, with Milton, the brother, standing by.

When finally the leg was off and the boy was in the ambulance, his mother arrived. She rode in the ambulance to Gouverneur Hospital, with Milton running alongside of the vehicle. At the hospital the surgeons said Seymour was likely to die, but that Dr. Lemorosa had done the best thing in such an emergency.

RED UNSIGHTLY PIMPLES ON FACE

Itching and Burning. Disfigured for a Time. Used Cuticura. Pimples Disappeared.

1756 Winnipeg St., Regina, Sask.—"I was troubled with itching pimples on my face for over three years. They were red and unsightly. They caused itching and burning and I used to scratch and irritate them. The breaking out disfigured me for a time.

"A short time ago I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after I had tried a free sample I could see a remarkable improvement. I washed my face with the Soap and then applied the Ointment two or three times a day. After using more Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment all the pimples completely disappeared." (Signed) Nicholas Koch, June 13, 1914.

With 32-p. Skin Book on request. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. D, Boston, U. S. A." Sold throughout the world.

Diamond Trade Is Hit Hard By This War

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 23.—"War has worked a greater disturbance in the production of diamonds than almost of any other commodity," says a bulletin just issued by the National Geographic Society. "Not only has the cutting of these gems almost ceased, but the largest diamond mines in the world have been shut down since last August. More than 90 per cent. of the annual diamond output comes from South Africa, from mines within the war area whose operation has been suspended. It is feared in Belgium that the Antwerp diamond-cutting industry has been ruined past repair; the Rue de Pelican has been deserted. In Amsterdam, the other great diamond-cutting and polishing centre, work has almost completely halted. The workrooms of London and Paris are reported to be as quiet as those of the Dutch.

"Diamond production is of considerable geographical localization. The stones were produced through the centuries in India, and many are still mined there, though few of this output leaves the country. Likewise, the diamond production of South America is of little importance in connection with the world's supply. South Africa is the great diamond source, and the greatest part of its product is purchased by the diamond syndicate, with headquarters in London, which takes the entire product of the De Beers Consolidated Mines, Ltd. This syndicate, through its centralized control of the diamond industry has been able to fix the world's prices for these rare gems.

"The machinery by which the nice balance between supply and demand necessary to the maintaining of diamonds in superior relationship to other commodities of life was devised by Cecil Rhodes. Many millions of dollars worth of these stones were taken each year at the mines near Kimberly, the Premier mine in the Transvaal, and the mines of German Southwest Africa. It is estimated that the total diamond production of the mines of South Africa has reached the enormous sum of $750,000,000. In a single year, 1913, the combined output of the De Beers and the Premier mines amounted in value to $57,000,000, while German Southwest Africa produced during the same year diamonds valued at $10,750,000. The United States takes the largest percentage of these gems.

"Some of the wealthiest houses in Europe are included among the managers of the Diamond Syndicate. A great amount of capital has been tied up in the quantities of stones held back from the market by the syndicate in order that prices might be maintained. There is, therefore, little cause for fearing that those who have the money and the desire to buy need feel the effects of a diamond famine. The diamond surplus from the years of peace will likely cover any demands which may be made during the wartime. The demand for diamonds in this country, according to experts, is remaining good despite the war, being about 85 per cent of normal.

"Diamond-production has been the backbone almost of oSuth African development. It has increased in importance from year to year, the outputs being limited practically only to the amount of capital which the European houses dealing in these precious crystals could afford to tie up in their purchase. In 1913, the mines of German Southwest Africa produced about 1,570,000 carats, and an Antwerp Syndicate which was formed for the taking of the whole of this production, failed. Just before the war a conference of all the leading diamond interests was called in London whose object was the adoption of plans for a better control of the ever-swelling South African diamond output."

BRIEFS FROM THE WIRES.

The report that Nursing Sister Richardson has died at the front from over fatigue is incorrect. A cable has been received at Ottawa stating that she is convalescent.

The large barns of D. Fotheringham, on the London road, Tuckersmith Township, were completely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The horses and cattle were saved.

In an endeavor to relieve the present unemployed situation in Winnipeg, the C.N.R. will, as soon as possible, place a large number of men at work on the main line in the west.

The Province of Nova Scotia, with the exception of the city of Halifax, is under provincial prohibition. The city came within an ace in the House of Assembly of being included in the prohibitory law.

A German submarine yesterday stopped a Dutch steamer in the Gulf of Bothnia, and examined her papers and cargo. Germany in this manner intends to keep a close watch on the traffic between Sweden and Finland.

A distinct earth shock was felt in Tacoma, Wash., at 10.37 yesterday morning from the smelter near Point Defiance to the southern limits of the city, 12 miles, and extending to South Tacoma. No damage was reported.

The North German Lloyd merchant ship Siaasa, 15,000 tons, has reached Tutuila, Samoa, and will stay there until the end of the war, according to a despatch to the U. S. Navy Department late yesterday from the naval station at Tutuila.

One of the best known educationalists in Canada died yesterday in Toronto, in the person of Dr. William Winslow Ogden. He was a member of the Toronto Public School Board for forty-four years, and a member of the Board of Education from 1906 to 1911, when he retired.

Well Spoken.

Mother—You know what a party is, don't you, dear? Doris (aged four)—Yes, mamma. A party is where you go and stay a little while and pass your mother back for some more and stay another little while and then go home.—Boston Transcript.

Tired Nerves

Since the days of Eve housework has been the drudgery of woman's life. It keeps her indoors, where the air is vitiated, and when the system gets run down the monotony of housework breaks down the nerves.

Why Healthy Communities Are Nearly Always Prosperous Ones

Wherever Human Beings Congregate Closely Together Undesirable Germ Life is Apt to Spread

Public health is economically one of the most important things with which a community has to deal.

Healthy communities are nearly always prosperous communities.

One of the first questions a prospective land buyer asks is: "Is the climate healthy?"

By this he means will his health be such that he can reasonably anticipate minimum disablement from attending to his work and therefore minimum financial lost time.

He means will his family enjoy the maximum of good health, thus saving cost of medicine, doctors' bills and loss of time and suffering.

Health concerns the community as a whole, it is one common ground upon which all may meet; because each man, woman and child when seized with communicable disease puts in jeopardy the health of every other man, woman and child.

Yet, we patronize barber shops which are unsanitary and unclean. We are careless in our milk supply, taking the dairyman's word for it that his surroundings are sanitary.

We passively accept dirty street cars where disease breeds rapidly. Even in church we are careless as to the spread of disease.

In simpler terms—wherever human beings congregate together in close proximity, undesirable germ life always carried by a percentage of them, are apt to spread to others.

The remedy?

By making the whole community clean by setting a proper standard of hygiene and by teaching all to follow it.

But of more importance than the enactment of laws or the promulgation of regulations is their enforcement. It is not the laws on the statute books that are of value, but the ones that are enforced.

Every thoughtful citizen should know what work the health department is doing and the extent of protection from disease that is being given to him and to those dear to him.

Such interest will in itself insure more efficient work, for the health department needs the interest of all intelligent citizens. It needs their moral support, their approval of work accomplished and at times their co-operation.

Every household should see that it does not spread disease to others, that it does not become a focus of infection, endangering the welfare of the community.

Nearly all sore throats are more or less contagious.

If you have a sore throat or if you are attending a person affected with sore throat take every precaution against spreading the infection. Your sore throat may be a simple affair, but some other person may become infected and develop diphtheria.

To Whiten the Skin

Oatmeal is excellent for softening and whitening the hands. Mix some finely powdered oatmeal with water and spread on the skin in a paste. As it dries rub off the flakes, removing the last traces of lukewarm water.

An oatmeal bag may serve the purpose if one does not care to rub the flakes directly on the hands. Pour some of the raw oatmeal into a silk handkerchief, tie the four ends together at the centre and rub the bag over the hands when they are washed. The skin will become cream white, if the oatmeal treatment is faithfully followed.

If the benzoin in the rinsing water for the case bath has caused small pimples to come out on the skin, it is evident that it does not agree with it. You may have employed too much benzoin in the water. Just a few drops are required, enough to make the water cloudy.

HOW TO TREAT PAINFUL CORNS.

Night and morning apply Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It acts like magic, kills the pain, cures the Corn, does it without pain quickly and surely. Use only "Putnam's."

To clean velvet and coat collars dip an old toothbrush or nailbrush into gasoline and rub the velvet lightly and briskly, and the dirt will disappear.
